Creative, Compelling, Curious

These are three qualities Beth brings to every project. She embraces the metaphor that leadership development is a journey. As a result she focuses on helping her clients establish ongoing development practices that will support them on that journey. She listens carefully and pushes her clients to explore their untested potential.

Client Comments

“Beth brings passion and creativity into every aspect of her work. She is a true partner, always working to understand our interests and bringing her own ideas to move us along.”

“We started out as a bunch of skeptics. Beth helped us identify our common interests and the unique talents we each bring to the group. The result was we were able to set a realistic course that felt doable. We left feeling grounded and inspired. And we had a good time!”

“Beth has a way of handing out new tools that you can examine and play with and before you know it, you’re coming up with new ideas.”

What I believe:

- A person who can tap into what they believe and still stay curious has the capacity to be a creative effective committed leader.
- Transparency is crucial for effective leadership. To be transparent a leader must be aware of their own values and the values of the organizations they are part of.
- Leadership is about relationship.
- We learn from each other.

Why I believe in the Leadership Challenge:

- It is grounded in self and group awareness.
- It is based on sound research vs. a single source.
- It is sustainable over a long period of time and maps well with other initiatives.
- It’s practical approach leads to quick application and subsequent business success.

I’ve been successful with clients if:

- They see the link between their goals and our time together.
- They see greater potential for themselves, each other, and their organizations.
- They achieve peak performance by strengthening the abilities of others to excel.
- They have laughed often.
- They know the next right thing to do and are inspired to reach into the unknown.
