

Blog Radio

Jim Kouzes has been reaching aspiring leaders far to the north with sage advice and the message of the power of the Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership—from blogs to newsletters to online business sites. Recently interviewed by Canadian consultant Audley Stephenson on his blog, Hard Court Lessons, Jim helped listeners gain a better understanding of the consistent practices of effective leadership—in particular the importance of leaders as learners—and also offered an early preview of The Truth about Leadership, the next great book on leadership from Jim and Barry due to release in August 2010. To hear the full interview with Jim, go to www.blogtalkradio.com/hard-court-lessons/2010/03/10/interview-wiith-jim-kouzes.

Jim also spent time with Michael Bungay Stanier, founder of a Toronto-based company called Box of Crayons and author of Find Your Great Work and Do More Great Work. In an online interview available at www.boxofcrayons.biz/2010/02/great-work-interview-jim-kouzes, Jim touched on a wide range of topics, including why Challenging the Process is such a crucial part of ‘Great Work’ and how 25% of the success of leadership can be explained (and what to do about that other 75%). With a switch from the global issues of leadership to the more personal, Jim also explored the power of a creative partnership – and how he and Barry have maintained their working relationship for close to three decades.

Look for other Wiley Imprints

