

Exhibit 5.2. Outline for Web Learning Project Presentation.

At some point, you will need to gain approval for—and get resources committed to—your Web learning project. You can use this template to pull together all of the information from Chapters One through Five into a presentation on why your company should use the Web to meet a learning need (or perhaps why it shouldn't do so).

1. A brief overview of how other companies/organizations use the Web for learning. (Use the information from Chapters One and Two to show that the Web is already being used for educational purposes.)
2. What employees of this company need to learn, and how the Web might help.
 - Results of needs assessment
 - Results of learner-technology assessment. (List skills and content that could be learned via the Web, this company's current use of the Web, and why the Web would be accepted as a learning platform here — or why not.)
3. The pros and cons of using the Web for learning in this company. (Use the answers to your questions from the "Web Learning Pros and Cons Worksheet" here.)
4. Recommendations about using (or not using) the Web for this learning project in our company.
