

CONTENTS

AUTHORS' NOTES	1
Patrick G. Love, Victoria L. Guthrie
1. Perry's Intellectual Scheme	5
This chapter summarizes Perry's intellectual scheme and places it in the context of the 1990s.
2. Women's Ways of Knowing	17
Belenky, Clinchy, Goldberger, and Tarule's research on the cognitive development of women is described.
3. Baxter Magolda's Epistemological Reflection Model	29
Marianne T. Bock
Understanding gender-related patterns of knowing and reasoning in traditional-aged college students is a critical element in effective student affairs practice.
4. King and Kitchener's Reflective Judgment Model	41
King and Kitchener's model delineates seven consistent patterns that describe how people approach complex issues and defend what they believe.
5. Interpersonal, Cultural, and Emotional Influences on Cognitive Development	53
This chapter provides an overview of the research linking cognitive development to interpersonal, cultural, and emotional factors.
6. Kegan's Orders of Consciousness	65
Kegan's theory consists of five orders of consciousness that represent principles of mental organization affecting the way we think, feel, and relate to ourselves and others.
7. Synthesis, Assessment, and Application	77
This chapter synthesizes the theories, provides a method for intentional informal assessment, and presents information on applying cognitive development theory in practice.
REFERENCES	95
INDEX	101

