About Revealing Minds	xxi
About All Kinds of Minds	xxiii
1 Assessing to Understand	1
The Case for Phenomenology	2
Profiles as Tools for Understanding Students	2
Answering the Question Why? (and Why That Matters)	5
Identifying Assets (and Why They Matter)	7
Neurodevelopmental Variation as Normal Variation	9
Why the Focus on Assessment	9
The Approach of This Book	10
My Perspective and Background	12
Assessment Is Both Complex and Simple	13
2 The Need for a Framework	15
The Prepared Mind	15
The Pitfalls of Being Atheoretical	17
Conceptual Correctness	18
Theoretical Frameworks for Understanding Learning	20
A Neurodevelopmental Framework	23

viii Contents

	Other Factors That May Impede Learning	27
	Selecting a Framework: A Choice for the Professional	29
3	The Art of Task-Analysis	31
	Two Types of Reasoning	32
	Analysis of Academic Skills	33
	Analysis of Assessment Tasks	36
	Constructing Learning Plans	38
	Task-Analysis as an Assessment Tool	40
4	Making Linkages	41
	Functions Versus Skills	41
	Linkages	43
	Why Linkages Matter	44
	Major Linkages Between Skill Deficits and Neurodevelopmental Functions	47
5	Assessing from Multiple Angles	55
	Assessment and Testing	55
	Multi-Method Assessment	56
	Qualitative and Quantitative Findings	58
	Dynamic and Standardized Techniques	62
	Limit Testing	64
	What History Can Reveal	65
	Assets and Affinities	68
	The Case for Teamwork	70
	Assessment as a Process	71
	Comparing and Contrasting Angles	72
6	A Better Use of the Discrepancy Concept	73
	Clinical Contrasts	74
	Academic Task to Academic Task	76
	Neurodevelopmental Task to Neurodevelopmental Task	79
	Neurodevelopmental Task to Academic Task	87
	Clinical Branching Logic	93
	Contrasts in History Reports	99
	A Tool for Better Understanding	100

7	Searching for Recurring Themes	101
	Making the Case	101
	Examples of Recurring Themes	104
	Potential Hazards in the Search for Recurring Themes	108
	Tactics for Organizing Findings	109
	Change in Course	112
8	Assessing Attention	115
	The Construct of Attention	115
	Some Important Distinctions	119
	General Assessment Considerations	122
	Tasks Designed to Assess Aspects of Attention	125
	Task-Analysis for Attention	132
	Attention Signs and Symptoms	135
	Secondary Attention Deficits	139
9	Assessing Memory	143
	The Construct of Memory	144
	Some Important Distinctions	145
	General Assessment Considerations	147
	Tasks Designed to Assess Types of Memory	150
	Task-Analysis for Memory	159
	Memory Signs and Symptoms	162
10	Assessing Language	167
	The Construct of Language	167
	Some Important Distinctions	171
	General Assessment Considerations	175
	Tasks Designed to Assess Components of Language	177
	Task-Analysis for Language	185
	Language Signs and Symptoms	188
11	Other Neurodevelopmental Factors to Consider	195
	Spatial Ordering	195
	Temporal-Sequential Ordering	202
