
Contents

Editor-in-Chief's Notes 1
Gil G. Noam

Issue Editor's Notes 5
Dale Borman Fink

Executive Summary 9

Prologue: Mechanical Man 17
Astrid Liden

An eleven year old's poem about ethics and our society.

1. Shaping ethics: Youth workers matter 19

Joyce A. Walker, Cecilia F. Gran, Arnoldo Curiel

Drawing on their experiences in the Minnesota Youth Work Institute, the authors believe that youth workers must be taught to reflect critically on the ethical impact of their choices and decisions.

2. Moral voices of politically engaged urban youth 31

Ben Kirshner

Some adolescents are ready to do more than passively assimilate the moral lessons handed down by others.

3. Capitalizing on the human-animal bond to teach ethics to youth 45

Clinton P. Rusk, Keli M. Brubaker, Mark A. Balschweid, Edmond A. Pajor

Recent scandals involving drugged animals, fraud, and cheating at major youth livestock shows spurred the authors to devise an ethics curriculum for high school students.

4. Internet lives: Social context and moral domain in adolescent development 57

Karen Bradley

The author examines through empirical evidence and secondary sources the thinking and behavior of adolescents within the digital world, and considers the applicability of literature about youth ethics grounded in more traditional settings.

5. Toward ethical approaches to the inclusion of peers with disabilities 77
Dale Borman Fink
Should program leaders promote inclusion by downplaying developmental and other differences—or by helping peers to learn more about each other’s individual differences?
6. “I like to treat others as others would treat me”: The development of prosocial selves in an urban youth organization 89
Nancy L. Deutsch
Respect emerged as a key theme in the narratives of members of an urban youth recreation center.
7. Promoting children’s ethical development through social and emotional learning 107
Elizabeth Devaney, Mary Utne O’Brien, Mary Tavegia, Hank Resnik
The authors propose that the lessons learned from social and emotional learning in the school setting are applicable to after-school programs, summer camps, and other settings.
8. Giving youth the social and emotional skills to succeed 117
Ginny Deerin
How did an angry, disruptive, noncompliant seven year old become a positively engaged adolescent? The author tells this youngster’s story, her own story, and the story of WINGS, the nonprofit organization she founded.
9. Developing a game plan for good sportsmanship 127
Kathleen Lodi
A university extension and its partners launched a program to make good sportsmanship the norm rather than the exception in sports and other competitive arenas.
10. Pathways of influence in out-of-school time: A community-university partnership to develop ethics 135
Donna J. Peterson, James C. Roebuck, Sherry C. Betts, Marta E. Stuart
A community survey examined adolescent thinking about right and wrong and identified the best venues for reaching youth outside school hours.