
Index

- Activism. See Political activism, by youth; Social action projects, by youth; Youth activism
- After-school programs. See Boys and Girls Club; Brownies/Girl Scouts; Out-of-school time, and character development (study); Youth organizations, prosocial identity development and (study); WINGS for Kids after-school SEL program
- Balschweid, M. A., “Capitalizing on the Human-Animal Bond to Teach Ethics to Youth,” 45–56
- Betts, S. C., “Pathways of Influence in Out-of-School Time: A Community-University Partnership to Develop Ethics,” 135–143
- Boys and Girls Club, 91–92. See also Youth organizations, prosocial identity development in (study)
- Bradley, K., “Internet Lives: Social Context and Moral Domain in Adolescent Development,” 57–76
- Brownies/Girl Scouts: context-based learning in, 84; disability awareness program in, 77–81; leaders’ silence in, 79–82
- Brubaker, K. M., “Capitalizing on the Human-Animal Bond to Teach Ethics to Youth,” 45–56
- “Capitalizing on the Human-Animal Bond to Teach Ethics to Youth,” 45–56
- Caring School Community (CSC), 110. See also Child Development Project (CDP), 110
- Character, defined, 136
- Character development: after-school setting and, 2; character education and, 136; Character Counts! program and, 128; “Great Fans. Great Sports” program and, 128; Josephson’s approach to, 128. See also Character education; Out-of-school time, character development and (study)
- Character education, 136. See also Character development
- Character Counts! program, 128
- Child Development Project (CDP), 110, 112. See also Caring School Community (CSC)
- Collaborative for Academic, Social, and Emotional Learning (CASEL), 109
- Community-based educators: concerns about individual rights vs. public good of, 22; ethical practices in working with youth of, 19–21; Minnesota Youth Work Institute standards and, 23–24; as role models for youth, 22. See also Youth workers
- Community-based organizations, youth activism and, 40–41
- Competition: character development and, 127; youth development and, 127. See also “Great Fans. Great Sports” program
- Cossitt Elementary School (Ill.), case example of SEL program: class meetings in, 113; conflict resolution in, 113; core beliefs and, 110–111; first-year turning point and, 111–112; graphic display of SEL goals and, 113; implementation team and, 110; integrated programming and, 113–114; student behavior and, 114

- Critical reflection on practice, by youth workers, 19–20
- Curiel, A., “Shaping Ethics: Youth Workers Matter,” 19–30
- Deerin, G., “Giving Youth the Social and Emotional Skills to Succeed,” 117–125
- Deutsch, N. L., “I Like to Treat Others as Others Would Treat Me”: The Development of Prosocial Selves in an Urban Youth Organization,” 89–105
- Devaney, E., “Promoting Children’s Ethical Development Through Social and Emotional Learning,” 107–116
- “Developing a Game Plan for Good Sportsmanship,” 127–134
- Digital social context. See Online social context, of youth
- Disabilities. See Disability awareness programs; Youth with disabilities
- Disability awareness programs: avoidance of topic in, 79–81; barriers to social interaction and, 81–82; Brownies/Girl Scouts example of, 77–81; learning in context and, 83–87; parental permission and, 82–83
- Education: academic focus in, 107–108; effects of No Child Left Behind Act of 2002, 107. See also Ethics curriculum, in agricultural education (study); Social and emotional learning (SEL)
- Educators. See Community-based educators; Youth workers
- Enriching environments, youth activism and, 35–37
- Ethics: age and, 55; compliance and, 5; definition of, 45; Hurricane Katrina response and, 5; morals and, 21; practice, 22; principle-based vs. virtue-based, 21–22; public leaders and, 5; youth evaluation of their, 141–142; youth leaders and, 5–6. See also Character development; Ethics curriculum, in agricultural education (study); Moral development
- Ethics curriculum, in agricultural education (study): awareness of ethical principles and, 47, 52; benefits of, 55; confusions about ethical practices and, 53–54; curriculum design, 47–48; data collection/analysis, 49; effectiveness of curriculum and, 47, 52–53; effects of individual characteristics and, 47, 53; effects of previous ethics training and, 54–54; effects on nonagricultural students of, 55; future research and, 53; implications, 54–55; instrument, 48–49; interpretation, 52–55; limitations, 53–54; methodology, 47–49; need for, 46; participants, 49; purpose, 46–47; research questions, 47; results, 49–52; theoretical framework, 46; usefulness of case study analyses and, 47, 53
- Ethos of positive youth development, 23–24
- Executive Summary, 9–16
- Fink, D. B., “Toward Ethical Approaches to the Inclusion of Peers with Disabilities,” 77–87
- 4-H events, problems with, 45–46
- Future Farmers of America (FFA), unethical conduct by members of, 46
- Generativity, youth organizations and, 101
- “Giving Youth the Social and Emotional Skills to Succeed,” 117–125
- Gran, C. E., “Shaping Ethics: Youth Workers Matter,” 19–30
- “Great Fans. Great Sports” program: Acts of Kindness activities and, 130; Character Counts! program and, 128; costs of, 129; description of, 129; educational and training activities in, 130; Fan Friendly Communities and, 131; goal setting in, 129–130; impact of, 132–133; limitations of, 133; online

- resources for, 131–132; other ethical issues and, 130–131; promotional plan and, 130; retraining parents and, 133
- Hurricane Katrina, questions of ethics about response to, 5
- “I Like to Treat Others as Others Would Treat Me”: The Development of Prosocial Selves in an Urban Youth Organization, 89–105
- Identity formation, 33–34. See also Character development
- Intentional actions in relationships and daily work, by youth workers, 19–20
- Internet: morality and, 70–71, 73–74; as social context for youth, 57–58, 61–63, 70, 74–75. See also Online social context, of youth
- “Internet Lives: Social Context and Moral Domain in Adolescent Development,” 57–76
- Josephson Institute of Ethics, 128
- Kirshner, B., “Moral Voices of Politically Engaged Urban Youth,” 31–43
- Kohlberg’s stage theory of moral development, 32–33, 46, 53, 58–59
- Liden, A., “Prologue: Mechanical Man,” 17
- Livestock industry, unethical conduct in, 45–46
- Lodl, K., “Developing a Game Plan for Good Sportsmanship,” 127–134
- Minnesota Youth Work Institute: principle 1: ethos of positive youth development, 23; principle 2: ethos of addressing basic youth needs, 24; standards for youth workers, 23–24; Youth Work Matters: Promoting Youth Development curriculum, 27–28
- “Moral Voices of Politically Engaged Urban Youth,” 31–43
- Moral development: cognitive vs. character-based approaches to, 31; identity-based model of, 89; Internet and, 68–75; moral identity and, 33; reasoning and, 32–33; social paradigm shift and, 74–75; youth activism and, 41. See also Character development; Ethics; Moral voices, of youth; Youth development
- Moral development theory: Kohlberg’s stage theory, 32–33, 46, 53, 58–59; Piaget’s stage theory, 58–59; Turiel’s domain theory, 48, 59–61
- Moral identity: context and, 33; research on, 33–34; social relationships and, 89–90
- Moral voices, of youth: combating toxic pollution and, 37; creating enriching spaces and, 35–37; organizing politically and, 37–38; reducing sexual harassment and, 34–35
- Morality: affective social ties and, 91; character formation and, 72; as developmental process, 73; debate about, 71; defining, 70; freedom and, 71; generativity and, 101; Internet and, 70–71, 73–74; pro-social identity and, 91; social conflict as, 72–73; transforming self and, 101; Turiel’s ideas of, 60, 71
- Morals, ethics and, 21
- National AfterSchool Association (NAA), 2–3
- No Child Left Behind Act of 2002, 107
- Non-English-speaking youth, example of ethics in practice and, 20–21
- O’Brien, M. U., “Promoting Children’s Ethical Development Through Social and Emotional Learning,” 107–116
- Online social context, of youth: amorality in, 68; anger expression and, 67–68; autonomy/freedom and, 62, 68, 74; blogging and, 58, 67–69; characteristics of, 61–70; implications for moral development of, 70–74; instant messaging and, 58,

- 63–65, 67–69; Internet and, 57–58, 61–63, 70, 74–75; lack of physical limitations of, 62–63; language codes in, 70; learning and communication in, 68–69, 74; moral dimension in, 65–66, 73–74; paradigm shift and, 61, 74–75; Pew Internet study and, 69; playfulness and, 68, 74; privacy and self-protection in, 65–66; real vs. virtual world and, 57, 63–64; relationships in, 64–65; sexual behavior in, 66–67; Web sites and, 57, 62
- Out-of-school time, character development and (study): action planning and, 140–141; character education and, 136; community benefits and, 141; community responsibility and, 142; community-university partnership and, 137–138; data analysis, 138–139; definition of terms and, 136–137; description of sample, 137; ethics of youth and, 141–142; leadership opportunities and, 140; lessons learned and, 141–142; nonschool organizations and, 139; out-of-school-time activities and, 139–140; partnering with adults and, 140; program development/implementation and, 141; reliability, 139; research question, 139; results, 138; survey instrument, 138
- Pajor, E. A., “Capitalizing on the Human-Animal Bond to Teach Ethics to Youth,” 45–56
- “Pathways of Influence in Out-of-School Time: A Community-University Partnership to Develop Ethics,” 135–143
- Personal awareness ethics, by youth workers, 19–2, 26
- Peterson, D. J., “Pathways of Influence in Out-of-School Time: A Community-University Partnership to Develop Ethics,” 135–143
- Piaget’s moral development theory, 58–59
- Pocket Knife example, of practice ethics, 25–28
- Political activism, by youth, 34–38
- Pollution, youth activism and, 37
- Practice ethics, 22. See also Practice ethics, for youth workers
- Practice ethics, for youth workers: analysis of videos and, 26; critical reflection and, 19–20, 27–28; intentional actions in relationships and daily work and, 19–21, 28–29; personal ethical awareness and, 20–21, 26; Pocket Knife example, 25–28; Socratic dialogue approach and, 2; Speak English example, 20–21, 26; steps for developing, 19–20, 25–29
- Principle-based ethics, 21–22
- “Prologue: Mechanical Man,” 17
- “Promoting Children’s Ethical Development Through Social and Emotional Learning,” 107–116
- Prosocial identity: morality and, 91; relationships and, 91; separation vs. connection and, 90; youth organizations and, 90. See also Youth organizations, prosocial identity development in (study)
- Resnik, H., “Promoting Children’s Ethical Development Through Social and Emotional Learning,” 107–116
- Respect: African Americans and, 96; for authority, 98; bidirectionality of, 97–98; display of, 98; meaning of, 96; modeling of, 98–99, 101; structural implications of, 96–97; youth organizations and, 94, 96–100
- Roebeck, J. C., “Pathways of Influence in Out-of-School Time: A Community-University Partnership to Develop Ethics,” 135–143
- Rusk, C. P., “Capitalizing on the Human-Animal Bond to Teach Ethics to Youth,” 45–56
- Search Institute, 108
- Sexual harassment, youth activism and, 34–35

- “Shaping Ethics: Youth Workers Matter,” 19–30
- Social action projects, by youth: combating toxic pollution and, 37; community-based organizations and, 40–41; creating enriching spaces and, 35–37; factors shaping, 39; implications of, 40–41; organizing politically and, 37–38; reducing sexual harassment and, 34–35
- Social and emotional learning (SEL): academic performance and, 108; beyond-classroom applicability of, 110; children’s development and, 109; Collaborative for Academic, Social, and Emotional Learning and, 109; competency areas and, 109–110; Cossitt Elementary School (Ill.), case example, 110–114; critical skills for students and, 109; definition of, 108–109; ethical behavior and, 115; implementing, in a range of settings, 115; opposition to, 114–115; Search Institute surveys of youth and, 108; WINGS for Kids after-school program, case example, 117–125
- Speak English Story, of unexamined practice, 20–21, 26
- Sportsmanship: examples of poor, 128; parents’ misplaced priorities and, 128; youth development and, 127. See also “Great Fans. Great Sports”
- Stuart, M. E., “Pathways of Influence in Out-of-School Time: A Community-University Partnership to Develop Ethics,” 135–143
- Tavegia, M., “Promoting Children’s Ethical Development Through Social and Emotional Learning,” 107–116
- Testing, focus on, 107
- “Toward Ethical Approaches to the Inclusion of Peers with Disabilities,” 77–87
- Turiel’s domain theory, 59–61
- Virtue-based ethics, 21–22
- Walker, J. A., “Shaping Ethics: Youth Workers Matter,” 19–30
- WINGS for Kids after-school SEL program: costs of, 125; importance of, 125; learning modules for SEL strategies and, 119–120; origins of, 118; positive outcomes of, 124; program description, 119; research on, 125
- Youth: basic needs of, 24; increase of unethical behavior in, 52; in livestock programs, 45–46; Search Institute surveys of, 108. See also Moral voices, of youth; Online social context, of youth; Youth development; Youth with disabilities; Youth workers
- Youth activism: goals of moral education and, 41; social action projects and, 34–38
- Youth development: civic engagement and, 40; competition and, 127; Erikson’s tasks for, 39; ethical scale for, 142; identity formation and, 33–34; Konopka’s basic principles of healthy, 24; Minnesota Youth Work Institute ethos of, 23–24; moral identity and, 33; social action projects and, 34; social context and, 33; youth assessment of moral character and, 141–142; Youth Work Matters approach and, 27–28. See also Character development; Moral development; Moral voices, of youth; Out-of-school time, character development and (study); Social and emotional learning
- Youth development practice: principle 1: ethos of positive youth development, 23; principle 2: ethos of addressing basic youth needs, 24
- Youth organizations, prosocial identity development in (study): analysis, 93–94; conclusion, 101–102; contextual selves and, 96; generativity and, 101; measures, 92–93; method, 91–92; modeling behavior and, 98–99, 101; procedure, 91;

- prosocial transformation and, 100–101; purpose, 94; respect and, 94, 96–100; results/discussion, 94–101; self-construction and, 94; self-descriptions and, 94–96
- Youth with disabilities: avoidance of acknowledging, 79–81; context-based learning and, 83–87; disability awareness programs and, 77–79; involving parents of, 82–83; overcoming communication barriers with, 81–82
- Youth Work Matters: Promoting Youth Development approach, 27–28
- Youth workers: articulation of actions by, 20–21; ethical code of conduct for, 23–24; as role models for youth, 20, 22; silence of, about youth disabilities, 79–82; Speak English example of unexamined practice by, 20–21, 26; training of, 142. See also Community-based educators; Practice ethics, for youth workers