

The Best of Cuba

by Eliot Greenspan & Neil E. Schlecht

Cuba is unlike any other place on earth. What draws people to this fascinating Caribbean island is much more than beaches, sun, and cheap drinks, though there are plenty of all three for those who want them. Cuba's rich culture, unique political history, and continued economic hardship make it one of the most eye-opening countries that experienced travelers can still discover. Seeing the best of Cuba means grooving to its intoxicating music, marveling at how Cubans improvise on a daily basis to make ends meet, and visiting a land in which the past 50 years seem to have crept by.

1 The Best Cuban Travel Experiences

- Patronizing Paladares and Casas Particulares: The best way to appreciate Cubans, as well as to have the opportunity to exchange ideas about Cuba and the outside world, is by stepping inside a paladar restaurant or a casa particular, the Cuban version of a simple bed-and-breakfast. These private initiatives, heavily taxed by the state, are one of the only ways Cubans have to earn badly needed dollars, and they offer travelers a rewarding chance to see the country beyond the state-run hotels and restaurants.
- Exploring la Habana Vieja (Old Havana): No trip to Cuba is complete without at least a day spent in la Habana Vieja. The streets and alleys of this colonial-era city center have been immaculately restored. You'll feel sucked back in time as you visit the plazas, churches, and forts here. Be sure to take a break from sightseeing and museum hopping to stock up on souvenirs at the Calle Tacón market, your best one-stop shop in the country for this sort of stuff. See "What to See & Do" in chapter 3.
- Spending an Afternoon at the Callejón de Hammel: This short alley is lined with Salvador González's colorful murals and punctuated with scrap sculptures and shrines to Afro-Cuban deities. If you can make it on a Sunday afternoon, you'll be treated to a popular Afro-Cuban dance and music celebration. See "What to See & Do" in chapter 3.
- Walking along Havana's Malecón: Your best bet is to start in Habana Vieja and work your way toward the Hotel Nacional in Vedado. Take your time to stop and sit on the sea wall for a spell, and be sure to talk to some of the locals on your way. If you time it right, you will reach the Hotel Nacional in the late afternoon—a good time to grab a cool drink and enjoy the setting sun from their "Compass Card" outdoor terrace. See "What to See & Do" in chapter 3.
- Celebrating Las Parrandas: As the end of the year rolls around, the little colonial town of Remedios gears up to host Las Parrandas, one of Cuba's grandest street parties and religious carnivals. Everything culminates on Christmas Eve in an orgy of drums, floats, and fireworks. See “Santa Clara” in chapter 6.

- Hopping a Steam Train to the Valley of the Sugar Mills: The colonial mansions in Trinidad were built with the riches of a booming Cuban sugar trade of the 18th and 19th centuries. The best way to see the Valle de los Ingenios, an extraordinarily lush valley once home to 60 sugar mills, is aboard a vintage 1907 American steam train to one of the sugar estates, Manaca-Iznaga, where you can survey the valley’s many shades of green from a fantastic tower. See “Trinidad” in chapter 6.
- Following in Fidel’s Footsteps: Waging a guerrilla war against the Batista dictatorship, Fidel Castro and his young comrades hid out in the Sierra Maestra mountains in the late 1950s. Their small-scale rebel base camp was never discovered, but visitors today can hike a trail through remote cloud forest up to Comandancia de la Plata, the command post where Fidel turned a country on its head. It’s a fascinating glimpse of history from up close. See “Bayamo & the Sierra Maestra” in chapter 8.

- Joining a Carnival Conga Line: In the intense heat of summer, Santiago de Cuba explodes with the island’s best carnival, an evocative celebration of the city’s Afro-Caribbean roots. Ripe with rumba music, conga processions, booming percussion, fanciful floats, and wild costumes, it’s a participatory party that has nothing to do with those cheesy conga lines people tend to do on cruise ships. See “Carnival & Other Santiago Festivals” in chapter 9.

2 The Best Historical Sights

- Catedral de San Cristóbal and Plaza de la Catedral, Havana (☎ 7/861-7771): Havana’s cathedral and the plaza it sits on are perhaps Old Havana’s most distinctive historical sites. The twin towers and worn baroque facade of this ancient church are beautiful both by day and at night. The small plaza it fronts is an atmospheric cobblestone square surrounded by perfectly restored colonial-era buildings with shops, museums, galleries, and restaurants. See p. 84.
- Museo de la Ciudad, Havana (☎ 7/861-6130): Old Havana’s preeminent museum displays colonial-era art and artifacts. It’s worth the price of admission alone to stroll the rooms, outdoor courtyards, and interior veranda of the former Palacio de los Capitanes Generales (Palace of the Captain Generals), which houses the museum. See p. 85.

- Parque Histórico Morro y Cabaña, Havana (☎ 7/863-7063 for El Morro, and 7/862-0617 for La Cabaña): Across the harbor from Old Havana, the Morro & Cabaña Historic Park complex is comprised of two major forts charged with protecting Havana’s narrow and strategic harbor entrance. There’s a lighthouse, several museums, restored barracks, batteries of cannons, and a handful of restaurants to explore, and a nightly cañonazo (cannon blast) ceremony is held here. See p. 92.
- Cementerio de Colón, Havana (☎ 7/832-1050): Columbus Cemetery is an impressive collection of mausoleums, crypts, family chapels and vaults, soaring sculptures, and ornate gravestones. All of the dead are laid to rest above ground, and you'll be awed by the surfeit of marble and sun-bleached alabaster. The whole thing is laid out in an orderly grid of streets. See p. 89.

- Monumento Ernesto Che Guevara, Santa Clara (☎ 42/20-5878): Featuring a huge sculpture of the revolutionary hero overlooking a vast plaza, this place is deeply revered by Cubans. Underneath the statue is a museum with exhibits detailing the life and exploits of “El Che,” as well as a mausoleum holding Guevara’s remains and the tombstones of 37 other revolutionary fighters killed with Guevara in Bolivia. See “Santa Clara” in chapter 6.
- Trinidad: The entire town of Trinidad qualifies as a historical site. The impeccably preserved relic—several blocks square of perfect pastel-colored mansions, churches, and cobblestone streets—is one of the greatest collections of colonial architecture to be found anywhere in the Americas. The star among Trinidad’s colonial set pieces is the Museo Romántico, in an 18th-century mansion right on the main square. See “Trinidad” in chapter 6.
- Plaza San Juan de Dios, Camagüey (☎ 32/29-1388): This dignified square is the highlight of Camagüey’s colonial quarter, one of the largest in Cuba with more than a dozen 16th-, 17th-, and 18th-century colonial churches. Marked by cobblestones and colonial houses with red-tile roofs and iron window grilles, the understated plaza is home to a 17th-century baroque church and hospital of the order of San Juan de Dios. See p. 193.

- Museo El Chorro de Maíta, Guardalavaca (☎ 24/3-0421): Guardalavaca is in the midst of the most important archaeological zone of Native American groups in Cuba. This small museum site is a Taíno burial ground from the late 15th and early 16th centuries, the biggest and finest American Indian cemetery discovered in Cuba. The very well-preserved remains of more than 100 members of the community reveal important clues about native groups after the arrival of the Spanish conquistadors. The museum displays ceramics and objects found at the site. See “Guardalavaca” in chapter 8.
- Casa Velázquez (Museo de Ambiente Colonial Cubano), Santiago de Cuba (☎ 22/65-2652): Diego Velázquez founded the original seven villas in Cuba, and his 1515 mansion in Santiago de Cuba, the oldest house in the country and one of the oldest in the Americas, is still standing. Today it’s a museum of colonial furnishings from the 16th to the 19th century. Individual pieces are splendid, but none manages to upstage the historical impact of the restored house itself. See p. 241.

3 The Best of Natural Cuba

- The Viñales Valley: This broad, flat valley is punctuated by a series of limestone karst hill formations, or mogotes. The views from the small mountains surrounding the valley are spectacular. The area offers great opportunities for hiking, mountain biking, bird-watching, and rock climbing, as well as caves to explore. See “Viñales” in chapter 4.

- Las Terrazas: This planned ecotourism project is set amidst the Sierra del Rosario Biosphere Reserve. There are a host of trails and attractions here, including lakes, swimming holes, and even some sulfur springs. The bird-watching is excellent. See “Sierra del Rosario Biosphere Reserve & San Diego de los Baños” in chapter 4.

- Parque Nacional Ciénaga de Zapata: The Zapata Swamp National Park is a massive expanse of mangroves, swamp, and wetlands housing an abundant variety of flora and fauna. The area is a mecca for bird-watchers, naturalists, and anglers. Your best bet for exploring the park is Playa Larga, a simple beach resort area catering to scuba divers. See “The Zapata Peninsula & Playa Girón” in chapter 5.
- Parque Nacional Topes de Collantes: The dense pine-covered mountains of the Sierra del Escambray lurk on the outskirts of Trinidad, and the Topes de Collantes National Park is a lovely, cool refuge from the town’s stone streets. It’s great for hiking, with several well-established trails, the best of which culminate in refreshing waterfalls. See “Trinidad” in chapter 6.

- Baracoa: Cuba’s first settlement, overlooking a beautiful oyster-shaped bay, remains a natural paradise, with thick tropical vegetation, 10 rivers, and a distinctive flat-topped mountain called El Yunque, a UNESCO Biosphere Reserve that beckons hikers. Travelers into rafting, beaches, and boating will also find ample opportunities to explore this isolated area. See “Baracoa” in chapter 8.
- Sierra Maestra: The highest and longest mountain range in Cuba, the Sierra Maestra is full of lore for Cubans—it’s where Fidel Castro and his band of rebels hid out and waged guerilla warfare against the Batista government in the 1950s. Stretching across three provinces, its peaks are almost on top of the rocky southern coastline. The Gran Parque Nacional Sierra Maestra and Parque Nacional de Turquino are perfect for hikers and nature lovers. See “Bayamo & the Sierra Maestra” in chapter 8.

4 The Best Outdoor Adventures

- Landing a Marlin or Sailfish: If you really want to emulate Ernest Hemingway, you’ll head out to sea to fish. The waters off Cuba’s coast are excellent for sportfishing year-round. Big game fish are best sought off the northern coast, while bonefish and tarpon are better stalked off the southern coast. Marinas Puertosol (www.puertosol.net) runs a string of marinas with modern well-equipped sportfishing fleets all around Cuba’s coastline.
- Rock Climbing the Mogotes of the Viñales Valley: Although in its infancy, this is a rapidly developing sport in Cuba, and this area is the place to come and climb. Over 60 routes and 100 pitches have been marked and climbed, and more climbs are constantly being uncovered. See “Viñales” in chapter 4.

- Scuba Diving at María la Gorda: Cuba has many excellent dive destinations, but María la Gorda probably edges out the rest by offering consistently excellent conditions, a variety of sites, an amazing setting, and an excellent dive operation. However, there’s excellent diving off of much of Cuba’s coast, and if you want to combine diving with other attractions you can do so from just about any destination on the island. See “María la Gorda” in chapter 4.

- Bird-Watching in the Zapata Peninsula: A dedicated (and lucky) bird-watcher might be able to spot 18 of Cuba’s 22 endemic species in the swamps, mangroves, and wetlands of the Zapata Peninsula. In addition to the endemics, ornithologists and lay bird-watchers can spot over 100 other varieties of shore birds, transients, and waterfowl in this rich, wild region. See “The Zapata Peninsula & Playa Girón” in chapter 5. Other top bird-watching destinations include La Güira National Park (see chapter 4), as well as the areas around Cayo Coco and Cayo Guillermo (see chapter 7) and Baracoa (see chapter 8).
- Hiking and Rafting in Baracoa: Baracoa, long isolated by impenetrable tropical vegetation, steep mountains, and rushing rivers, is an adventurer’s dream. El Yunque, a curiously flat-topped limestone mountain, is home to dozens of bird species, orchids, and unique tropical plants and forest; it’s also great for climbing. The Río Toa, the widest river in Cuba, is one of the few spots in Cuba for white-water rafting. See “Baracoa” in chapter 8.

- Hiking Pico Turquino: Pico Turquino, tucked within the celebrated Sierra Maestra National Park, is the highest peak in Cuba at just under 2,000m (6,560 ft.). The trail to the summit is swathed in cloud forest and tropical flora. Mountaineers in good physical condition can do the 15km (9-mile) round-trip journey in a day, but most camp overnight below the summit. The panoramic views of the coast and Caribbean Sea are breathtaking. See “Bayamo & the Sierra Maestra” in chapter 8.

5 The Best Beaches

- Playa Paraíso and Playa Sirena: These two connected beaches are the most outstanding of the uniformly spectacular beaches that stretch the length of Cayo Largo del Sur. Located on the more protected western end of the island, these two beaches are broad expanses of glistening, fine white sand, bordering the clear Caribbean Sea. There’s a simple beachside restaurant on Playa Paraíso, and not much else here—and that’s a large part of their charm. See “Cayo Largo del Sur” in chapter 4.
- Varadero: This is Cuba’s premier beach resort destination, and it ranks right up there with the best in the Caribbean. We personally prefer some of the island’s less developed stretches of sand. But if you’re looking for a well-run all-inclusive resort loaded with amenities and activity options, Varadero is a good choice. Oh yeah, the 21km (13 miles) of nearly uninterrupted beach here are fabulous. See “Varadero” in chapter 5.

- Playa Ensenachos: You may still be able to visit this virtually undiscovered gem before the hordes arrive, since work isn’t expected to be completed on the new luxury resort here for another year. Located on the tiny islet of Cayo Ensenachos, which is part of la Cayería del Norte, this protected crescent of sand drops off very gently, allowing bathers to wade 100 yards or more out into the calm, crystal clear waters. See “Santa Clara” in chapter 6.
- Playa Ancón: A close runner-up to the more spectacular beaches on the north coast of Cuba, attractive Ancón has one huge advantage: it’s just minutes from one of the country’s true treasures,

Trinidad, and perfectly positioned for those who'd like a bit of colonial culture with their sun and sand (or vice versa). With good diving and one very nice resort hotel, it's sure to be built up soon. See "Trinidad" in chapter 6.

- Cayos Coco and Guillermo: These tiny cays off the north coast, separated from the Cuban mainland by a long man-made causeway, are tantalizingly tucked into shallow waters that flow into the Atlantic. There's barely a sign of the "real Cuba," but what you do get are stunningly unspoiled beaches, excellent diving, and a full contingent of watersports. See "Cayo Coco & Cayo Guillermo" in chapter 7.
- Cayo Sabinal: If it's seclusion and pristine nature you're after, find your way to this small cay on the northeastern coast. It has brilliant beaches protected by stunning coral reefs and almost no facilities to speak of. With its rich flora and fauna, Cayo Sabinal is an ecotourist's dreamland. See "Camagüey" in chapter 7.

- Guardalavaca: Probably Cuba's prettiest resort area, Guardalavaca is hot but not overheated like Varadero. The area, the archaeological zone of pre-Columbian Cuba, is one of lush tropical vegetation, brilliant white sands, and clear turquoise waters. Long stretches of coastline are interrupted by charming little cove beaches, and some of Cuba's finest resort hotels are here. See "Guardalavaca" in chapter 8.

6 The Best Resort Hotels

- Paradisus Varadero, Varadero (☎ 45/66-8700): This is the Sol Meliá's fanciest resort hotel in Varadero, with expansive grounds, a huge free-form pool, and all the activities and amenities you could hope for. There's a variety of dining options, and overall they manage to create the feel of an intimate, romantic getaway better than any of the other large resort hotels in Varadero. See p. 137.
- Tryp Península Varadero, Varadero (☎ 45/66-8800): This is my top choice for a family resort in Varadero and an excellent all-around resort in its own right. The setting, facilities, and service are all tops, and the rooms are quite spacious and well equipped. The children's pools and play area are the best in Cuba. See p. 139.
- Meliá Cayo Santa María, Cayo Santa María (☎ 42/35-0500): This new resort is yet another of the Sol Meliá's excellent all-inclusive properties. This one is located on a very beautiful and very isolated patch of beach in la Cayería del Norte. The facilities are certainly top-notch, and the setting is just spectacular. See p. 152.

- Brisas Trinidad del Mar, Península Ancón, Trinidad (☎ 419/6500): This swank new resort hotel on Playa Ancón, the nicest in the vicinity of Trinidad, has excellent sea and mountain views and is only minutes from the most beautiful colonial city in Cuba. The well-conceived design echoes the handsome architecture of Trinidad. See p. 166.
- Meliá Cayo Coco, Cayo Coco (☎ 33/30-1180): Of the several fine hotels on Cayo Coco, Sol Meliá's top property on the cays is the most sophisticated and stylish, with cool bungalows overlooking a natural lagoon, elegant decor throughout, good restaurants, a beautiful pool area, and a great stretch of beach on a natural cove. See p. 184.

- Sol Cayo Guillermo, Cayo Guillermo (☎ 33/30-1760): Relaxed and unpretentious, this lively resort hotel is less staid and pre-packaged than many of the big hotels on the cays. The cheery bungalow-style rooms are perfect for a younger crowd. See p. 186.
- Paradisus Río de Oro, Playa Esmeralda (☎ 24/3-0090). Perhaps Cuba's most sybaritic all-inclusive resort hotel, this sprawling Sol Meliá property hugs a rocky cliff and is distinguished by some of the most luxuriously designed grounds you'll find anywhere. Rooms are large, refined, and private. Sunbathers will have a hard time deciding between the terrific main beach, the nearly private small cove beaches, and the extraordinary pool area. Not to mention the massage hut that hangs out from the cliff over the sea. See p. 206.

7 The Best Hotels

- Hotel Florida, Havana (☎ 7/862-4127): This is probably my favorite of the Habaguanex properties in Old Havana. The building features a wonderful open-air central courtyard, checkerboard marble floors, and oodles of colonial-era charm. The whole operation is elegant and refined, and located right on the pulse of things on busy Calle Obispo. See p. 65.
- Meliá Cohiba, Havana (☎ 7/833-3636): Towering over the Malecón, this modern high-rise hotel offers excellent comfort, service, and amenities. Most of the rooms have fantastic views of the sea. The hotel is close to all of the action and attractions Havana has to offer, and has plenty of restaurants, bars, and clubs of its own, including the very popular Habana Café. See p. 70.
- Hotel Los Jazmines, Viñales (☎ 7/833-4042 in Havana, or 8/93-6205 at the hotel): With a spectacular setting on a hillside overlooking the Viñales Valley, this is hands down the best option in town. If you land one of the third-floor rooms with a balcony, you'll forgive the somewhat smallish rooms and minimal amenities. Los Jazmines makes a great base for exploring this region. See p. 111.
- Cubanacán Boutique La Unión, Cienfuegos (☎ 432/55-1020 or 432/55-1685): Housed in a marvelously restored colonial mansion right in the heart of downtown Cienfuegos, this is one of the nicest boutique hotels in the country. With a couple of interior courtyards, neoclassical furnishings, and architectural touches, La Unión captures the elegance and charm of Cuba's bygone era. It's worth the small splurge for one of the spacious junior suites. See p. 157.
- Hostal del Rijo, Sancti Spíritus (☎ 41/2-8588): The concept of small boutique hotels with historic character is just catching on in Cuba, but this boutique hotel in unassuming Sancti Spíritus is among the best of its kind in the country. In a beautifully restored colonial mansion, it has massive rooms with restrained decor, and it just might rank as the best hotel bargain in Cuba. See p. 175.
- Gran Hotel, Camagüey (☎ 32/29-2314): In the heart of Camagüey's colonial quarter, this 1930s hotel has real old-world character, a selection of atmospheric bars, and a terrace pool. The Gran Hotel offers tons of style at a bargain price—especially if you get one of the spacious corner rooms. See p. 194.

- Hotel Colón, Camagüey (☎ 32/28-3346): A stylish 1920s midsize hotel with newly restored historic touches, the charming Colón has a beautiful antique dark-wood lobby bar, a pretty interior patio, and very nicely appointed rooms, all for little more than a casa particular. See p. 194.
- Hotel El Castillo, Baracoa (☎ 21/4-2125): This hotel has history, charm, and a location to die for. Inside the walls of one of the town's oldest fortresses, up on a hill where the pool comes with splendid panoramic views of Baracoa and the bay, this is the kind of place you won't want to leave. Relaxed and unpretentious, it suits Baracoa perfectly. See p. 225.
- Hotel Casa Granda, Santiago de Cuba (☎ 22/65-3021): It's not Santiago's biggest or most expensive hotel, but the Casa Granda, in an elegant landmark building on Parque Céspedes in the heart of the city, is the place to stay if you want to be in the heady mix that is the Oriente region's capital. Renovation has dramatically improved the rooms, and the terrific terrace bars are among the best people-watching places in the city. See p. 235.

8 The Best Casas Particulares

- Casa Particular Sandelis, Havana (☎ 7/832-4422): Located just across from the Hotel Nacional, this is practically the most prestigious address in Vedado—at a fraction of the cost. The hosts are helpful and friendly, and you even get an ocean view from the apartment's sixth-floor terrace. See p. 72.
- Casa Ana María, Cienfuegos (☎ 432/51-3269): Located right on the water, you get bay views from each of the two rooms here, and there's also a wonderful shared courtyard which opens on out to the water. The home is a charming colonial-era fixer-upper, but don't worry, you'll be pampered here and not pressed into service. See p. 158.
- Hostal Casa Muñoz, Trinidad (☎ 419/3673): Historic Trinidad is well-stocked with beautiful colonial houses renting out rooms, but this one is distinguished not only by its impressive rooms and ever-expanding facilities, but also its gregarious and informative host, a photographer who knows Trinidad like the back of his hand. See p. 166.
- La Pantera, Sancti Spiritus (☎ 41/2-5435): A handsome early-19th-century house with marble pillars and high ceilings, this breezy private homestay has large rooms, very friendly live-in owners, and good, filling meals. See p. 176.
- Casa Xiomara & Rodolfo, Camagüey (☎ 32/28-1948): Like having your own house in Camagüey, this huge and very well-maintained apartment offers a full kitchen, dining room, TV room, and a backyard terrace—and total privacy. It's considerably bigger and better equipped than most hotel rooms in Cuba. See “Camagüey” in chapter 7.
- Casa La Colina, Baracoa (☎ 21/4-3477): One of the things that makes Baracoa so extraordinary is its spectacular natural setting, and this handsome house has a fantastic terrace with panoramic views of the entire town and the bay leading out to the sea. The rooms are large and comfortable, and your host is a charm. See “Baracoa” in chapter 8.
- Casa Hugo & Adela, Santiago de Cuba (☎ 22/62-6359): Most of Santiago's best casas are in the leafy outer neighborhoods, but if you want to be in the thick of Santiago, with a comfortable room and a huge private rooftop terrace overlooking the old city and harbor, grab this room. See p. 236.

- Casa Asensio, Santiago de Cuba (☎ 22/62-4600): Facility-wise, this house is unrivaled in Cuba. It's a very large apartment with its own kitchen and a massive, private rooftop terrace. It's perfect for anyone planning to stay a while to explore Santiago de Cuba and the surrounding area in depth. See p. 238.

9 The Best Restaurants & Paladares

- La Bodeguita del Medio, Havana (☎ 7/867-1374): This classic joint is a must for any visitor to Cuba. The criolla cuisine is excellently prepared, and it's an understatement to say the ambience is lively. Go ahead and have a mojito, but get one made with añejo rum. See p. 77.

- La Guarida, Havana (☎ 7/862-4940): Atmosphere, fame, good food, and good times all combine in equal measure at perhaps the most famous paladar in Cuba. The walk up the rickety steps to this third-floor private restaurant is an experience in itself. See p. 79.

- Roof Garden Restaurant, Havana (☎ 7/860-8560): The creative French-inspired menu and stunning setting make this probably the best high-end dining option in Havana. Try for a window table on the elevated area ringing the restaurant. See p. 77.

- La Cocina de Lilliam, Havana (☎ 7/209-6514): Lilliam Domínguez has raised the bar for paladares around Havana. Her delicious criolla cooking always makes the most of whatever ingredients are locally available, and her softly lit garden setting is stunning. See p. 82.

- La Fonda de Mercedes, Las Terrazas (☎ 8/77-8647): Working out of her apartment's simple kitchen, Doña Mercedes Dache serves up wonderfully prepared criolla cuisine. Meals are served on large tables in an open-air terrace overlooking a mountain lake. If you come to Las Terrazas, don't leave without eating here. See p. 114.

- Paladar Estela, Trinidad (☎ 419/4329): A colonial house with a pretty garden patio dining area, this private home restaurant in the heart of the historic quarter of Trinidad serves epic proportions of well-prepared Cuban specialties. The friendly owners also rent a room. See p. 168.

- Mesón de la Plaza, Sancti Spiritus (☎ 41/2-8546): One of the nicer state-owned, small-town offerings in Cuba is this restored 19th-century house with quality specialties like chickpea soup, ropa vieja (shredded beef), and sangría, as well as live music during the day. See p. 176.

- La Campana de Toledo, Camagüey (☎ 32/29-5888): Located on one of the most authentic and elegant colonial squares in Cuba, this handsome, rustic restaurant with a pretty patio is a great spot for a midday break from the heat or a relaxed dinner. Dishes are more imaginative than the basic Cuban fare at most state-run establishments. See p. 196.

- La Colonial, Baracoa (☎ 21/4-5391): The government seems to support the competition of private restaurants only nominally, and this is the last surviving paladar in Baracoa. The nicely decorated colonial house easily outclasses the state-run options in town, and it has good service and a changing menu with several fresh fish dishes. See p. 226.

- Restaurant El Morro, Santiago de Cuba (☎ 22/69-1576): Perched along the cliff next to the El Morro fortress, with spectacular views of the Caribbean, this popular open-air restaurant is a good-value lunch spot. There are plenty of fish dishes and a fixed-price midday deal, all served under a canopy of hanging plants that helps patrons beat the heat. See p. 240.
- ZunZún, Santiago de Cuba (☎ 22/64-1528): One of the few upscale dining experiences in eastern Cuba, this elegant restaurant has several small, private dining rooms scattered throughout a large 1940s house in one of Santiago de Cuba's most pleasant suburbs. Attention to detail and presentation—dining elements seldom given much thought in Cuba—are a welcome surprise. It's best known for its top-quality seafood. See p. 239.

10 The Best of Cuban Nightlife

- Macumba Habana, Havana (☎ 7/33-0568): Located in a trendy tourism complex on the outskirts of Havana, this minor cabaret is a major disco and dance spot. Macumba Habana consistently draws top-notch salsa bands including NG La Banda and Los Van Van. See p. 99.
- Tropicana, Havana (☎ 7/267-1010): This is the original and still reigning cabaret show in Cuba. The Tropicana has been at it for over 60 years and it shows no signs of slowing down. The sea of lithe dancers, the exuberance of their costumes, and the sheer excess of it all is worth the trip. It all occurs under the stars in the shadow of tall overhanging trees. There's a second Tropicana in Matanzas for visitors to Varadero, and another in Santiago. See p. 100.
- El Gato Tuerto, Havana (☎ 07/55-2696): The mood is dark and bohemian, although the decor mixes Art Deco and kitsch in equal measure. The nightly show usually features three or four distinct acts, which can range from sultry boleros to up-tempo jazz. A storyteller, poet, or comedian might perform between sets. See p. 101.
- La Zorra y El Cuervo, Havana (☎ 07/66-2402): This is Havana's best jazz club, and that's saying a lot. The vibe is mellow and unpretentious in this compact basement club, but the music and acts are usually culled from the best Cuba has to offer. See p. 101.
- Habana Café, Havana and Varadero: Mix the Tropicana with a Hard Rock Café, and Habana Café is more or less what you'd get. The floor show is a mix of cabaret-style dance numbers and slightly burlesque comedic bits, all anchored by a top-notch big band. After the show, the dance floor swings and writhes for hours. See p. 99 and "Varadero" in chapter 5.
- Discoteca Las Cuevas, north of Viñales (☎ 8/79-6290): With a good sound system and lights bouncing off the stalactites, this is by far the best party spot in the Viñales Valley. See "Viñales" in chapter 4.
- Trinidad: Trinidad's popularity has ensured a steady menu of live-music offerings. Cuban bands play under the stars on the steps of the Casa de la Música until more energetic dancing and music get underway inside. The local Casa de la Trova also has a nightly roster of traditional Cuban bands, and even small, relaxed spots like the patio bars La Canchánchara and Ruinas de Segarte feature live son. If that's too traditional, then check out La Cueva, a funky discoteque in a cave. See "Trinidad" in chapter 6.

- Casa de la Trova, Camagüey and Santiago de Cuba: Perhaps the country's two best Casas de la Trova, the traditional Cuban live-music spots, are in Camagüey and Santiago de Cuba. Camagüey's Casa is agreeably low-key, while Santiago's is legendary, having given birth to dozens of Cuba's most respected musicians and bands. Both are great places to mix with locals, try out some dance moves, and sip a mojito. See "Camagüey" in chapter 7 and p. 247 in chapter 9.

- Calle Antonio Maceo, Baracoa: Tiny Baracoa rocks at night with its own little version of Bourbon Street. People spill out of a half-dozen cafes, bars, and live-music venues, shifting gears from traditional trova to son and dance music to full-throttle disco. Amiable emcees entertain audiences with romantic poetry and humor. See "Baracoa" in chapter 8.

11 The Best of Cuba Online

- <http://lanic.utexas.edu/la/cb/cuba>: Hosted by the University of Texas Latin American Studies Department, this site houses a vast collection of information about Cuba. This is hands down the best one-stop shop for Web browsing.
- www.afrocubaweb.com: AfroCubaWeb focuses on Afro-Cuban cultural issues and events, but also includes a wealth of general information, tips, and links.
- www.cubanacan.cu: Cubanacán is a state-run tourism company, with hotels, transportation, and receptive tourism arms. They also have the best developed website of the handful of state-run agencies, although that's not necessarily saying much.

- www.cubasi.cu: CubaSi is the best of the state sponsored all-purpose information sites on Cuba. It's got an English-language mirror of the principal site, as well as a good search engine and easy links to an online version of the Cuban telephone book.
- www.dtcuba.cu: This is a somewhat clunky and unappealing site, but it's got a wealth of information in English. It's much better than the much flashier official tourism site www.cubatravel.cu.
