

Contents

PROLOGUE	THE TWO CULTURES	1
■ Physics and finance ■ What quants do ■ The Black-Scholes model ■ Quants and traders ■ Pure thought and beautiful mathematics can divine the laws of physics ■ Can they do the same for finance? ■
CHAPTER 1	ELECTIVE AFFINITIES	17
■ The attractions of science ■ The glory days of particle physics ■ Driven by ambitious dreams to Columbia ■ Legendary physicists and budding wunderkinder ■ Talent versus character, plans versus luck ■
CHAPTER 2	DOG YEARS	29
■ Life as a graduate student ■ Wonderful lectures ■ T. D. Lee, the brightest star in the firmament ■ Seven lean years ■ Getting out of graduate school only half-alive ■
CHAPTER 3	A SORT OF LIFE	53
■ The priesthood of itinerant postdocs ■ Research isn't easy ■ Almost perishing, then publishing ■ The delirious thrill of collaboration and discovery ■
CHAPTER 4	A SENTIMENTAL EDUCATION	65
■ Oxford's civilized charms ■ One physics paper leads to another ■ English idiosyncrasies ■ The anthroposophists ■

- CHAPTER 5 THE MANDARINS 77
- Research and parenthood on New York's Upper East Side ■ A good life, but . . . the tensions of twin careers ■
- CHAPTER 6 KNOWLEDGE OF THE HIGHER WORLDS 85
- A two-city family ■ New age meditations ■ Karma ■ Goodbye to physics ■
- CHAPTER 7 IN THE PENAL COLONY 95
- The world of industry—working for money rather than love
  - The Business Analysis Systems Center at Bell Labs ■ A small part of a giant hierarchy ■ Creating software is beautiful ■
- CHAPTER 8 STOP-TIME 117
- Wall Street beckons ■ Interviewing at investment banks ■ Leaving the Labs ■
- CHAPTER 9 TRANSFORMER 129
- The Financial Strategies Group at Goldman, Sachs & Co. ■ Learning options theory ■ Becoming a quant ■ Interacting with traders ■ A new cast of characters ■
- CHAPTER 10 EASY TRAVEL TO OTHER PLANETS 143
- The history of options theory ■ Meeting and working with Fischer Black ■ The Black-Derman-Toy model ■
- CHAPTER 11 FORCE OF CIRCUMSTANCE 175
- Manners and mores on Wall Street ■ The further adventures of some acquaintances ■ Volatility is infectious ■

CHAPTER 12	A SEVERED HEAD	191
■	A troubled year at Salomon Bros. ■ Modeling mortgages ■ Salomon's skill at quantitative marketing ■ Mercifully laid off ■
CHAPTER 13	CIVILIZATION AND ITS DISCONTENTS	203
■	Goldman as home ■ Heading the Quantitative Strategies Group ■ Equity derivatives ■ The Nikkei puts and exotic options ■ Nothing beats working closely with traders ■ Financial engineering becomes a real field ■
CHAPTER 14	LAUGHTER IN THE DARK	225
■	The puzzle of the volatility smile ■ Beyond Black-Scholes: the race to develop local-volatility models of options ■ The right model is hard to find ■
CHAPTER 15	THE SNOWS OF YESTERYEAR	251
■	Wall Street consolidates ■ Clothing goes casual ■ Moving from equity derivatives to firmwide risk ■ The bursting of the Internet bubble ■ Taking my leave ■
CHAPTER 16	THE GREAT PRETENDER	265
■	Full circle, back to Columbia ■ Physics and finance redux ■ Different endeavors require different degrees of precision ■ Financial models as gedanken experiments ■
	Acknowledgments	271
	About the Author	272
	Index	273

