

CONTENTS

EDITORS' NOTES	1
Sherry K. Watt, Ellen E. Fairchild, Kathleen M. Goodman
1. Christian Privilege, History, and Trends in U.S. Religion	5
Ellen E. Fairchild
This chapter focuses on Christian privilege, the history of religion in the founding of the United States, and current religious trends.
2. Practical Implications for Student Affairs Professionals' Work in Facilitating Students' Inner Development	13
Tricia A. Seifert, Noël Holman-Harmon
Using findings from a research study as the base, this chapter discusses ways student affairs practitioners can aid students on the journey to asking and answering life's big questions.
3. Difficult Dialogues at the Intersections of Race, Culture, and Religion	23
Dafina Lazarus Stewart, Adele Lozano
This chapter explores the relationship between Christian privilege and racial or cultural marginalization.
4. Working with Jewish Undergraduates	33
Warren J. Blumenfeld, Jacqueline R. Klein
This chapter explores issues surrounding Americans who identify with Judaism and Jewish student identity development and presents challenges that Jewish students face on American college campuses.
5. Facilitating Dialogue on Religion and Sexuality Using a Descriptive Approach	39
Richard W. McCarty
This chapter recommends the use of a descriptive approach, which seeks to describe a viewpoint rather than make a prescription concerning what ought to be, when facilitating dialogues about sexuality and religion.
6. Practical Suggestions to Accommodate the Needs of Muslim Students on Campus	47
Saba Rasheed Ali, Elham Bagheri
This chapter provides a brief introduction to Islamic tenets, discusses challenges facing Muslim college students, and offers practical suggestions for supporting Muslim students.

7. Invisible, Marginalized, and Stigmatized: Understanding and Addressing the Needs of Atheist Students 55

Kathleen M. Goodman, John A. Mueller

This chapter introduces the topic of atheist students to the field of student affairs and provides recommendations for creating a safe and affirming environment for this population.

8. Facilitating Difficult Dialogues at the Intersections of Religious Privilege 65

Sherry K. Watt

This chapter discusses the conditions that make dialogue surrounding religious privilege difficult and shares practical ways conversation can be made more productive around this topic.

INDEX 75