

Contents

Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xv
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Why Read this Book?	2
1.1.1 Learning for Agility	3
1.1.2 Learning Creates Competitive Advantage	3
1.1.3 Good People Like Learning	4
1.2 Who are Software Developers?	4
1.3 Software Developers are Knowledge Workers	6
1.4 Drucker's Challenge	8
1.5 The Prototype of Future Knowledge Workers	8
1.6 Software: Embedded Knowledge	10
1.7 Authority and Leadership	10
1.8 Practical Theory	11
1.9 Begin with Yourself	13
1.10 The Organization of the Book	14
2 Understanding Agile	17
2.1 The Roots of Agile Thinking	18
2.2 Positioning Agile	21
2.2.1 What is Lean?	23
2.2.2 What is a Learning Organization?	24
2.3 Common Practices of Agile Teams	24
2.3.1 Quality	25
2.3.2 Business Priorities	27
2.3.3 Design	27
2.3.4 Predictable Schedules and Time Boxes	28

2.3.5	Feedback and Communication	29
2.3.6	The New Bargain	30
2.4	Applicability Outside of Software Development	33
2.5	Conclusion	34
3	Knowledge	35
3.1	The Difference Between Knowledge and Information	35
3.2	Knowledge into Action	37
3.3	Explicit and Tacit Knowledge	39
3.4	Sticky Knowledge	41
3.5	Problems with Knowledge	43
3.5.1	Knowledge Can't be Mass-produced	43
3.5.2	Knowledge Flows	44
3.5.3	The Uniqueness of Knowledge	45
3.5.4	Business Strategy and the Form of the Organization	45
3.6	Where is Knowledge in Software Development?	46
3.6.1	Codification	47
3.6.2	Specification	48
3.6.3	Hand-over	48
3.6.4	The Documentation Myth	49
3.7	Knowledge Creation	50
3.8	Conclusion	51
4	Learning	53
4.1	Three Knowledge Domains	53
4.2	Developing Software is Learning	55
4.3	Learning Benefits Your Business	55
4.4	Learning Theories	57
4.4.1	Single-loop and Double-loop Learning	57
4.4.2	Learning Styles	60
4.5	Learning, Change, Innovation and Problem Solving	65
4.6	The Role of Leaders	66
4.7	Seed Learning	67
4.7.1	Personal Reflection	68
4.7.2	Training Courses	70
4.7.3	Talk Programmes	70
4.7.4	Conferences	71
4.7.5	Company Libraries	71
4.7.6	Book Study Groups	71
4.7.7	Wikis	72
4.7.8	Blogs	72
4.7.9	Searchable Intranets	72

4.7.10 Welcome Debate	73
4.8 Conclusion	74
5 The Learning Organization	75
5.1 Defining the Learning Organization	76
5.1.1 Companies Learn Through People	77
5.1.2 The Role of IT in Organizational Learning	79
5.1.3 Technology Domination	80
5.1.4 The Search for Good People	81
5.2 The Infinite and the Finite Game	82
5.3 The Layers of the Organization	83
5.3.1 Trust and Honesty	85
5.3.2 Slack	86
5.4 Learning in Practice: Senge’s View	87
5.4.1 Personal Mastery	87
5.4.2 Shared Vision	88
5.4.3 Team Learning	89
5.4.4 Mental Models	90
5.4.5 Systems Thinking	92
5.4.6 And Reflection	93
5.5 Blocks to Learning	94
5.5.1 Invisibility	94
5.5.2 Camouflage	95
5.5.3 Personal Defences	96
5.5.4 Micro-projects and Solo Developers	98
5.5.5 Resource Pools	100
5.5.6 Failure to Act	101
5.6 Conclusion	102
6 Information Technology – the Bringer of Change	103
6.1 Change	104
6.2 Benefits of Technology Change	105
6.3 Change is What IT People do to Other People	108
6.4 Software Projects Fail: Why are we Surprised?	110
6.5 Change Starts with Business Requirements	111
6.5.1 Mistakes	113
6.5.2 Lack of Skills	113
6.5.3 Gold Plating and Information Overload	114
6.5.4 Communication	114
6.5.5 Mental Models	114
6.5.6 Tacit Knowledge	115
6.5.7 Time Passes, Things Change	115

6.5.8	Learning Occurs	116
6.5.9	Looking for the Problem Changes the Problem	117
6.5.10	Late Requests are More Valuable	118
6.6	Conclusion	119
7	Understanding Change	121
7.1	Defining Change	121
7.2	The Change Spectrum	122
7.3	Radical Change	124
7.4	Routine Change in Software Development	126
7.4.1	Lack of Routine	128
7.4.2	Consequences	130
7.4.3	Finding Routine	130
7.5	Continuous Improvement	131
7.5.1	Failings of Incremental Change	132
7.5.2	Failure to go Fast Enough	133
7.5.3	Failure to go Far Enough	134
7.6	Charting a Course	135
7.6.1	Make it Continuous	136
7.6.2	Going Further	136
7.6.3	Little Bits of Radical Change	137
7.6.4	Hard Choices	138
7.7	Internal and External Forces for Change	138
7.7.1	Combining Internal/external and Radical/incremental	138
7.7.2	Choosing Between Radical and Incremental Change	139
7.8	Conclusion	140
8	Change Models	141
8.1	Learning and Change	142
8.2	Lewin's Change Theory	143
8.3	Satir's Theory of Change	145
8.4	Kotter's Model of Change	147
8.5	Theories E and O of Change	149
8.6	Appreciative Inquiry	150
8.6.1	The Change Trap	151
8.6.2	A Different Approach	151
8.6.3	Appreciative Inquiry in Use	152
8.6.4	Aspirational Change	152
8.7	Models, Models, Models	153
8.8	Motivating Change	154
8.8.1	Push-and-pull Motivators	154
8.8.2	Shared Understanding	157

8.8.3	Blocks to Change	157
8.9	When Not to Change	159
8.10	Conclusion	160
9	Making Change Happen	161
9.1	Build a Case for Change	162
9.1.1	Find the Problems and Forces	162
9.1.2	Finding Problems	163
9.1.3	Communicate the Problem	164
9.2	Slack in Action: Make Time and Space for Learning and Change	165
9.3	Leading the Change	166
9.3.1	Create Awareness of the Problem	167
9.3.2	Create Awareness of Opportunities	168
9.3.3	Beware Unsolvable Problems	169
9.3.4	Communicate a Failure	169
9.3.5	Focus the Team on What Needs to be Done	170
9.3.6	Explain the Change	171
9.3.7	Model the Changes Yourself	171
9.3.8	Ask for Volunteers (Self-selecting Teams)	172
9.4	Create Feedback Loops	173
9.5	Remove Barriers	175
9.6	Conclusion	175
10	Individuals and Empowerment	177
10.1	Involve People	178
10.1.1	Motivation	178
10.1.2	Time for Listening	179
10.1.3	Ask People their Opinions	179
10.1.4	Find and Remove Mental Blocks	180
10.2	Coaching	181
10.3	Empowerment	183
10.3.1	Why Empower People?	183
10.3.2	How do You Empower Individuals?	184
10.3.3	The Leader's Role	186
10.3.4	How Do You Empower a Team?	187
10.3.5	Empowerment Takes Time	188
10.3.6	Empowerment Conflicts	188
10.4	That Difficult Individual	189
10.5	Developing the Next Leaders	192
10.6	Time to Go	193
10.7	Conclusion	194

11 Rehearsing Tomorrow	195
11.1 Future Memories	196
11.2 Planning	197
11.2.1 What's the Problem with Traditional Planning?	199
11.2.2 Planning as Learning	202
11.2.3 Scenario Planning	203
11.3 Change Events	205
11.3.1 Improvement Meetings	205
11.3.2 Improvement Worksheet	206
11.3.3 Process Miniatures	206
11.3.4 Retrospectives	207
11.3.5 Workout	208
11.3.6 Kaizen and Kaikaku	210
11.3.7 Frequency	211
11.4 Outsiders	211
11.4.1 Consultants	212
11.4.2 Training	213
11.4.3 Facilitators	214
11.4.4 Coaches	215
11.5 Conclusion	215
12 New Beginnings	217
12.1 The Change Problem	218
12.2 Bottom-up Over Top-down	219
12.3 Begin with Yourself	219
12.3.1 Warnings	220
12.3.2 Legitimacy	220
12.3.3 In a Lonely Place	221
12.4 Make Learning Happen	223
12.5 Create a Vision, Draw up a Plan	224
12.6 Three Interlocking Ideas	226
12.7 Change Never Ends	227
12.8 Conclusion	228
Further Reading	229
References	231
Index	235