

Contents

Foreword	xi
Carol Gilligan
Acknowledgments	xvii
The Author	xxi
Prologue: Peeling an Onion	1
Part One: Considering Trust and Relationship
Introduction: Constructing a Relational Landscape of Learning	5
1. Trusting Relationships, Trusting What You Know	17
Part Two: Listening to the Students
2. José: “Response Is the Whole Thing”	41
3. Maya: Two Shelves for Knowing	63
4. Sharon: Constructing Confidence	83
5. Gabe: Examining Two Kinds of Body Knowledge	103
Part Three: The Relational Context of Learning and Teaching
6. Who Is Speaking? Deciding Which Truth to Tell	123

7. Who Is Listening? Deciding What Knowledge to Share	135
8. The Relational Learner: Why Classroom Relationships Matter	151
Epilogue: The Heart of the Onion	173
Appendix: Listening Closely: Discovery and the Research Relationship	177
References	193
Index	205