CONTENTS

EDITOR'S NOTES	1
Tara Fenwick
1. Tides of Change: New Themes and Questions in Workplace Learning	3
Tara Fenwick
As an overview of contemporary scholarship in workplace learning using sociocultural perspectives, this chapter outlines selected themes in this literature and offers questions emerging from their debates for researchers and educators.
2. Expanding Notions of Work and Learning: Profiles of Latent Power	19
D. W. Livingstone
A wide-ranging study of different forms of informal learning occurring in different spheres of work found not only workers' high involvement in all kinds of informal learning but also a general lack of recognition of this learning in the workplace.
3. Changing Questions of Workplace Learning Researchers	31
Bruce Spencer
Do the purposes of workplace learning and education perpetuate worker oppression or workplace democracy? This chapter critically explores the political and economic contexts of workplace learning.
4. Workplace Learning as a Cultural Technology	41
Nicky Solomon
This chapter addresses important issues of culture and difference in workplace learning, showing readers ways of critically analyzing workplace discourses to interrupt their shaping power.
5. Women, Work, and Learning	53
Laura L. Bierema
The nature of women's learning and career development is often overlooked in discussions of workplace learning. This chapter shows why educators need to foreground gender in their practice, teaching about the glass ceiling and promoting critical career development.
6. Co-Participation: Affordance and Engagement at Work	63
Stephen Billett
This chapter presents a model of guided learning based on a situative theory of co-participation in workplace learning and shows ways that educators can engage people in work activity to increase meaningful, equitable learning and even critical thinking.

7. Hot Action at Work: A Different Understanding of “Understanding” 73

David Beckett

A situative model of workplace learning as anticipative action is explained. Just-in-time training is reconceptualized as a useful approach to help workers learn through feedforwarding, increasing their competence through learning-in-action.

8. Learning Communities: Understanding the Workplace
as a Complex System 85

Brent Davis, Dennis Sumara

Complexity theory helps describe how learning in work unfolds within a system of interactions and relationships. Concepts of self-organization, disequilibrium, and coemergence are explained, with a general purpose of encouraging mindful engagement of participants in systems.
