Index

Page references followed by \textit{fig} indicate an illustrated figure; followed by \textit{t} indicate a table.

Accountability: demonstrating client expenditure, 447; responsibility charting for improvement and, 13; shifting consultant paradigms with focus on, 107–110. \textit{See also} Managing for results

Action plans: advantages and disadvantages of, 306; data collection using, 299–306; developing components for a successful, 300, 302–305; example of, 301\textit{fig}; planning budget using, 121; SMART requirements for, 302; template for, 121, 122\textit{fig}

Active listening, 86

Activity-based costing, 13

Affinity Group webinars, 106

After action review (AAR), 85

AIMC (Association of Internal Management Consultant): AIMC consulting scorecard, 162\textit{fig}–167; Best Practices Benchmarking Survey by, 105; Certified Performance Consultant (CPC) through, 484; competency model of, 73; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) by, 90–91; research reports sent out by, 105–106

Alliance integration, 34

Alliances: administrating a framework for improved integration with, 34; as consulting business plan stakeholder, 42–43. \textit{See also} Strategic partners

Analysis costs, 383–384
Application. See ROI Level 3: Application and Implementation

Audio monitoring, 298–299

Auditing and Financial Services, 140, 142–145

Balanced scorecard, 155–156, 157

The Balanced Scorecard (Kaplan and Norton), 155

Behavior checklist and codes, 297–298

Benchmarking: as client development tool, 105; internal consultant role in coordinating best practices for, 33; ROI Level 0 input measures used for, 320; ROI Level 1 Reaction data collection on data from other project, 323–324. See also Performance Management Scorecard

Benefit/cost ratio (BCR): description of, 428–429; formulas for calculating ROI by comparing to, 200, 201; ROI process model approach to calculating the ROI and, 200–202

Best Practices Benchmarking Survey (AIMC), 105

Block, Peter, 470

Blogs, 101–102

Brainstorming
strategic/business planning, 12

Brochures and pamphlets, 468

Budget types: fixed and variable, 126; planning, programming, and budgeting system, 126–127; zero-based budgeting, 127

Budgeting: collecting information required for, 124–125; planning process for, 119–121; process for, 122–124; supporting action plans, 121–122

Budgeting strategic planning: goals, strategies, and objectives, 120–121; overall direction setting, 120; situation analysis, 119–120

Budgets: ROI driven by increasing consultant, 184–185; types of, 125–127; using the, 127–128

Building resilience: change management using, 13; increasing consultant role in, 92–93; key consulting skills related to, 86

Business games, 293–294

Business impact. See ROI Level 4: Business Impact

Business model reframing, 12

Business needs: determining the payoff opportunities for, 231–244; as project driver, 334–335; V model Level 4 for determining the, 236–248; V
model on aligning project
objectives with, 235–251.
See also Client needs; ROI
Level 4: Business Impact

Business performance data:
developing new measures, 309–310; existing measures, 308–309;
monitoring, 307–310

Business plan outline: client development, 44, 50;
financial plan, 44, 52;
goals and milestones,
44–45, 52–53;
management, 44, 51–52;
market analysis, 43,
48–49; operations, 44,
50–51; products services
niche, 44, 49–50; purpose and approach, 43, 45–48;
risks and opportunities,
45, 53–54

Business plans: importance of an effective, 40–41;
maximizing consulting value through, 39; outline of a typical, 43–54; role of stakeholders in the,
41–43

Business process improvement, 13

Businessweek, 186

Capacity-free consulting model, 72, 142

Case studies: Family Mutual Insurance Company (FMI), 205–215; as media for communicating results, 468–469

Causal chain scorecard, 158–161

Centers of Excellence (CoEs):
departmental support of,
94; description and
functions of, 9–10;
enhancing capabilities for overall organization through, 146; increasing consulting value to the enterprise by building, 31;
managing for results
through, 112

Certified Performance
Consultant (CPC), 484

Change capabilities, 140,
146–147

Change Leadership Role,
91–92

Change management: common methodologies used for, 13–14; as example of
consulting-related CoE, 32; for increasing value of internal consulting to enterprise, 31–33;
integrating project
management and, 87–91;
internal consulting role in, 13; key consulting skills related to, 86;
Project and Change
Management
Methodology (AIMC) on execution of, 90. See also Overcoming resistance to change
Change projects: leading, 91–93; organizational capabilities to engage in, 140, 146–147; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on initiating, 89

Checklists: behavior, 297–298; as form of questionnaire, 272, 273

Client development: assessment of, 95–96; building related tools and products support, 103–107; consulting business plan on, 44, 50; creating a process for, 98–100; using the Internet for, 101–103; new client development flowchart, 99

Client development tools: benchmarking, 105; books and articles, 104–105; importance of building, 103–104; pie chart on all products and services, 106–107; research reports, 105–106; software, 104; workshops, 104

Client needs: market analysis to define the clients and, 43, 48–49; monetary values conversion consideration of, 406. See also Business needs

Client relationship: AIMC scorecard measurement on, 162, 163–164; balanced scorecard measurement on, 155–156, 157; key consulting skills related to, 86; ROI Level I Reaction data on customer satisfaction of, 322–323

Clients/customers: consulting business plan on development of, 44, 50; as consulting business plan stakeholder, 42; consulting project impact estimates by, 366–367; demonstrating accountability for expenditures by, 447; departmental support of interface with, 94; e-mail used to communicate with potential, 103; importance of consistent consulting processes related to, 85; importance of managing the project to delivery to, 57–61; key project payoff measures from perspective, 335; market analysis to define the, 43, 48–49; project communication between consultant and, 60; quality costs of customer dissatisfaction, 384; ROI data demands by, 178–180; ROI Methodology data from internal, 318–319; as source of ROI
Methodology data, 317; transferring ownership from internal consultants to, 140, 145–146. See also Market analysis

Clients/customers satisfaction:
balanced scorecard on, 157; monitoring reaction and learning data on, 327; relationship between loyalty and, 395; ROI Level 1 Reaction data collection on, 322–323

Coaching: consulting business plan on, 86; increasing consultant role in, 92

Communicating information strategies: presenting Impact study data to senior management, 472–475; providing early feedback, 469–472

Communicating needs: to build credibility for consulting team, 447; to demonstrate accountability for client expenditures, 447; to drive action for improvement, 446; to enhance results and quality of future feedback, 446; to gain support for project and objectives, 445–446; to prepare participants for consulting project, 446; to secure agreement on project issues, 446; to secure approval for project, 445; to show complete results and measures, 447; to stimulate involvement desire in participants, 445; to underscore importance of measuring results, 447

Communicating results:
analyzing reactions to the, 475–477; audience of the, 452–456; Impact/ROI study report for, 456–463; key issues of, 441–448; planning the, 450–451; selecting media used for, 463–469

Communicating results issues:
challenge of explaining complex contributions, 441–442; communication is a sensitive issue, 442–443; communication is necessary to make improvements, 442; different target audiences need different information, 443; need for timely and consistent communication, 443–444; unbiased and modes communication, 444–445

Communication: active listening element of, 86; e-mail, 103, 467–468; importance of consultant and client, 60; Internet
Communication (continued)
resources for, 101–103; key consulting skills related to, 86; on project results, 60–61; questionnaires/surveys and issues related to, 280–281 Communication audiences: analyzing reactions to results communication by, 475–477; basis for selecting the, 453–456; common target, 454t; different ones need different information, 443; understanding the potential, 452–453
Communication media: case studies, 468–469; for communicating project results, 463–469; e-mail and electronic, 103, 467–468; interim and progress reports, 464–466; meetings, 464; project brochures and pamphlets, 468; routine communications tools, 466–467
Communication plan: for communicating the complete results, 450–451; for communication policy issues, 448–450; for the entire project, 450; preparing the, 261; ROI analysis plan on the, 260fig, 261–262fig
Comparison groups, 348
Competition: market analysis to define the, 43, 48–49; ROI used to achieve competitive advantage over the, 180–181
Compliance management: description of, 15; internal consulting role in, 15
Consistent service delivery, 85
Consultant workshops, 104
The Consultant’s Guide to Results-Driven Business Proposals, 151
Consulting: increasing results-based orientation of, 17; need for increased implementation support, 18; project impact by, 344–345, 357–368; shifting expectations of, 17–19; structuring the processes of, 61–69. See also External consultants; Internal consultants Consulting call to action: maximizing value of consulting at the individual project level, 482–484; maximizing value of consulting at the organizational level, 481–482
Consulting practice: client development, 44, 50; defining your niche, 44, 49–50; establishing goals and milestones, 44–45, 52–53; financial plan related to, 44, 52; the Internet used as part of, 101–103; management of the, 44, 51–52; market analysis required for, 43, 48–49; objective for projects, 219–232; operations requirements for, 44, 50–51; purpose and approach of, 43, 45–48; risks and opportunities of, 45, 53–54; ROI to show increased revenues and profits for, 181

Consulting practice areas: five most frequent, 86–87; key internal consulting, 11–19

Consulting processes: contracting, 62–64; management for consistent, 84–85; opportunity analysis, 62; strategic portfolio management, 64–69

Consulting project impact: chain of impact, 344–345; customer estimates of, 366–367; expert estimation of, 367–368; gathering credible estimates on, 357–368; manager’s estimate of, 364–366; participant’s estimate of, 358–364. See also Isolating consulting effects; Projects

Consulting-related COEs (Communities of Practice): change management example of, 32; developing CoE expertise through, 31; Lean/Six Sigma and complexity reduction example of, 32; organization effectiveness and development example of, 32; performance measurement and management example of, 32; process improvement and continuous improvement example of, 32

Consulting skills: Certified Performance Consultant (CPC) for building capability and, 484; enhancing, 86–87; key for success, 86; target competency frameworks for developing, 69–71

Consulting success factors: address the financial issues, 21–22; adequate planning, 19–20; assessment of the, 30–31; create effective proposals or consulting contracts and reports, 23–25; delivering value, 20–21; develop a unique approach, 22–23;
Consulting success factors
(continued)
developing client partnerships, 20; improve your skills, 27–29; manage the consulting practice effectively, 22; measure success and communicate routinely, 26–27; operating in an ethical way, 25–26

Consulting value proposition:
call to action to maximizing, 481–484; consultant orchestration of effective performance for, 76–78; consultant planning for skill and resource, 69–72; creating a consultant high-performance culture adding to, 72–74; developing consulting methodology that adds to, 54–57; establishing and integrating consultant areas of practice for, 74–75; executing effective marketing and business development, 95–107; external consultant help to structure competency framework, 79; external consultants delivery of specific training modules, 79; how a consulting business plan adds to, 39–54; implications for maximizing value-added internal consulting, 139–151; increasing pressure on external consultants to demonstrate, 83; maintaining a professional management system for, 83–93; managing for results, 107–113; managing suppliers for value, 133–139; monitoring and controlling costs, 128–133; planning and budgeting process, 119–127; positioning business partner role, 93–95; structuring consulting processes that add to, 61–69; of successful project management by consultants, 57–61. See also Internal value-added consulting; Organizations Contamination issue, 349

Continuous improvement. See Performance improvement and continuous improvement

Contracting: business plan on service agreement, 58–59; consulting process of, 62–64; including expectations for consistency consulting processes in, 85; supplier partnership, 137–138
Contracts: on avoiding “scope creep” in project, 63; data collection using performance, 306–307; internal consultant role in ensuring quality consulting, 141; service agreements, 58–59

Control groups: contamination issue of, 349; description of, 347; environmental influences issue of, 349–351; isolating consulting effects by using, 347–351

Converting to monetary value. See Monetary values conversion

Copyrights protection, 57

Cost center approach, 150

Cost control. See Project cost control

Customers. See Clients/customers

Data: business performance, 307–310; calculating annual value of improvements in, 376, 377t; calculating the change in, 375–376, 377t; communicating project information, 470–472; determining annual monetary value amount for changes in, 376, 377t; determining the value of each unit of, 375; hard, 336, 337t; higher-level, 334; matching the data collection to type of, 311; monitoring business performance, 307–310; soft, 336, 338t; V model use of business needs hard and soft, 246t–247t. See also Data sources; Monetary values conversion; Performance measurement and management

Data analysis: Impact/ROI study report on, 458; ROI Level 1: Learning measures used in, 327–328; ROI Level 1: Reaction measures used in, 327–329

Data collection: application and impact issues related to timing of, 339fig; Impact/ROI study report on, 458; ROI Level 1: Reaction measures included in, 321–324, 326–327; ROI Level 2: Learning measures included in, 324–326; ROI Level 3: Application and Implementation measures included in, 329–332, 333t; ROI Level 4: Business Impact measures included in, 332, 334–338t; ROI Methodology plan for the, 255–258; ROI
Data collection (continued)
   process model, 194–195.
   See also Participants
Data collection methods:
   accuracy of, 313; action plans, 299–306; cultural bias for specific, 314;
   focus groups, 289–292;
   interviews, 287–289;
   matching the appropriate
   one for each ROI
   Methodology level,
   310–314; monitoring
   business performance
data, 307–310;
   observation, 294–299;
   performance contracts,
   306–307; pre- and
   postproject comparison testing, 292;
   questionnaires and
   surveys, 271–286;
   simulations, 292–294;
   utility of using multiple,
   313–314
Data sources: application and impact issues related to, 339–340; client/senior managers, 317; consulting participants, 317–318;
   consulting team, 318;
   internal customers,
   318–319. See also Data
Decision making: key consulting skills related to, 86; outsourcing, 134–136; for selecting technique for isolating
   consulting effects, 368–369
Delayed report method, 298
Deliverables: consistent service, 85; external training
   modules, 79; importance
   of managing project,
   57–61; monitoring
   supplier performance on,
   138
Direct vs. prorated costs, 419
Discounted cash flow, 432–433
E-mail communication, 103,
   467–468
Economist, 186
Emotional intelligence, 84
Empathy, 84
Employee engagement: Project and Change Management
   Methodology (AIMC) on
   monitoring, 90;
   relationship between employee turnover and,
   396fig
Employee turnover: data
   summary of costs of,
   392–393r; relationship between job engagement and, 395–396fig
Employees: intangible measures linked with programs for, 399–403;
   monetary values
   converted from work time
   data on, 384–386
Environmental influences issue,
   349–351
ERIC (Educational Resources Information Center), 392 Evaluation: after action review (AAR), 85; consulting costs related to, 417(fig, 420t, 425–426;
Impact/ROI study report on methodology and, 458;
ROI analysis plan for, 255–267. See also ROI Methodology
Executive coaching: consulting business plan on, 86;
increasing consultant role in, 92
Executive/management summary, 457
Expense account classifications, 133
Experimental group, 347
Experts: calculating standard monetary values using input from, 389–391; consulting impact estimate from, 367–368
External consultants: becoming thought leaders and leading change, 91–93;
calculating standard monetary values using input from, 389–391;
Certified Performance Consultant (CPC) for building capability of individual, 484; increasing pressure to demonstrate organizational value on, 83; internal consultant monitoring of investment in, 140–141; key success factors for, 19–31;
maximizing staffing a combined internal and, 140, 141–142;
opportunities for collaboration by, 8;
Performance Management Scorecard role of, 173–174; reaction and learning data used to evaluate, 328; shifting expectations for role of, 17–19; as strategic partners to internal consultants, 113–114; supplier financial management impact on, 139. See also Consulting: Internal consultants
External consulting management plan, 44, 51–52
External consulting valuation. See Consulting value proposition External failure costs, 383
Family Mutual Insurance Company (FMI) case study, 205–215
Feedback: communicating in order to enhance quality of future, 446;
communicating information by providing early project, 469–472;
formalized project performance, 85; key consulting skills related to, 86; reaction and Feedback (continued)
learning data used to provide individual, 329
Financial issues: AIMC scorecard in, 162fig, 163; Auditing and Financial Services, 140, 142–145; balanced scorecard measurement on, 155–156, 157fig; budgeting, 119–128; business plan on consulting financial plan, 44, 52; causal chain scorecard measurement on, 158–161; implications for maximizing value-added internal consulting, 139–151; managing suppliers for value, 133–139; monitoring and controlling costs, 128–133; ROI to show increased revenues and profits for consulting, 181. See also Project cost control
Financial Times, 186
Fixed budgets, 126
Flawless Consulting (Block), 470
Focus groups: applications for evaluation, 290; guidelines for using, 290–292; overview of, 289–290
Forbes magazine, 186
Forecasting: example of relationship modeling for, 354fig; performance Management Scorecard processes used for, 172, 173; reaction and learning data used to identify improvements for, 328–329
Formalized performance feedback, 85
Fortune magazine, 186
Fully loaded costs, 412, 418fig
Gap analysis: scorecard process of conducting a, 170; tools to use for, 170–171
Goals and milestones (business plan), 44–45, 52–53
Hard data, 336, 337t
Higher-level data. See specific ROI level
Historical data: calculating monetary values using, 387–388; two conditions for calculating monetary value using, 388
How to Build a Successful Consulting Practice (Phillips), 79
Human Capital Management, 140, 142–145
Human Resources (HR):
changing role of internal support by, 10; client partnership support by, 94; supporting internal consulting integration across the enterprise, 140, 142–145
Impact objectives: description of, 227, 229; Impact/ROI study report on, 457–458; typical ones after the project completion, 229–230

Impact/ROI study report: on background information, 457; on barriers and enablers, 460, 463t; on conclusions and recommendations, 460–461; on data collection, integration, and analysis, 458; description of the, 456–457; on evaluation strategy/methodology, 458; on intangible measures, 460; management/executive summary of, 457; organization and format of an, 461, 462t–463t; presenting to senior management, 472–475fig; on project objectives, 457–458; on Reaction, Learning, Application and Implementation, and Business Impact levels, 458–459. See also Research reports

Implementation management: change management using, 13; Performance Management Scorecard processes for, 171; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) phase of, 89–91; ROI process model on, 204. See also ROI Level 3: Application and Implementation

Information Technology (IT): changing role of internal support by, 10–11; client partnership support by, 94; as consulting business plan stakeholder, 42; organizational effectiveness role by, 14; supporting internal consulting integration across the enterprise, 140, 142–145

Innovation management: AIMC scorecard measurement on, 162fig, 166–167; change management using, 13

Innovation programs: AIMC scorecard measurement on development of, 162fig, 166–167; comprehensive approach to managing, 35; internal consultant role in improved, 34–36

Inputs: causal chain scorecard measure of, 158–161; IPO (inputs, processes, and outcomes) scorecard measure of, 156–157fig; ROI Methodology and importance of measuring Level 0, 319–321
Intangible benefits: analysis of, 403; Impact/ROI study report on, 460; monetary values conversion versus measuring the, 399; sources of the, 401–403; typical measures linked with programs, 400–401

Interim reports, 464–466

Internal consultant operations: administering framework for integrating alliances and partnering, 34; building Centers of Excellence (CoEs), 31–33; coordinating external research and analysis and benchmarking, 33; creating a business plan, 39–54; creating a consulting business plan, 39–54; creating a high-performance culture, 72–74; developing a unique methodology for your practice, 54–57; developing systematic approach to program innovation, 34–36; establishing and integrating areas of practice to add to, 74–75; increasing pressure to demonstrate, 83; key benefits of creating value through, 8–9; maturity continuum of, 113, 114fig; orchestrating an effective performance system, 76–78; planning for the skill and resource requirements, 69–72; project management, 57–61; securing skills and resources, 69–72; structuring consulting processes, 61–69. See also Performance measurement and management

Internal consultant skills: AIMC competency model focused on, 73; Certified Performance Consultant (CPC) for building capability and, 484; as key success factor, 27–29; target competency framework for training, 69–71. See also Skill development

Internal consultants: becoming thought leaders and leading change, 91–93; benefits of understanding importance of relationships, 84; Certified Performance Consultant (CPC) for building capability of individual, 484; Change Leadership Role taken by, 91–92; creating a high-performance culture for, 72–74; external consultants as strategic partners to, 113–114; increasing pressure to demonstrate organizational value on, 83; project communication between clients and, 60; reaction and learning data used to evaluate, 328; recruiting strategies for positioning, 71; securing external partnering, 71–72. See also Consulting

Internal consulting: AIMC scorecard measurement on, 162; fig, 164–166; aligning and integrating across the enterprise, 140, 142–145; changing role of internal support functions by, 9–11; creating a high-performance culture for, 72–74; drivers of the recent growth of, 5–7; emergence of, 3–5; implications for maximizing value-added, 139–151; increasing the value to the enterprise of, 31–36; key practice areas and projects by, 11–19; key success factors of, 19–31; maximizing staffing a combined external and, 140, 141–142; opportunities for external consultant collaboration with, 8; shifting expectations for role of, 17–19. See also External consulting; Internal value-added consulting

Internal consulting areas:
additional projects and, 16; change management, 13–14; compliance and risk management, 15; organizational effectiveness, 14; overview of the key, 11–12; performance measurement and management, 15–16; process and operational improvement, 12–13; strategic/business planning, 12

Internal Consulting Excellence (Trotter): on comprehensive benchmarking program, 33, 151; on Internal Consulting Maturity Continuum, 113; on leading performance measurement and programs for internal consultants, 167; on managing innovation, 35–36; Model of Internal Consulting described in, 78; on strategic planning for budget, 119–121

Internal failure costs, 383
Internal rate of return (IRR), 433

Internal value-added consulting: aligning and integrating internal consulting capabilities, 140, 142–145; developing strategic portfolio management approach, 140, 147–149; enhancing overall organizational change capabilities, 140, 146–147; ensuring quality consulting contracts, 140, 141; ensuring sustaining value from internal consulting investment, 140, 151; establishing an economic value tracking system, 140, 149–151; implications and key factors in, 139–151; maximizing a combined internal-external staffing model, 140, 141–142; monitoring external consulting spend, 140–141; transferring ownership to clients, 145–146. See also Consulting value proposition; Internal consulting

Interviews: guidelines for, 288–289; overview of, 287; types of, 287–288

IPO (inputs, processes, and outcomes) scorecard, 156–157 fig

Isolating consulting effects: calculating the impact of other factors for, 356–357; control groups used for, 347–351; identifying other factors prior to, 345–347; importance of successfully, 343–344; relationship modeling for, 353–356; ROL process model on, 192 fig, 195–196; selecting the technique for, 368–369; trend-line analysis for, 351–353. See also Consulting project impact; Projects

Kaplan and Norton’s balanced scorecard, 156, 157 fig
Kaplan, R., 155

Knowledge management, 324

Lean/Six Sigma: as example of consulting-related CoE, 32; for increasing value of internal consulting to enterprise, 31–33, 74; process and operational improvement using, 13; relationship management using, 84

Internet resources: blogs and social media, 101–102; communicating with potential clients, 103; newsletter publishing, 102–103; website, 101
Learning needs (V model level), 236, 250. See also ROI
Level 2: Learning

Learning objectives: three components required for each, 226; three kinds of project, 224–225; typical action verbs associated with typical, 225

Making Human Capital Analytics Work (Phillips and Phillips), 356

Management/executive summary, 457

Managerial consulting impact estimate, 364–366

Managing for results: ensuring that consulting generates the right solution, 110; growing importance of, 107; performance measurement, 112–113; setting objectives at multiple levels, 110; shifting paradigms with focus on accountability, 107–110; transferring ownership to organizations, 111–112. See also Accountability

Market analysis, 43, 48–49. See also Clients/customers

Market management: client development assessment, 95–96; creating a client development process, 98–100; Internet resources used for, 101–107; marketing versus selling in context of, 96–98

Marketing: reaction and learning data used for future project, 329; selling versus, 96; six basic principles as it relates to consulting, 96–97

Meeting management: for communicating project results, 464; key consulting skills related to, 86; ROI planning, 264–267

Mentoring, 86

Methodologies: change management, 13–14; Impact/ROI study report on evaluation strategy and, 458; performance improvement and continuous improvement, 16; performance measurement and management, 16; process improvement and continuous improvement, 13; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC), 88–91; strategic/business planning, 12. See also ROI Methodology

Methodology development: Mooney’s five-phase consulting model on systematic process,
Methodology development
(continued)
54–56; protecting unique expertise, 56–57
Microsoft Excel, 264
Microsoft Project, 59
Microsoft Word, 264
Mission statements: description and purpose of the, 45;
examples of internal consulting plan on, 43, 45–46
Model of Internal Consulting, 78
Monetary values conversion:
applying the credibility test on, 405–406;
consider an adjustment for time value of money for, 407;
considering a potential management adjustment to, 406–407;
five key steps for, 374–378; guidelines on selecting the technique for, 404–405;
importance of being able to convert data to, 373–374; process of converting ROI data into, 196–198; process of ROI data into monetary values, 196–198; review the client’s needs as consideration for, 406;
ROI analysis plan on, 259, 260fig; when intangible benefits of projects should be measured instead of,
399–403. See also Data;
Standard monetary values conversion steps: 1: focus on a unit of measure, 374–375; 2: determine the value of each unit, 375; 3: calculate the change in performance data, 375–376, 377t; 4: determine an annual amount for the change, 376, 377t
Monitoring: business performance data, 307–310; consulting costs related to, 128–133, 411–412, 417fig, 420t, 425; customer satisfaction data of reaction and learning levels, 327;
increasing role of consultants in, 93; by internal consultants of external consultant investment, 140–141;
observeration through audio and system forms of, 298–299; Performance Management Scorecard, 169–170, 172; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on, 90–91; supplier performance, 138
Mooney, P., 54, 55
Mooney’s five-phase consulting model, 54–56
Index

Multiple-choice question, 272, 273fig

Network re-engineering, 13
Newsletter publishing (e-publishing), 102–103
Norton, D., 155

Objectives. See Project objectives

Observation: data collection through, 294–299; guidelines for effective, 295–297; methods for, 297–299

Observation methods: audio monitoring, 298–299; behavior checklist and codes, 297–298; delayed report, 298; system monitoring, 299; video recording, 298

Observers: ability to interpret and report observations by, 296; careful selection of, 296–297; minimizing influence of, 296; training and preparing, 295

Open-ended question, 272, 273fig

Operational dashboards, 16

Operations: areas of consulting, 51; consulting business plan on, 44, 50–51

Opportunity analysis: consulting business plan on risks and opportunities, 45, 53–54; description and implications of, 62; key consulting skills related to, 86; of payoff for business needs, 241–244

Organization change: capabilities for, 140, 146–147; consulting change management role, skills, and strategies for, 13–14, 31–33, 86–92; overcoming resistance to, 13, 86, 92–93

Organizational culture: change management role in changing, 13–14; creating a consulting high-performance, 72–74

Organizational effectiveness and development: as common practice consulting area, 87; description and functions of, 14; as example of consulting-related CoE, 32; for increasing value of internal consulting to enterprise, 31–33; IT role in, 14

Organizational learning: increasing need for continuous improvement and, 18; project objectives on, 224–226

Organizational Portfolio Management Groups, 64–66

Organizations: call to action for maximizing value of consulting to, 481–482; Organizations (continued)
change capabilities of, 140, 146–147; consulting areas of practice integration to create synergies, 75; increasing the value of internal consulting to the, 31–33; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on positioning change in, 91; transferring ownership from consultants to, 111–112. See also Consulting value proposition Outsourcing: decision making for, 134–136; strategy used for, 134
Overcoming resistance to change: change management using, 13; increasing consultant role in, 92–93; as key consulting skill, 86. See also Change management Ownership: transferring from consultants to organizations, 111–112; transferring from internal consultants to clients, 140, 145–146
Pamphlets and brochures, 468
Participants: contamination of control group by, 349; estimate on consulting project impact by,

358–364; focus groups, 299–306; interviewing, 287–289; monetary values using estimates from, 397–398; observation, 294–299; preparing them for the consulting project, 446; in questionnaires and surveys, 271–286; ROI Methodology data from consulting, 317–318; simulations, 292–294; stimulating desire to get involved by, 445; time for data input by, 311–312. See also Data collection Partners. See Strategic partners
Payback period, 431–432
Payoff needs: business impact data on client, 335; obvious and not-so-obvious opportunities, 241–244; V model Level 5 for defining the potential, 236fig, 241–244
Penalty costs, 383
Performance contracts, 306–307
Performance improvement and continuous improvement: common methodologies used for, 16; as example of consulting-related CoE, 32; importance of consistent consulting process to, 85; increasing need for learning and, 18;
for increasing value of internal consulting to enterprise, 31–33

Performance Management Scorecard: AIMC consulting scorecard, 162–167, 162{fig}; basic IPO (inputs, processes, and outcomes, 156–157{fig}; the causal chain scorecard, 158–161; description of the, 16, 155–156; increased interest and use of the, 155; internal consultant establishing value tracking using, 140, 149–151; Kaplan and Norton’s balanced scorecard, 156, 157{fig}; process of using the, 167–174; process, operational, financial, and growth categories of, 155.

See also Benchmarking

Performance Management Scorecard processes: conduct a gap analysis, 170–171; forecast the value, 172, 173; identify/select action/solution, 171; implement action/solution, 171; monitor the data, 169–170; monitor the process, 172; overview of using scorecard to drive improvement, 167–168{fig}; repeat the process a second time, 173; role of external consultants in the, 173–174; select the measures, 168; set the target, 168–169; show the value, 173

Performance measurement and management: adding consulting value to organization through effective, 76–78; common methodologies used in, 16; as common practice consulting area, 87; description of, 15–16; as example of consulting-related CoE, 32; formalized performance feedback and AAR (after action review), 85; internal consulting to orchestrate effective, 76–78; managing for results by using, 112–113; monitoring business performance data, 307–310; supplier performance, 138. See also Data; Internal consultant operations

Performance needs: behaviors which may impact, 248; diagnostic tools to determine, 249–250; V model Level 3 to determine, 236{fig}, 248–250

Performance targets, 16
Performance testing, 292
Phillips, P., 356
Pilot projects: control groups used to isolate consulting effects of, 347–351; description of, 347
Planning: budgeting, 119–128; communication, 260fig, 261–262fig, 448–452; project, 86, 89; ROI analysis plan, 255–267
Portfolio management: as common practice area, 87; Strategic Portfolio Management model for, 64–69, 140, 147–149. See also Project management Postproject testing, 292
Preference needs (V model level), 236fig, 250–251
Preproject testing, 292
Prevention costs, 384
Process improvement and continuous improvement: as common practice consulting area, 86–87; for increasing value of internal consulting to, 31–33, 74–75; internal consulting role in, 12–13; typical methodologies used in, 13
Processes: balanced scorecard on, 155–156, 157fig; IPO (inputs, processes, and outcomes) scorecard measure of, 156–157fig
Products services niche: characteristics of a good consultant, 50; external consulting business plan on, 44, 49–50
Professional management system: consistent consulting processes, 84–85; effective relationship management, 83–84; enhancing consulting capabilities, 86–87; providing integrated project and change management, 87–93
Program management organization (PMO), 63–64
Progress reports, 464–466
Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC): first phase and five key components of, 88–89; second phase for completion and implementation five key components, 89–91
Project brochures and pamphlets, 468
Project cost categories: acquisition costs, 420t, 422; administrative support and overhead, 417fig, 420r, 425; application and implementation costs, 417fig, 420r, 423–425;
capital expenditures, 420\textit{t}, 422–423; design and development of the project, 417\textit{fig}, 420\textit{t}, 422; evaluation and reporting, 417\textit{fig}, 420\textit{t}, 425–426; initial analysis and assessment, 420\textit{t}, 421–422; list of recommended, 420\textit{t}–421; maintenance and monitoring, 128–133, 411–412, 417\textit{fig}, 420\textit{t}, 425

Project cost classifications: expense account, 133; process/functional, 131–133; systems for, 131

Project cost control: concerns for, 128–130; cost classification systems, 131; expense account classifications, 133; process/functional classifications for, 131–133. \textit{See also} Financial issues

Project cost development: costs are credible issue of, 412–413; danger of reporting costs without the benefits, 414–415; developing and using cost guidelines, 415; fully loaded costs, 412, 418\textit{fig}

Project cost tracking: costs based on consulting process steps, 417\textit{fig}–419; description of, 415;

employee benefits factor, 419–420; Impact/ROI study report presentation of summary and, 459–460; prorated versus direct costs, 419; sources of costs, 416\textit{t}–417

Project implementation: barriers and enablers of, 331; linking data to project objectives, 332; need for increased support of consulting, 18; Performance Management Scorecard processes of, 171; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) phase of, 89–91; rewards for success, 332; ROI Level 3: Application and Implementation on, 189\textit{t}, 190, 256\textit{fig}, 310–314, 329–332

Project management: communicating results component of, 60–61; consulting project impact estimated by the, 364–366; creating a service agreement, 58; of deliverables, 60; importance of effective, 57–58; Initiative/Project Prioritization Template for, 66, 67\textit{t}; integrating change management and, 87–91; key consulting skills related to, 86;
Project management (continued)
measurement and management system as part of, 76–78; practices for improving process and operations, 13; of project communications, 60; project plan component of, 59; of “scope creep” problem, 63. See also Portfolio management

Project objectives: application, 226–227, 228; examples of, 220–221; impact, 227, 229–230; importance of specific, 231; learning, 224–226; linking implementation data to, 332; multiple levels of, 221–222; overall of, 219–220; reaction, 222–224; ROI (return on investment) on, 230–231; SMART, 219, 232; V model on aligning of business needs with, 235–251

Project planning: key consulting skills related to, 86; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on, 89

Project/portfolio management: as common practice area, 87; Strategic Portfolio Management model for, 64–69, 140, 147–149

Projects: analyzing reactions to communications about the, 475–477; barriers and enablers of, 460, 463; the business driver for, 334–335; common target audiences during the, 454; communicating results of, 441–475; consulting costs for design and development of, 417, 420, 422; developing norms and standards of reaction and learning evaluation data on, 328; establishing communication policy for, 448–450; identifying strengths and weaknesses of, 328; importance of measuring ROI Methodology level inputs, 319–340; intangible benefits of, 399–403, 460; learning as critical for complex, 325; maximizing value of consulting at level of individual, 482–484; rapid results, 17; reaction and learning data used to identify improvements for forecast, 328–329; ROI analysis plan’s project plan on the, 260

263–264. See also Consulting project impact; Isolating consulting effects; ROI (return on investment)
Prorated vs. direct costs, 419

Purpose: internal consulting, 43, 45–48; organization mission shaping, 43, 45–46; organization vision shaping, 43, 46; value statements shaping, 43, 46–48

Quality costs: analysis costs category of, 383–384; converting data by calculating the standard, 380, 382–383; customer dissatisfaction category of, 384; external failure category of, 383; internal failure category of, 383; penalty costs category of, 383; prevention costs category of, 384

Quality Management, 140, 142–145

Question design: determining information needed, 272–273; developing the questions, 272–374; preparing data summary, 274; selecting the type of question, 273; testing the questions, 274

Questionnaires/surveys: description of, 271; design issues for, 272–274; detailed example of, 274–280; improving the response rate for, 280–286; types of questions and statements to use on, 271–272, 273fig

Questionnaires/surveys tips: anonymous data collection if necessary, 286; communicate the purpose, 281; consider incentives, 282–283; describe data integration process, 281; estimate completion time, 284–285; explain questionnaire during project meetings, 286; explain the timing of the planned steps, 285; explain who will see the data, 281; follow-up reminders, 284; introductory letter signed by an executive, 283; keep it simple, 281–282; let participants know they are part of the sample, 282; professional appearance, 285–286; provide advance communication, 280–281; send results copy to participants, 284; simplify the response process, 282; utilize local management support, 282

Questions: checklist, 272, 273fig; multiple-choice, 272, 273fig; open-ended, 272, 273fig; range of responses, 272, 273fig; ranking scales, 272, 273fig
Range of responses (question), 272, 273
Ranking scales, 272, 273
Rapid results projects, 17
Reaction. See ROI Level 1: Reaction
Recruiting consultants strategies, 71
Relationship management: description and importance of, 83–84; to help organizational change engagement, 93; stakeholder mapping templates used in, 84
Relationship modeling, 353–356
Research reports: AIMC’s production of, 105–106; as client development tool, 105. See also Impact/ROI study report Resilience. See Building resilience
Resources: communication to secure approval for project, 445; partnership to fulfill needs for, 71–72; recruiting strategies for securing, 71; ROI Level 0 input measures as reflecting commitment of, 320; social media, 101–102
Responsibility charting, 13
Results-base orientation, 17
Rewarding successful projects, 332
Risks and opportunities (business plan), 45, 53–54
ROI analysis plan:
  communication plan of the, 260; data collection plan of the, 255–258; example of completed, 259–261; project plan of the, 260; ROI planning meeting on the, 264–267
ROI drivers: balanced measures, 185; budget growth, 184–185; consulting failures, 183; economic pressures, 183–184; executive interest, 185–186; fad surfing in the boardroom, 186–187
ROI Institute, 106, 484
ROI Level 0, 319–321
ROI Level 1: Reaction: data collection plan for, 256; Impact/ROI study report on, 458–459; important measures to collect for, 321–324; objectives of, 222–224; overview of the, 188–189; selecting appropriate data collection method for, 310–314; topics for learning and, 325–327; using data on learning and, 327–329
ROI Level 2: Learning: data collection plan for, 256fig, 257; Impact/ROI study report on, 458–459; important measures to collect for, 324–325; overview of the, 189t–190; selecting appropriate data collection method for, 310–314; topics for reactions and learning, 325–327; using data on learning and, 327–329. See also Learning needs (V model level)

ROI Level 3: Application and Implementation: data collection key issues for, 338–340; data collection plan for, 256fig; Impact/ROI study report on, 459; important measures to collect for, 329–332, 333t; objectives for, 226–227, 228t; overview of the, 189t, 190; selecting appropriate data collection method for, 310–314. See also Implementation management

ROI Level 4: Business Impact: data collection key issues for, 338–340; data collection plan for, 256fig; Impact/ROI study report on, 459; important measures to collect for, 332, 334–338t; overview of the, 189t, 190; selecting appropriate data collection method for, 310–314. See also Business needs

ROI Level 5: ROI (Return on Investment): communicating results and Impact/ROI study report on, 441–477; data collection plan for, 256fig; overview of the, 189t, 190; selecting appropriate data collection method for, 310–314. See also ROI (return on investment)

ROI Methodology: chain of impact implied in different levels of, 344–345; developing a credible approach for calculating, 187–188; the elements of, 187, 188fig; introduction to the five-level framework for, 188–191; ROI analysis plan for, 255–267; ROI process model for, 191–215. See also
ROI Methodology (continued)
Evaluation; Methodologies; ROI (return on investment)

ROI planning meeting: agenda for the, 264, 266; decision on who will approach the project plan, 264, 266–267; identifying the success factors, 264, 265–266; planning participants involved in the, 264, 265

ROI process: benefits of the, 433–436; communicating results of the, 441–477; formal evaluation report on the, 456–463; planning the communication for the, 448–452; selecting the audience for communications related to, 452–456

ROI process benefits: alters perceptions of consulting, 435–436; builds management support for the consulting process, 435; develops priorities for consulting projects, 434; focuses the results, 435; improves the consulting process, 434; measures the contribution, 434; simplifies a complex issue, 436; understanding the, 433–434

ROI process model:
applications and Family Mutual Insurance Company (FMI) case study on the, 205–215; calculating the BCR (benefit/cost ratio) and ROI, 192; collecting data, 192; converting data to monetary values, 192; guiding principles for using the, 202–204; identifying intangible benefits, 192; implementation of the, 204; isolating the effects of consulting, 192; overview and illustrated diagram of, 191, 192; planning the evaluation, 192; reporting results, 192

ROI (return on investment): annualized values of, 427; balanced scorecard measurement on, 155–156, 157; causal chain scorecard measurement on, 158–161; definitions of, 426–427; dilemma surrounding ROI for consulting, 182;
examining the consultant’s role in measuring, 117; forces driving, 183–187; making the business case for, 177–182; on project objectives, 230–231; scorecards to forecast and measure value of solution and, 172, 173. See also Projects; ROI Level 5: ROI (Return on Investment); ROI Methodology

Role-playing/skill practice simulations, 294

Sales marks protection, 57

Scorecard. See Performance Management Scorecard

Senior management: analyzing reactions to results communications by, 475–477; presenting Impact study data to, 472–475fig; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on positioning sponsorship by, 88–89; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on sponsorship by, 90. See also Stakeholders; Target audiences

Service agreements: description of, 58; typical topics in a, 58–59

Simulations: business games, 293–294; measuring learning by using, 292–294; role-playing/skill practice, 294; task, 293

Six Sigma. See Lean/Six Sigma analyses

Skill development: external training modules for, 79; project management planning for resources and, 69–72. See also Internal consultant skills

Skill practice/role-playing simulation, 294

SMART objectives: action plans, 302; description of, 219; Project, 232

Social media resources, 101–102

Soft data, 336, 338

Software resources, 104

Solutions: communicating to secure agreement on, 446; consulting costs of development of, 417fig; Performance Management Scorecard processes of, 171

Sponsorship: Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on ongoing management of, 90; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) on positioning, 88–89

Stakeholder mapping templates, 84
Stakeholders: communicating project information and securing agreement from key, 472; consulting business plan and role of the, 41t–43; consulting business plan goals and milestones focus by, 44–45, 52–53; consulting financial plan interest by, 44, 52; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) engagement of, 89; reaction objectives and, 222–224; Strategic Portfolio Management role of key, 68. See also Senior management; Target audiences

Standard monetary values:
calculating the standard cost of quality, 380, 382–384; calculating using historical costs from records, 387–388; converting employee time to money using compensation, 384–386; converting output data to money, 379–380; estimated from participants on, 397–398; estimated from the management team, 398–399; examples in sales and marketing, 381t–382t; expert input used to calculate, 389–391; external databases on, 391–394; linking with other measures, 394–396fig; overview of converting data to, 378–379; turnover costs summary, 392–393t; typical organizational functions tracked as, 386–387; when standard values are not available, 387. See also Monetary values conversion

Strategic partners: capacity-free model for securing external, 72, 142; consultant role in positioning the role of, 93–95; as consulting business plan stakeholder, 42–43; external consultants taking on the role of internal, 113–114; internal consultant role in improved partnerships with, 34; securing external, 71–72. See also Alliances

Strategic Portfolio Management model: to coordinate and support ongoing project management, 66, 68–69; description and function of the, 64; internal consulting role in organizational adoption of, 140, 147–149; overview of the, 64, 65fig; potential pitfalls to look out for, 68–69; role of key stakeholders in, 68; types of projects coordinated by internal consultants, 66
Strategic/business planning: as common practice consulting area, 86; internal consulting role in, 12; typical methodologies used in, 12
Supplier management: guaranteeing the results, 138–139; impact on external consultants, 139; as increasingly critical issue, 133–134; managing the partnership, 136–138; monitoring performance, 138; outsourcing strategy and decision, 134–136
Suppliers/vendors: checklist for selecting, 135; financial managing of, 133–139; outsourcing to, 134–136
Surowiecki, J., 364
Surveys. See Questionnaires/surveys
Sustainability, 19
SWOT analysis: for budgeting strategic planning, 120; strategic/business planning using, 12
System monitoring, 299
Target audiences: analyzing reactions to results communication by, 475–477; basis for selecting the, 453–456; common types of, 454; different ones need different information, 443; understanding the potential, 452–453. See also Senior management; Stakeholders
Target competency frameworks: description and components of, 69; development planning and training project, 69–71
Task simulation, 293
Team building skills, 86
Teams: building credibility of consulting, 447; estimating monetary values from the management, 398–399; Project and Change Management Methodology (AIMC) enablement of, 89; ROI Methodology data from consulting, 318; ROI to show consulting satisfaction and engagement of the, 181–182
Testing: performance, 292; pre- and postproject comparison, 292
Thought leaders, 91–93
Trademarks protection, 57
Training modules delivery, 79
Trend-line analysis, 351–353
Trotter, W. D., 78
Turnover costs summary, 392–393
V model: alignment for consulting, 237fig; consulting alignment with the business needs using the, 235–241; illustrated diagram of the, 236fig; overview of the process and levels of the, 235–241

V model levels: Level 1: considering preference needs for the project solution, 236fig, 237fig, 250–251; Level 2: determining learning needs, 236fig, 237fig, 250; Level 3: determining performance needs, 236fig, 237fig, 248–250; Level 4: determining business needs, 236fig, 237fig, 245–248; Level 5: for defining the potential payoff, 236fig, 237fig, 241–244

Valuation. See Consulting value proposition

Value statements: examples of consulting practice, 47–48; internal consulting business plan on, 43, 46–47

Variable budgets, 126

Vendors. See Suppliers/vendors

Video recording observation, 298

Vision: description of organizations, 46; internal consulting business plan on, 43, 46

Visioning workshops, 12

Wall Street Journal, 186

Website tools, 101

The Wisdom of Crowds (Surowiecki), 364

Zero-based budgeting, 127