CONTENTS

1. Self-Regulation Processes and Thriving in Childhood and Adolescence: A View of the Issues
The editors discuss the need to integrate self-regulation processes and to create a life-span oriented framework of these processes. They provide a brief overview of the work of the scholars contributing to this volume.

2. When Everything New Is Well-Forgotten Old: Vygotsky/Luria Insights in the Development of Executive Functions
   Elena Bodrova, Deborah J. Leong, Tatiana V. Akhutina
Vygotsky and Luria’s concept of the “extra-cortical organization of higher mental functions” and its evolution are explored using the example of self-regulation.

3. Self-Regulation and Academic Achievement in Elementary School Children
   Megan M. McClelland, Claire E. Cameron
The authors situate self-regulation and social competence in a theoretical context that describes the components most important for early school success.

4. Influences of Children’s and Adolescents’ Action-Control Processes on School Achievement, Peer Relationships, and Coping with Challenging Life Events
   G. John Geldhof, Todd D. Little
Self-regulation is discussed as a construct that depends on the development of key lower-order components. The conceptualization of self-regulation and its development is applied to other approaches to self-regulation.

5. Intentional Self-Regulation, Ecological Assets, and Thriving in Adolescence: A Developmental Systems Model
   Steinunn Gestsdottir, Jennifer Brown Urban, Edmond P. Bowers, Jacqueline V. Lerner, Richard M. Lerner
The positive youth development (PYD) perspective is used to emphasize that enhancing adolescents’ abilities to engage in intentional self-regulatory processes will increase the capacity of youth to thrive.
Swapnil Maniar, Jonathan E Zaff
The authors extend the ideas of the development of self-regulation and its impact on development by proposing a life-span, relational, public health model.

7. Adolescents' Conscious Processes of Developing Regulation: Learning to Appraise Challenges
Reed W. Larson
The author discusses the challenges reported by youth working on arts, technology, and social justice projects in organized programs and how they learn to address them.
