Index

A
Abes, E. S., 140
Ableism: fallacy of hegemony assumption that you can fix, 56–59; historically produced and systemically embedded, 57
Accountability, social media anonymity and lack of, 197–198
Administrators: “meeting everyone’s needs” justification by, 54–55; perfect-ten assumption as benefiting, 52; teacher stressors created by, 84
African American students. See Students of color
Albert, M., 93, 177
Alexander, B., 175
Anonymity: lack of accountability problem of, 197–198; opening online learning channel of communication providing, 198–204
Answers and solutions: challenging the epistemological distortion of finding, 54; uncovering assumption about finding all the, 53–54
Appreciative Pause exercise, 254–255
Arao, B., 218
Arthur, I. T., 190
Assumptions. See Teaching assumptions
Aung San Suu Kyi, 245
Authority: assumptions regarding teacher’s, 15; theory and research on, 176–178. See also Power

B
Back-channel communication: improving teaching practices, 203–204; opening an anonymous online course, 198–200; student decision making and, 200–204
Backchannel Chat, 202
Baepler, P., 189
Bahn, K., 227
Ball, S. J., 30
Baptiste, I., 28, 74, 176, 177
Barron, K. E., 133
Basseches, M., 140
Bauman, H. L., 67
Bell, S. J., 216
Bergman, R. M., 3, 32, 43, 85
Black Bodies, White Gazes (Yancy), 176
Black Lives Matter movement, 210
Black Youth Project 100 (BYP 100) groups, 221
Blackboard, 189
“Blame-the-student” conversations, 117
Blended learning, 190
Bohm, D., 126
Bohmian Dialogue exercise, 126–128, 219
Bond, M., 179
Bonila-Silva, E., 175
Bonner, F. A., 48, 189
Bradbury, H., 76, 245
Bradley, D. L., 181
Britzman, D., 87
Brookfield, S. D., 4, 11, 28, 34, 47, 71, 73, 75, 87, 88, 124, 140, 146, 175, 219, 228, 247
Brooks, D. C., 189
Brown, S., 175
Bruff, D., 99, 103, 104
Buch, K., 133
Buskist, W., 99
Butler, S. M., 62

C
Cain, S., 36
Cale, G., 182–183
Capitalism ideology, 12, 14
Caufield, J., 189
Causal teaching assumptions, 7
Center for Creative Leadership, 246
Chalk Talk exercise, 34, 123–124, 219
Change agency: cultural suicide risk of engaging in, 231–234; facilitating racial conversations for, 217–223; first rule of, 239; risk of lost innocence when engaging in, 235–237; risk of political marginalization when engaging in, 237–240; role of mission statement in, 239–240
Charismatic singularity: description of, 41; uncovering the hegemonic assumption of, 41–44
Chavez, C., 245
Christensen, N., 148
The Chronical of Higher Education, 76
Circle arrangement: Critical Incident Questionnaire feedback on the, 30; how students experience being put into a, 28–31; perceived as manifestation of democracy, 28–29
Circle of Voices exercise, 219, 251–252
Circular Response method, 124–126, 219
Classism: fallacy of hegemony assumption that you can fix, 56–59; framing student perceptions of teachers, 43; historically produced and systemically embedded, 57
Classroom power dynamics: assumptions of, 26–28; Baptiste’s work on using ethical coercion in, 74; being a fly on the wall and, 31–36; circle seating arrangements and, 28–31; of group discussions, 23–24; at the heart of student complaints about teachers, 243; how critical reflection illuminates, 9, 14–15; how educational processes are framed by, 9; an illustration of, 100–101; learning how your colleagues negotiate, 67; male-female teaching team’s critical reflection on, 142–143; online learning, 197–198, 199–200; student feedback and influence of, 63, 65–66; the teacher as fly on the wall to investigate, 31–36; TodaysMeet (www.todaysmeet.com) for surfacing, 107; unearthing assumptions of, 26–37. See also Power dynamics; Students Classrooms: challenges of creating an inclusive, 27–28; CIQ used with small and large, 111–112; comparing online learning and, 190–191; democratized, 73–74, 92–93, 105, 202–203; fallacy of having control in the, 45–47; flipped, 190; how critical reflection enlivens our, 88–89; how to conduct racial conversations in, 217–219; power as omnipresent in, 26; “smart,” 189–190; social norms of appropriate behavior in, 11; unearthing assumptions of power in, 26–37; what students’ eyes tell us about examining race in the, 217–223.
See also Students; Teaching
Clearness Committee exercise, 253–254
Clemens, K., 218
Clickers exercise, 103–104
“Clint Eastwood chair” trick, 140
Clothing store metaphor, 61
Colleagues: complaints about millennials’ entitlement attitude by, 47–48; “critical friends,” 66, 68; participating on each others’ online classrooms, 196; seeing ourselves through the perceptions of our, 8;
self-censorship by women engaging with male, 143; team teaching with, 66–67, 135–152; their perceptions as critical reflection lens, 66–68
Collegial feedback/perceptions:
“blame-the-student” conversations, 117; Bohmian Dialogue exercise, 126–128, 219; Chalk Talk exercise, 123–124, 219; Circular Response method, 124–126, 219; colleagues as critical lenses on race, 216–217; creating critically reflective conversations, 117–119; Critical Conversation Protocol, 128–133; “critical friends” as best source of, 66, 68; critical incidents exercise, 121–123; faculty learning communities (FLCs) for gaining, 67–68, 133–134; how it improves our teaching, 116; on resolution of teaching problems, 115–116; sharing perspectives on student resistance, 67; start-up sentence completion exercise, 119–121; unraveling teaching’s shroud of silence through, 66–67. See also Students’ eyes/feedback
Columbia University, 73, 90
Commonsense teaching assumptions: critical reflection of our, 25–26; importance of examining our, 21–22; longevity brings wisdom as, 24–25; stop lecturing as, 22–23; students learn best through discussion as, 23–24; teaching is mysterious as, 24; visiting small groups as, 22
Community development education, 3
Conceicao, S. C. O., 190, 192
Condition of magical consciousness, 85
Conference attendance, 159–161
Confessional reflection practices, 76
Confirmatory critical reflection, 149–151
Continuous inquiry modeling, 89
“Counter-story” (critical race theory), 215
Cox, M. D., 133
Cranton, P., 40, 216
Critical Conversation Protocol, 128–133
“Critical friends” colleagues, 66, 68
Critical Incident Questionnaire (CIQ): benefits of using the, 110–111; circle arrangement feedback from the, 30; description and format of the, 107–110; how students’ anonymous comments can engage teachers, 91; illustration of power dynamics revealed by, 100–101; as instrument for meetings, 252–253; positive student feedback to unplanned personal disclosure, 145; for small and large classes, 111–112; student feedback on their learning using, 85–86, 166; teachers regularly reporting out students’ feedback on, 88; team teachers’ critical reflections when sharing, 141–142; as tool for seeing through students’ eyes, 107–112. See also Feedback; Students’ eyes/feedback
Critical incidents exercise, 121–123
Critical pedagogy theory, 35
Critical race theory, 175–176, 210, 215
Critical reflection: benefits for teaching, 79–95; caution against mandate of documenting, 258; clothing story metaphor of uncovering assumptions using, 61; confirmatory, 149–151; embedding in meetings, 250–255; for identifying accuracy of teaching assumptions, 3, 9; as the illumination of power, 9, 10–15; negotiating the risks of, 225–241; team teaching that models, 140–143; uncovering assumptions of power using, 26–37; uncovering hegemonic assumptions using, 9, 16–19, 40–59, 245
Critical reflection benefits: it enlivens our classrooms, 88–89; it helps us avoid self-laceration, 86–88; it helps us develop a rationale
Critical reflection benefits (contd.) for practice, 81–83; it helps us survive the emotional roller coaster of teaching, 84–86; it helps us take informed actions, 80–81; it increases trust, 93–95; it keeps us engaged, 89–92; it models the democratic impulse, 92–93

Critical reflection lenses: colleagues’ perceptions as one of the, 66–68, 216–217; to counterbalance the teacher myth, 87–88; personal experience as one of the, 69–72; students’ eyes as one of the, 62–66, 217–223; theory as one of the, 72–75; understanding framing of the, 61–62

Critical reflection risks: avoiding cultural suicide, 233–234; avoiding political marginalization, 239–240; cultural suicide, 231–233; dealing with impostorship, 229–231; impostorship, 227–229; lost innocence, 235–237; marginalization, 237–239; understanding the different types of, 225–227

Critical theory: dominant ideology concept of, 11–13; Frankfurt School, 228; how critical reflection is informed by, 11–14, 39, 244–245; on ideologies as mechanisms of control, 13–14

Critical Theory in the Interests of Black Folks (Outlaw), 175–176

Critically reflective leadership: colleagues’ perceptions on, 246–247; crucial that those in power engage in, 257–258; embedding critical reflection in meetings, 250–255; examining what it is, 245–250; followers’ eyes and perspective on, 246; modeling, 255–258; personal experience that shapes our, 248–250; theory and research role in, 247

Critically reflective teaching: caution against mandate of documenting, 258; clarifying the benefits of, 79–95; the four lenses of, 61–77, 87–88; how it is informed by critical theory, 11–14, 39, 244–245; identifying and validating our teaching assumptions by, 3, 9; negotiating the risks of, 225–241; practicing leadership in, 243–259; of race and racism, 207–224; team teaching that models, 140–143.
See also Teaching

Csikszentmihalyi, M., 175

Cultural differences: classroom power dynamics and, 26–28; cultural inhibitors to self-disclosure, 257; discussion-based teaching and, 23–24

Cultural suicide: avoiding or minimizing, 233–234; description of, 231; as risk of critical reflection, 231–233

D

Dana, N. F., 99

Dangerous Mind (film), 44

Darder, A., 35

Dead Poets Society (film), 44

Decision making: Albert’s exploration of participatory economics, 177; arbitrariness response to dictatorial leadership, 248–249; characteristics of informed action and, 80; democratic, 202–203; how critical reflection helps informed action and, 80–81; online course back-channel communication and student, 200–204; Parecon principle of, 93. See also Problem solving

Delgado, R., 210

Democracy: challenges of building classroom inclusiveness and, 27–28; circle arrangement perceived as manifestation of, 28–29; conceived as decision-making conversation, 93; as dominant U.S. ideology, 12; Parecon principle of decision making in, 93; risk of political marginalization when promoting, 239. See also Dominant ideologies
Democratized classroom: democratic discussion in, 73–74; modeling democratic behavior to build, 92–93; Parecon principle of decision making used in, 93; social media used to build, 105; student decision making in, 202–203

Deschooling Society (Illich), 32

Detectives role (Critical Conversation Protocol), 128, 129–132

Dewey, J., 236

Dialogic processes, 3

Digital natives, 189, 243

Discussion-based teaching: alternative interpretation on value of, 23–24; becoming a fly on the wall during, 34–35; commonsense assumption on, 23; how to conduct racial conversations, 217–223; implicit assumptions about, 3–4; Marcuse’s comment on democratic, 73–74; the one-minute paper to prep for, 101–102; social norms of appropriate behavior during, 11; student feedback on the three-person rule, 100–101; understanding the limitations of, 4. See also Teaching

Disorienting dilemma transformative learning, 216

Dominant ideologies: capitalism, 12, 14; commonsense assumptions about good teaching, 21–26; description of, 11; militarism, 12; patriarchy, 13, 142–143; positivism, 12, 14; white supremacy, 13, 43, 175–176, 209, 214–215. See also Democracy; Ideologies; Racism ideology

Dovidio, J. F., 210

Empathy: perspective taking as requiring, 208; for students’ fear when learning, 154–155

Empty seat trick, 140

English as a second language students, 105

Ethical coercion, 74

European American Collaborative Challenging Whiteness (ECCW), 75

Evaluations: how a teacher’s personal experience can impact student, 70–71; SET (student evaluation-of-teaching) forms, 98; story on marginalization of team teaching, 237–238. See also Grading

Evans, N. J., 48, 140

Explicit teaching assumptions, 3

F

Facebook, 189, 202

Faculty learning communities (FLCs): characteristics of the best teacher-reflection groups, 68; gaining collegial feedback through, 67–68, 133–134; sharing experiences through stories, 69, 70

Failure: cultural inhibitors to self-disclosure of, 257; penalties associated with, 257

Farley, C., 138

Fast and Furious film clip, 117

Feedback: Center for Creative Leadership’s 360-degree, 246; collegial perceptions and, 66–68, 115–134, 216–219, 246–247; democratic decision making and role of, 248–249. See also Critical Incident Questionnaire (CIQ); Students’ eyes/feedback

Fejas, A., 76

Felton, P., 67

Fish, T., 237–238

Flipped classrooms, 190

Fly on the wall teachers: classroom discussions and, 34–35; as disempowering students, 35–36;
Fly on the wall teachers (contd.)
paradigmatic, prescriptive, and causal assumptions of, 32–33
Followers’ eyes, 246
Fook, J., 76, 148, 245
Forney, D. S., 48, 140
Foucault, M., 8, 30, 75, 76, 173,
174, 180, 196
The Foxfire Fund, 123
Frankfurt School critical theory, 228
Fraser, E., 145, 148
Freire, P., 3, 23, 32, 43, 73, 85, 174,
176, 177, 178, 179
Freishtat, R., 98
Fromm, E., 236
Frost, N., 76, 245

G
Gaertner, S. L., 210
Gandhi, M., 245
Gardner, F., 76, 148, 245
Gender differences: classroom power dynamics and, 26–28; discussion‐based teaching and, 23–24; self‐censorship by women engaging with male colleagues, 143
Gilborn, D., 175
Glazer, F. S., 190
Gore, J. M., 30
Grading: common student complaints about, 243–245; how a teacher’s personal experience can impact,
70–71; learning to swim, 168.
See also Evaluations
Graduate study, 155–157
Gramsci, A., 16, 21, 171
Greenleaf, R. K., 247
Griffin, R., 43
Groccia, J. E., 99
Grounded theory, 94
Groupthink: “blame-the-student”
conversations as form of, 117; description of, 179; how theory and research combats, 74–75, 178–180
Guadalupe Davidson, M., 43
Guido, F. M., 48, 140

H
Habermas, J., 93
Hagopian, K. J., 48
Hanna, M., 43
Hegemony: critical reflection for uncovering the assumptions of, 9, 16–19, 40–59, 245; description of,
16; how critical reflection uncovers,
9, 17–19; social control function of,
39–40; twin elephants in the room of power and, 258–259; vocation as a concept of, 18
Hegemony assumption fallacies: the answer must be out there, 53–54;
I can fix racism (sexism, classism, ableism), 56–59; it’s all under control, 45–47; meeting-needs rationale, 54–56; need to motivate students by charismatic singularity,
41–44; the perfect-ten syndrome,
50–52; responsibility to remove student resistance, 47–50; three conditions of the paradigmatic, 40;
washing clean the stain resistance,
47–50
Hersey, P., 247
Higgs, J., 148
Highlander Folk School (Tennessee),
115
Hill, D. M., 67, 133
Honneth, A., 180
hooks, b., 172–173
Horton, M., 56, 115, 174, 178
Howard-Hamilton, M. F., 48, 189

I
“1-can-fix” assumption, 56–59
Ideologies: critical theory on dominant ideology concept, 13–14, 244–245; as mechanisms of control and power, 13–14. See also Dominant ideologies
Illich, I., 32
Implicit teaching assumptions, 3–4
Impostorship: dealing with, 229–231; description of, 227; potential damage of, 230; as risk of critical reflection, 227–229
Informed action: characteristics of, 80; how critical reflection helps us take, 80–81
Instagram, 193
Institutions: embedding critical reflection in meetings, 250–255; knowing the mission statements of your, 239–240; “learning from our mistakes” rhetoric vs. penalties for failure at, 257

J
James, A., 175
Janis, I. J., 179
Johns, C., 148
Johnson, S., 175
Jones, M., 148
Jones, S. R., 140
Joosten, T., 99, 190
Just-in-time teaching, 190

K
Kane, P., 175
Kasper, J., 227
Keengwe, J., 190
Kheriaty, A., 67
Kilminster, S., 76, 245
King, M. L., Jr., 245
Knowlton, D. S., 48

L
Ladson-Billings, G., 175
Lanchester College of Technology (Coventry, England), 184
Lang, J. M., 175
LaSha Bradley, D., 45
Leadership. See Critically reflective leadership
Learning: assumptions held by teachers about, 2–9; awareness of how students experience, 62; the best teachers as those who struggled with, 165–166; blended, 190; complaints about millennials’ attitude toward, 47–48; dialogic processes for, 3; disorienting dilemma and transformative, 216; embracing the uncertainty and risk of, 147–149; empathy for students’ fear when, 154–155; peer learning, 166–169; personal experience with recreational, 161–170; resistance to, 47–50, 67, 110–111; self-directed, 32–36, 162–163; teaching practices informed by personal experiences with, 70–72, 153–154, 163, 166, 168–169
Learning as a Way of Leading (Preskill), 245
The learning audit, 103
Learning management system (LMS): course communication with students through, 189; Letter to Successors posted on, 113; summary of CIQ comments posted on, 109
Learning style: insight into preferred, 162–163; meaning of insight for teaching practice, 163
Learning theories. See Theory and research
Lecturing: alternative interpretation on need for, 23; commonsense assumption on cutting down, 22
Lehman, R. M., 190, 192
Lenning, O. T., 67, 133
Letter to Successors exercise, 112–113
Lightner, R., 133
Lindeman, E., 124
Loftus, S., 148
Lost innocence: accepting the process of, 236–237; as risk of critical reflection, 235–236
Luther Seminary (St. Paul), 144

M
Maathai, W., 245
McNicol Jardine, G., 30
McNunn, N. D., 62
Male-female teaching team, 142–143
Mandela, N., 245
Marbley, A. F., 48, 189
Marcuse, H., 73–74, 184–185, 186
Marginalization: cultural suicide form of, 231–234; political form of, 237–240
Martinez, L. M., 43
Mayo, P., 35
Meeting-needs rationale: administrative justification using the, 54–55; uncovering hegemonic assumption of the, 54–56
Meetings: Appreciative Pause exercise during, 254–255; Circle of Voices exercise for, 251–252; Clearness Committee exercise used during, 253–254; Critical Incident Questionnaire (CIQ) instrument for, 252–253; embedding critical reflection in, 250–255
Meier, M. H., 190
Mezirow, J., 93, 208
Military ideology, 12
Mills, C. W., 236
Mission statements, 239–240
Modeling behaviors: collaborative problem solving in team teaching, 148–149; continuous inquiry modeling, 89; critically reflective leadership, 255–258; democratic impulse modeling, 92–93; by leaders to examine race, 219–220; team teaching’s critical reflection modeling, 140–143
Moodle, 189
Morrone, A. S., 190
Motivation: student resistance to learning element of, 47–50; uncovering charismatic singularity assumption of, 41–44
The muddiest point exercise, 102–103
Multiracial teaching team, 139, 142
N
Narrative disclosure: cultural inhibitor to self-disclosure of, 257; description and limitations of, 2; to set tone for examining race, 212–216; as tool of antiracist teaching, 75; on white supremacy “counter-story,” 214–215
Nash, R. J., 45, 69, 181, 182, 216
Novak, G. M., 190
On Becoming a Person (Rogers), 32
On Dialogue (Bohm), 126
The one-minute paper, 101–102
Online learning: how lens of research revealed the value of, 192–193, 195–196; opening anonymous back channel of communication in, 198–200; paradigmatic assumption on inferiority of, 190, 192; power dynamics evident in, 197–198, 199–200; similarities between classroom and, 190–191
Ouellett, M. L., 145, 148
Ouimet, J. A., 190
Outlaw, L., 176
P
Palloff, R. M., 190
Palmer, P. J., 68, 253
Panopticon (prison system design), 196–197
Paradigmatic teaching assumptions: critical reflection of, 6; examples of, 5; on inferiority of online education, 190, 192
Paraskeva, J., 35
Parecon principle, 93
Patriarchy: as dominant ideology, 13; male-female teaching team’s critical reflection on, 142–143
Patton, L. D., 48, 140
Pawlowski, L., 218–219
Pearson, A. R., 210
Pedagogy of the Oppressed (Freire and Bergman), 32, 43
Peer learning: applying to teaching practice, 168–169; swimming class, 166–168
Perfect-ten syndrome: uncovering hegemonic assumption about the, 50–52; understanding who benefits from the, 52
Personal experience: classroom discussions that include, 10; conference attendance, 159–161; as critical reflection lens, 69–72; critically reflective leadership role of, 248–250; graduate study, 155–157; how teaching practice is intertwined with our learning, 70–72, 153–154; idiosyncratic nature of, 69; professional development workshops, 157–158; providing insights into learning and teaching, 8; recreational learning, 161–170; stories used to share, 69, 70. See also Stories; Vulnerability

Perspective taking: colleagues’ eyes form of, 66–68, 216–217; how personal experience can shape our, 69–72; how theory and research can shape our, 72–75, 171–186; students’ eyes form of, 62–66, 217–223; teaching of race and racism and the problem of, 208–209

Peterson, E., 146
Pharo, E. J., 136
Plank, K. M., 66, 136

Political marginalization: avoiding and minimizing, 239–240; building alliances to survival, 240; external recognition as protection from, 240; as risk of critical reflection, 237–239

Poll Everywhere, 195

Positivism ideology, 12, 14

Power: assumptions regarding teacher’s, 15; Baptiste’s work on using ethical coercion, 74; critical theory on ideologies as mechanisms of, 11–14, 244–245; critically reflective leadership by those in, 257–258; hegemony as mechanism of control and, 16–19; lens of students’ eyes and dynamic of, 63, 65–66; students’ perceptions for surfacing issues of, 100–101; twin elephants in the room of hegemony and, 258–259; uncovering assumptions of, 26–37. See also Authority

Power dynamics: risk of cultural suicide and, 231–234; risk of political marginalization and, 237–240. See also Classroom power dynamics

Pratt, K., 190

Preferred learning style: insight into, 162–163; meaning of insight for teaching practice, 163

Prescriptive teaching assumptions, 6

Preskill, S., 4, 34, 71, 141, 180, 219, 245, 247

Problem solving: leadership promoting inclusive, 249–250; “smart” classrooms as sites for, 190; team teaching and modeling collaborative, 148–149; value of collegial feedback for, 115–116. See also Decision making

Problems: how the CIQ helps detect, 110; resistance to learning, 47–50, 67, 110–111

Professional development workshops, 157–158

Q

Quaker traditions, 253–254

Quinn, C. N., 190

R

Race: challenges of critical reflection on racism and, 207–212; colleagues as critical lenses on, 216–217; defining, 209–210; narrative disclosure to set a tone for examining, 212–216; problem of perspective taking on, 208–209; what students’ eyes tell us about examining race in the classroom, 217–223; white supremacy ideology and, 13, 43, 175–176, 209

Race, Gender, and Sexuality in Language course, 218–219

Racial conversations: modeling by leaders, 219–220; normalizing racism during, 222–223; prep students on how to conduct, 217–219; understanding that solutions will not be produced by, 220–221

Racial differences: classroom power dynamics and, 26–28; colleagues Racial differences (contd.)
as critical lenses on race and, 216–217; discussion-based teaching and, 23–24
Racism ideology: assumption by African American students on, 27; critical race theory’s analysis of, 175–176, 210; critical reflection applied to teaching race and, 207–224; defining, 209–210; fallacy of hegemony assumption that you can fix, 56–59; framing student perceptions of teachers of color, 43; having productive discussions by first normalizing, 222–223; historically produced and systemically embedded, 57; as hot topic for students, 45–46; how the “I-can-fix” assumption perpetuates, 58; as learned ideology that is reinforced daily, 211; problem of perspective taking on, 208–209; white supremacy ideology and, 13, 43, 175–176, 209. See also Dominant ideologies
Ramsey, J., 136, 144
Rationale for practice: critical reflection for developing a, 81–83; description of a, 83; student appreciation for teacher verbalization of, 83
Recreational learning: getting expert instruction for learning how to swim, 163–166; insights and lessons learned from experience of, 163, 166, 168–170; peer learning and “critical incident” during, 166–169; self-directed learning experience applied to swimming, 161–163
Renn, K. A., 48, 140
Repressive tolerance theory, 184–186
Resistance to learning: how the CIQ helps resisters realize they are in minority, 110–111; sharing perspectives of your colleagues on, 67; sources of student, 48; uncovering hegemonic assumption about removing, 47–50
Richlin, L., 133
Rogers, C., 32
Salazar, M. D. C., 43
Saturday Night Live (TV show), 138
Saunders, K. P., 67, 133
Scholarly person narrative (SPN), 181–184
Self-directed learning: how teachers respond to, 33; insight into preference for, 162–163; learning theorists on, 32; paradigmatic, prescriptive, and causal assumptions of, 32–33; personal experience with swimming, 161–162; questioning the value of, 33–36
Self-disclosure. See Narrative disclosure
Self-laceration: description of, 86–87; how critical reflection helps us to avoid, 87–88
SET (student evaluation-of-teaching) forms, 98
Sexism: classroom power dynamics and, 26–28; discussion-based teaching and problem of, 23–24; fallacy of hegemony assumption that you can fix, 56–59; historically produced and systemically embedded, 57
Shadlow, L. K., 69, 180
Sharpe, T., 235
Shields, C. M., 247
Shor, I., 23, 73, 176
Showing Up for Racial Justice (SUR), 221
Siering, G., 190
Simkins, S., 190
Sipple, S., 133
The Skillful Teacher (Brookfield), 62, 82
Small group visiting: alternative interpretation of, 22; commonsense assumption on, 22
“Smart” classrooms, 189–190
Smith, H., 123, 190
Smith Jacobvitz, R. S., 180
Social justice education, 3
Social media: anonymity and lack of accountability of, 197–198; Backchannel Chat, 202; coming to understand the value of, 192–193, 195–196; digital native students automatic use of, 189; engaging students through, 104–105; Facebook, 189, 202; Instagram, 193; as a lens on teaching practice, 193–196; online course back channel, 198–204; Poll Everywhere, 195; the power and the use of, 196–200; Socrative polls, 195; teaching assumptions about, 191–193; three instructional benefits of using, 105; TodaysMeet (www.todaysmeet.com), 45, 106–107, 120, 194–195, 202, 203, 219; Twitter, 189, 191, 193, 195, 202; Voicethread, 195; YouTube, 193, 195
Socrative polls, 195
Solan, A., 68, 133
Solutions and answers: challenging the epistemological distortion of finding, 54; uncovering assumption about finding all the, 53–54
Stand By Me (film), 44
Stark, P. B., 98
Start-up sentence completion exercise, 119–121
Stavredes, T., 190
 Stefancic, J., 210
Stokes, A., 68, 133
Stories: critical race theory on “counter-story,” 215; narrative theorizing of teachers,’ 180–181; scholarly person narrative (SPN) form of, 181–184; on self-directed swimming learning experience, 161–170; sharing personal experiences through, 69, 70. See also Personal experience
Storytellers role (Critical Conversation Protocol), 128, 129, 130
The Struggle for Pedagogies (Gore), 30
Student engagement: Britzman’s myth on teacher-dependence of, 87–88; getting feedback to understand level of, 85–86; resistance to learning impact on, 47–50; social media used for, 104–105; uncovering charismatic singularity assumption of, 41–44
Student evaluation-of-teaching (SET) forms, 98
Students: classroom power dynamics and, 26–37; common complaints about teachers by, 243–245; as digital natives, 189, 243; empathy for the learning fear experienced by, 154–155; English as a second language, 103; their eyes as a critical reflection lens, 8, 62–66; fallacy of teacher’s charismatic singularity as motivating, 41–44; how fly on the wall teachers disempower, 35–36; how they experience being put into a circle, 28–31; modeling by leaders to examine race, 219–220; need to prep them for racial conversations, 217–219; online course back-channel communication and decision making by, 200–204; public recognition and inclusion of all, 105; resistance to learning by, 47–50, 67, 110–111; teacher awareness of how learning is experienced by, 62; teachers that model continuous inquiry to, 89; why discussions can be alienating for some, 23–24.
See also Classroom power dynamics; Classrooms
Students’ eyes/feedback: on appreciating teacher verbalizing rationale for practice, 83; back-channel communication for, 198–204; building trust through nondefensive response to, 95; on classroom circle arrangement, 30; classroom power dynamics and, 63, 65–66, 100–101; clickers exercise, 103–104; as critical reflection lens, 62–66; how anonymity helps to Students' eyes/feedback (contd.)
get accurate, 63–64; importance of receiving, 64–65; the learning audit, 103; Letter to Successors exercise, 112–113; the muddiest point exercise, 102–103; the one-minute paper, 101–102; questioning value of self-directed learning, 34; social media used for, 104–105; student-centeredness and, 97–100; student evaluation-of-teaching (SET) forms, 98; teacher response to anonymous, 64; teachers' critical reflection through lens of, 62–66; telling us about examining race in the classroom, 217–223; on the three-person rule, 100–101; TodaysMeet (www.todaysmeet.com) for, 45, 106–107. See also Collegial feedback/perceptions; Critical Incident Questionnaire (CIQ); Feedback

Students of color: classroom power dynamics and, 26–28; comment on seeing everything in racial terms, 139; discussion-based teaching and, 23–24; disorienting dilemma of whites hearing experiences by, 216; racial microaggressions against, 75, 178, 210–211, 213–214, 215–216; racism and white supremacy framing perceptions of teachers and, 13, 43, 175–176, 209, 214–215, 222; social media to acknowledge English as a second language, 105; white gaze on, 214

Sue, D. R., 75, 176, 178, 210
Sullivan, S., 175, 208, 211, 222
Surveillance architecture (Panopticon), 196–197
Swimming class experience: getting expert instruction through, 163–166; insights and lessons learned from experience of, 163, 166, 168–170; peer learning and "critical incident" during, 166–169; self-directed learning experience versus, 161–163

Syllabus, 10

Tatum, B. D., 58
Taylor, E. W., 40, 67, 175, 216
Taylor, K., 175
Teacher myth: Britzman's, 87; critically reflective practice lenses to counter, 87–88
Teacher-reflection groups: characteristics of the best, 68; gaining collegial feedback through FLCs and, 67–68, 133–134; sharing experiences through stories, 69, 70

Teachers: awareness of how students experience learning, 62; characteristics of the best, 165–166; classroom power dynamics and, 26–37; common student complaints about, 243–245; cultural suicide by, 231–234; fallacy of motivating students through charismatic singularity of, 41–44; as fly on the wall in classroom, 31–36; the good ones want change for a better world, 1; how critical reflection engages, 89–92; impostorship suffered by, 227–231; lost innocence by, 235–237; modeling democratic behavior, 92–93; modeling how to examine race, 219–220; narrative disclosures by, 2, 75, 212–216; perfect-ten syndrome of, 50–52; political marginalization by, 237–240; practicing critically reflective leadership, 243–259; providing a model of continuous inquiry, 89; racial microaggressions by, 75, 178, 210–211, 213–214, 215–216; rationale for practice by, 81–83; response to anonymous student feedback by, 64; self-laceration by, 86–88; surviving the emotional roller coaster of teaching, 84–86; team teaching by, 66–67, 135–152

Teachers of color: comment on seeing everything in racial terms, 139; disorienting dilemma of whites hearing experiences by, 216; racial microaggressions against students and, 75, 178, 210–211, 213–214, 215–216,
Teaching race and racism: challenges of applying critical reflection to, 207–212; colleagues as critical lenses on, 216–217; narrative disclosure used to set a tone for, 212–216; what students’ eyes tell us about examining and, 217–223

Teaching race and racism challenges: defining racist and racism, 209–210; the ideology of white supremacy, 209; inability of whites to see themselves as racial beings, 212; the problem of perspective taking, 208–209; the slippery nature of racial microaggressions, 210–211

Teaching Transgress (hooks), 172

Team teaching: benefits of, 66–67; confirmatory critical reflection, 149–151; emotional grounding provided by, 137–140; how impostorship is lessened during, 230; learning risk and embracing uncertainty, 147–149; male-female teaching team, 142–143; modeling critical reflection for students using, 140–143; multiracial, 139, 142; negotiating vulnerability, 144–147; properly conducted, 135–137; story on marginalization of, 237–238

Terry, R. W., 247

Texting, 192

Thacker, K., 247

Theory and research: as combating groupthink and worldviews, 74–75; critical pedagogy theory, 35; critical race theory, 175–176, 210, 215; as critical reflection lens, 72–75; critical theory, 11–14, 39, 228, 244–245; critically reflective leadership role of, 247; grounded theory, 94; the intellectual bouillabaisse of, 32; Marcuse’s repressive tolerance theory, 184–186; multiple models of student learning, 87; narrative theorizing, 180–181; providing insights into teaching through, 8–9; scholarly personal narrative (SPN), 181–184; what we can learn from, 171–181; Wikipedia as major Theory and research (contd.)
dispenser of, 187. See also Learning theories
Theory and research benefits: it drops bombs of productive dissonance, 173–174; it helps us recognize ourselves, 176–178; it opens new worlds, 174–176; it stops us accepting groupthink, 74–75, 178–180
Theory of critical pedagogy, 35
Three-person rule, 100–101
360-degree feedback, 246
Tisdell, E. J., 136
TodaysMeet (www.todaysmeet.com):
anonymity allowed on, 197; circum-venting power dynamics using, 202;
description and teaching applications of, 45, 106–107, 194–195, 219; start-up sentence completion exercise using, 120; student decision making using, 203
Trust: challenge of earning student,
27; faith in role of change as misplaced, 85; how critical reflection increases, 93–95; nondefensive response to class feedback to build,
95; vulnerability as flip side of, 147
Tuitt, F, 43
Twitter, 189, 191, 193, 195, 202

U
Umpires role (Critical Conversation
Protocol), 128, 133
Uncovering teaching assumptions:
classroom power dynamics, 26–37;
clothing store metaphor of, 61;
hegemony assumptions, 9, 16–19, 40–59, 245. See also Teaching assumptions
Unger, S. M., 181
University of St. Thomas
(Minneapolis–St. Paul), 140

V
Viray, S., 69, 181, 216
Vocation, 18
Voicethread, 195
Vulnerability: critical reflection’s element of, 144; as flip side of trust, 147; team teaching and negotiating, 144–147. See also Personal experience

W
Walker, J. D., 189
Watts, A., 236
Watts, M. M., 99
Weimer, M. E., 99
What White Looks Like
(Yancy), 176
White gaze, 214
White, S., 148, 245
White supremacy: “counter-story” on,
215; critical race theory’s analysis of, 175–176, 215; as dominant ideology, 13, 209, 214; framing student perceptions of teachers of color, 43 Whites: desire to be seen as “good white person,” 222; disorienting dilemma of hearing experiences of racism, 216; inability to see themselves as racial beings, 212; normalizing racism in order to discuss racism, 222–223; racial microag-gressions by, 75, 178, 210–211,
213–214, 215–216, 222
Why Are the Black Kids Sitting Together in the Cafeteria? (Tatum), 58
Wikipedia, 187
Wilt (Sharpe), 235
Women: classroom power dynamics and, 26–28; discussion-based teaching and girls and, 23–24;
self-censorship when engaging with male colleagues, 143

Y
Yancy, G., 43, 176, 214
Yendol-Hoppey, D., 99
YouTube, 193, 195

Z
Zajonc, A., 68
Zukas, M., 76, 245