Contents

Abbreviations x
Maps xi
Tables xii
Acknowledgments xiv
Preface to the Second Edition xv
Preface to the First Edition xvii

Introduction: The Mythical Faces of Portuguese Asia 1

1 Early Modern Asia: Geopolitics and Economic Change 11
   Fifteenth- and Sixteenth-century States 13
   The Circulation of Elites 22
   Towards a Taxonomy 27
   Long-term Trends 30

2 Portuguese State and Society, 1200–1500 33
   Crown and Nobility 33
   In Search of a Bourgeoisie 40
   Mercantilism and Messianism 48
   Summing Up 55
CONTENTS

3 Two Patterns and Their Logic: Creating an Empire, 1498–1540 59
   The Early Expeditions 60
   From Almeida to Albuquerque: Defining the First Pattern 67
   The Second Pattern: East of Cape Comorin 74
   The Logic at Work: Portuguese Asia, 1525–40 78
   Towards the “Crisis” 83
   Notes 85

4 The Mid-Sixteenth-century “Crisis” 87
   The Dilemmas of Joaine Policy 88
   Sás, Sousas, and Castros: Portuguese Asian Officialdom in the Crisis 96
   The Mid-century Debate 104
   The Far Eastern Solution 107
   The Estado in 1570 113
   Notes 114

5 Between Land-bound and Sea-borne: Reorientations, 1570–1610 115
   Trade and Conquest: The Spanish View 116
   Spain, Portugal, and the Atlantic Turning 120
   Girdling the Globe 124
   The “Land” Question 130
   The Maritime Challenge 141
   Concessions and Captains-Major 145
   The Beginnings of Decline? 150

6 Empire in Retreat, 1610–1665 153
   Political Reconsolidation in Asia, 1570–1610 154
   Syriam and Hurmuz: The Beginnings of Retreat 160
   Reform and Its Consequences 167
   The Decade of Disasters: Portuguese Asia in the 1630s 172
   Restoration, Truce, and Failure, 1640–52 181
   The Retreat Completed, 1652–65 186
   Asians, Europeans, and the Retreat 188
   Notes 189

7 Niches and Networks: Staying On, 1665–1700 191
   The Cape Route and the Bahia Trade 192
   The Vicissitudes of the Estado: The View from Goa 198
CONTENTS

Mozambique, Munhumutapa, and Prazo Creation 206
The Portuguese of the Bay of Bengal 211
Survival in the Far East: Macau and Timor 217
The Portuguese, Dutch, and English: A Comparison 222

8 Portuguese Asian Society I: The Official Realm 227
The Problem of Numbers 228
The World of the Casado 236
Networks, Fortunes, and Patronage 243
“Portuguese” and “Foreigner” 250
Rise of the Solteiro 253
The Impact on Portugal 257

9 Portuguese Asian Society II: The Frontier and Beyond 261
Renegades and Rebels 262
Mercenaries, Firearms, and Fifth Columnists 269
Converts and Client Communities 274
A Luso-Asian Diaspora? 279

10 Conclusion: Between Banditry and Capitalism 285

Glossary 295
A Note on Quantitative Data 303
Bibliography 307
Maps 323
Index 333