Index

Note: Page numbers in italic refer to illustrations action plan and lesson learned 18 robust assessment 53–55

robust optimization 50–51
actuation pressure response 380, 382 actuation time measurement 281, 288 generated voltage signal for actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 279–297 benchmarking test setup 282
control factors 291
data acquisition 284–285
data analysis 291–296
strategy 285
dynamic S/N results 295 electrical charge calculation 288 generated voltage signal for actuation time measurement 285 low torque dynamic S/N results 296 mechanical work calculation 209 outer array 291
P-ideal diagram 287
performance test input signal and output response 292–293
function 287
robust assessment 286–296
actuators [1–4] 294
actuators [5–8] 294
ideal function 286–299
measurement method 281–285
scope and P-diagram 286 signal and noise strategy 290–291
tape measure spring windings to torque relationship 283 scope 286
test equipment 281–284
torque load fixture 283
ADAMS 147, 149
example model for Future Truck program 149 additivity 41, 49, 103, 162, 164
concept of 49
ADP (advanced development project) 405–406, 419

Robust Optimization: World’s Best Practices for Developing Winning Vehicles, © 2016 Subir Chowdhury, Shin Taguchi, and ASI Consulting Group, LLC.
Published 2016 by John Wiley & Sons, Ltd. advanced development project see ADP aging 8, 11, 100, 101, 136, 259, 342, 368, 372, 373, 375 alloy composition 318–320, 322, 323, 329, 335
analysis of variance see ANOVA ANOVA (analysis of variance) 86–87, 276, 363
  dynamic 271–273, 275
  for each injection point 269 of first line of orthogonal array 87 signal point-1 271
  table for noise factors 363
Apply Slurry into Substrate function 407–408 array modification, breakdown of 195 assembly issues 8
assignment and analysis result 104 audible noise 3 consideration of analysis for 108–118
  evaluation of 111
automatic transmission 187, 188, 192, 206 distribution of spin losses in 192 automotive brake subsystem, P-diagram baseline circuit topology 302, 303 baseline spring mass model response validation 71
BCs (boundary conditions) 341, 345, 364 bench test confirmation 217–218 benchmark product 106–108, 111 performance comparison with 107 benchmarking robustness 17 how noise factors are varied for 23–32 benchmarking test setup 282
Beta (β) change of estimated and measured values of $\beta_1$ and $\beta_2$ 85 computations of 39–43, 41–43
  for A1, A2 and A3 and plots 55
  for all 18 sets of data of L18 44
  for L18 data sets 43
  sample of, with No. 1 data set of L18 45
dynamic 356–357
  graph of weight change response 329 response charts 47, 203, 310–311, 356–357
  on $\beta_1$, $\beta_2$ and S/N ratio 144 response tables for 46, 330
boot-strap circuit (floating MOSFET gate drive) 299 bottom line performance 58, 62 boundary conditions see BCs cabin deformation 79, 80, 84 magnitude of vs. crash velocity 93 CAE (computer aided engineering) 65, 66, 147–149, 154, 176 simulations, sequential application of robust engineering to 341–366 calculation program 184–185, 186 carbon monoxide 336, 404 Carbonyl Iron 372
cascade learning (aka leveraged knowledge) 346
catalyst slurry coating process optimization Apply Slurry into Substrate function 407
ceramic particulate trap 404
  Coat Substrate function 407
compound noise strategy 412, 412
control factors 411
  confirmation results in Tulsa 417, 419 for diesel catalyzed particulate traps 403–425 factors and levels 411–412
  follow-up parameter design experiment 416–419 function analysis 407–409, 408 high level map 406
  ideal function 409, 421
  initial performance 406 initial production scale-up run 407 means plots 414
Index

for S/N ratios 417, 419, 423, 423
means tables 414–415
measurement system
  evaluation 409–410
noise factors 411–412
  Q affect process control 420
parameter design experiment layout 412–414, 417–418, 422
parameter diagram 409, 411, 421
  Tulsa 417
particulate trap regeneration 405 performance before and after optimization 416 predicted performance improvement 416 prediction and confirmation 423
process capability 423–424
Florange settings 424
  Tulsa settings 420
process map 406, 408
project description 406 transfer to Florange 419–424 two-step optimization and prediction 415 catalyzed trap 404
ceramic materials 317
ceramic particulate trap 404
CF (correction factor) 362, 364 CFD (computation fluid dynamic) 362, 364 checking validity of formulations, data set and graphs for 31 Chrysler 65, 78, 187, 188, 204, 207 62TE 188, 192
cleaning procedures 320 Coat Substrate function 407–409, 411
coking 336
collision safety, optimization of component characteristics for improving collision safety by simulation, optimization of 79–94
compound noise strategy 412
  and additional input signal in outer array 159 computation fluid dynamic see CFD computer aided engineering see CAE computer simulation 13, 14, 20, 38, 347 optimization of next-generation steering system using 133–145 concentration polarization 336 conduction losses 300 run 201
results of 51, 217–219, 244–246, 417, 419 on initial and optimal design 142 for operating characteristics 122–123 confirmatory calculation 91
  for six level changes 90
  with optimum conditions used as standard 92
  with wide level ranges 87
contamination test pressure cycle 374
control factor(s) and levels 33, 118, 176
  in actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 290–291 application for spring stiffness updates 73, 73 assignment of 140
avoid strong interactions between 34–38 in catalyst slurry coating process optimization 411 change of during iterative application 181 for X3 183
  for X10 184
  in discrete floating MOS gate driver 305–306 in double-lift window regulator system 117–118 demand 12–13, 65–67, 174, 254, 280
design
  contribution of variability 271 per signal point 271
  signal point 1:2 ml desired 272
  of experiment 2 optimal determination of 48–49
  for double-lift window regulator system used in automobiles 113–132 of engine mounting system based on quality engineering 173–186 for next-generation steering system 104 for reformer washcoat adhesion on metallic substrates 331, 333 for sequential application of robust engineering 359 optimization process handling 66 parameter 9–13 design diagram 241
  Future Truck steering effort robustness 154–172 implementation of 244
  reference 359 select alternatives 67
  for assessment 52
  space, exploration by orthogonal array 33–34 technique improvement of 239–241
  by Quality Engineering 239–241
  system 241–246
  traditional 239
  tolerance 13–15
  tuned 360
  valve assembly 152–153
  Design-Build-Test-Fix cycle 32
  Design of Experiments see DOEs
  Design for Six Sigma see DFSS
  Design-Test-Fix 224 deterioration 8, 12, 80, 81, 116 Detroit Tigers 14 development period 132, 238 effect by shortening of 246 for improving coupling factor in vehicle theft 223–234 optimization for vehicle offset impact, stepwise implementation of 67–77 diesel catalyzed particulate traps, catalyst slurry coating process optimization for 403–425 common rail system 250 direct injection see Direct Injection Diesel injector optimization emissions 404 engines 404
direct injection diesel injector optimization 249–278
  ANOVA
  for each injection point 269
  signal point-1 271
  comparison model data Vs experimental data 253 contribution of design factors to variability
  per signal point 271
  signal point 1:2 ml desired 272
  contribution of design factors on slope (dynamic tolerance design) 276 current total loss for some signal points 273 data analysis and two-step optimization 259–263 dynamic tolerance design 270–271
  ANOVA 275
  vs signal point tolerance design 273–275 dynamic analysis of variance 271–273
dynamic loss function 273–275
  experimental layout 259, 261
direct injection diesel injector
optimization (Continued)
for dynamic tolerance design 274
and factors 269
FTQ representation 267
end of line 269, 269
ideal function 257–258, 258
initial design compared to optimized
design 265
labeling used in experiment 253 loss function 269–270
model confirmation 263–264 modeled system 254
noise factors 259–260
noise strategy 258–259
objectives and approach 251–253 optimization process flow chart 252 parameter design 257–268
diagram 260
discussions on results 264–268 prediction 263
schematic of injector 255 schematic representation of injector mapping 256
signal and noise strategies 258–259 signal points 258
signal point chart to support manufacturing tolerance decision-making 275
S/N ratio and sensitivity plots 262 signal point by signal point tolerance
design 269–270
simulation model robustness 253–257
slope tolerance 266
specifications on slope 266 structure of mathematical model 256
Taguchi loss function 273
for dynamic tolerance design 277
tolerance design 268–278, 269 factors and levels for 270 total current loss distribution among parameters 276
two-step optimization 263
discrete floating MOS gate driver 299–314
baseline circuit topology 303
Beta response circuit topology 310–311 comparison of actual circuit response 313
confirmation 312
control factors and levels 305–306
developing ideal function 302–305 dynamic ideal functions for Turn-On and Turn-Off 304
experimental strategy and
measurement system 306
floating MOS gate drive 299, 302
ideal circuit response 304
L18 orthogonal array 308
noise strategy 305
optimum factors presenting improvement for turn-off event 311
parameter design experiment
layout 306, 307
prediction and confirmation 312
response charts 307–311
results 307
for Turn-On and Turn-Off
event 309
several control factor levels adjusted 306
simple solenoid 301 single factor with three levels 305
S/N response chart 310
two-step optimization 311
distribution of spin losses in automatic transmission 192
DOEs (Design of Experiments)
147–149, 157–159, 161–164, 171, 396
design for vehicle A under noise conditions 163
design for vehicle B under noise conditions 164
double-lift window regulator
system 114
evaluation of quality characteristics 122–123 schematic figure of 114, 115 selection of optimal condition and confirmation test results 120–1 used in automobiles, optimal design for 113–132 DPF (Diesel Particulate Filter) 403
DYNA 3D nonlinear-spring and damper models 67, 70, 71 dynamic analysis of variance 271–273 dynamic ideal functions for Turn-On and Turn-Off 304 dynamic loss function 273–275
Dynamic Most Common Case formulation 289 dynamic response 20–21, 25, 250, 277, 355–356
optimization 68
dynamic signal-to-noise results 295
low torque 296
dynamic tolerance design 252, 268–271, 276, 277, 277
ANOVA 273, 275
vs signal point tolerance design 273–275
ECCC 372
ECM (engine control module) 254, 300
ECU (engine control unit) 134, 348, 349, 363, 364 education and training 58, 61–62 effective communication 58, 60–61
electrical charge calculation 288
Elter, John 5 emissions 4, 279, 280, 404–405 emissivity 350, 354, 357, 365 absorption capability 65 efficiency 98, 101, 107–111
electrical 286, 288
kinetic 65, 84
loss 11
mechanical 286
response and two-step optimization 36 thermal 342, 347, 364, 365
thinking 20, 68
transformation of 6, 8, 10–12, 21, 30, 39, 43, 104, 107, 189, 191, 199, 209 engine box crush 68 gene control module see ECM gene control unit see ECU gene engine mounting system based on Quality Engineering, optimal design of 173–186 application of standard S/N ratio Taguchi method 175–178
iterative 178–181
design object 174–175
influence of interval at factor level 181–184 three-point 175
gene vibration 174, 184, 186 low frequency 175
simulation 186
environmental influences 8 EPA City and Highway tests 191 error factors 242, 243
Europe 390
European Technical Center 250 evaluation of audible noise (quality characteristic) 111 calculation program 184–185
functionality for 98–111 in DC motors 98–99
importance of 110
under unloaded (idling) condition 110 executive leader and corporate team 57–60 exhaust gases 404
experiment(s) and data collection, result of 40 outer array of 139
test results 214–215
of fuel delivery system 214 experimental data 119
experimental layout 259, 261
for dynamic tolerance design 274 for each run 102
and factors 269
experimental method and measurement
data
discrete floating MOS gate driver 306
for small DC motors 99–100 experimental setup 197
for each build combination 198 experimentation recipes and orthogonal array L18 37
factor level 47, 74, 90–91, 169–170, 185, 201, 214, 252, 320, 346, 350 control 73–74, 306, 320, 415 influence of interval at 181–184 factorial effects of sensitivity $\beta$, 92 factors and levels 32–38, 70–72, 100–101, 118, 136–137, 411–412 failure modes 10, 21, 23, 25, 286, 287, 348
and effects analysis (FMEA) 62
F-D (force-displacement) curve 73, 75
FETs (field-effects transistors) 342 field-effects transistors see FETs First Time Quality (FTQ) 249, 264, 266–268, 272–273, 391
end of line
as function of observed standard deviation on $\beta$ 268
as function of observed standard deviation on slope 268 representation 267
fixed factors of fuel delivery
system 214
floating MOSFET delivery ("boot-strap" circuit) 299, 302 optimization of discrete 299–314
Florange, France 403, 405–406, 412, 419, 421, 424
FMEA see failure modes and effects analysis
force-displacement see F-D curve Ford Motor Company 209–211, 220–221
front wheel drive (FWD) 188, 190 optimization of transmission for improved efficiency and robustness 187–207
frontal barrier crash test 79–80, 80
FTQ see First Time Quality fuel delivery system
bench test confirmation 217–218 confirmation test results 217–219
control factors 213
experiment test results 214 conventional 211
fixed factors 214
ideal function 211–12
initial performance 219
new 211
noise factors 213–214
optimal performance 220 overview 210
robustness 209–221
sensitivity ($\beta$) analysis 214–217 test method 211 vehicle verification 218–219 flow 209
pump
efficiency 211
pressure levels 213
system 209
volatility (RVP values) 213 voltage 211
voltage levels 212 full system crash model 66
function analysis 407–409 function variation 11 functionality comparison between optimal design of, and noise-oriented
design 109
for evaluation 97–111
in DC motors 98–99
importance of 110
vs. quality characteristic 109
furnace 322–323
Future Truck program 147–150 example ADAMS model for 149 hydraulic power-steering assist
  system 149–151
  methodology 148–149
  parameter design 154–172
  parameter diagram 168
  project scope 153
  quality loss function 165–168 standardized A/N post-processing 159–165
  steering effort robustness 147–172 structure diagram 168 valve assembly design 152–153 FWD see front wheel drive gate driver optimization of discrete floating
  MOS 299–314
  “Gazelle” actuator 287, 293–296
  General Motors (GM) 147, 172, 223–225, 234
general purpose actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 279–287
generated voltage signal for actuation time measurement 285
  “Giraffe” actuator 287, 292, 294–296
  GM see General Motors graphs of runs 200–201
gull wing joints 396, 400 visual scoring criteria for 395 heat flux signal 348, 353
heavy trucks 404
House of Quality
  Level-1: customer Qs and system CTQs 226
  lower levels 227
hydraulic power-steering assist
  system 149–151
  for rack and pinion steering gear 151
hydrocarbon decomposition 336
IC (integrated circuit) 19, 238, 241–243, 299, 302, 314, 393, 399–401
IDDOV see Identify-Define-Develop-Optimize-Verify
ideal circuit response 303, 304
ideal function(s) in actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 287
  of catalyst slurry coating process
  optimization 409, 421
concept of 115
of DC motor 99
of Direct Injection Diesel injector
  optimization 257–258, 258
  of double-lift window regulator
  system 114–115
dynamic response 20–21
  of fuel delivery system 211–212
  of FWD transmission for improved efficiency 189, 189–190
displaying gear ratio as indicative factor 190
identify
  robust assessment 52
  robust optimization 20–23
  of next-generation steering
  system 136
  nondynamic responses 21–23 of pressure switch module 371–372, 372 of reformer washcoat adhesion on metallic substrates 318, 318 schematic 70
  of sequential application of robust engineering 347–349, 348 average thermal resistance 360
  heat flux response 349
  optimal design 359
  plot of raw data 351
  reference design 359
  tuned design 360
  steering effort 154–156 various (table) 22
ideal state 239, 299
Identify-Define-Develop-Optimize-Verify (IDDOV) 187
Identify-Optimize-Verify (IOV) 187–188, 206 idling (unloaded) condition, evaluation under 110 improving coupling factor in vehicle theft using DFSS 223–234 diagram of subsystem 228 experimental results 228–229 experimental strategy 225–227
control factors 226
input signal 227
noise strategy 226
response 225
optimization details
based on L18 array full factorial plotted 232 L18 orthogonal array results 230 mean graphs 231
restricting factors A, B, and D 233
S/N graphs 231
original 18 experimental results 232
system 227–228
voice of customer 225 indicative factors 84–86, 136–137, 188–190, 199, 206, 371, 375
inefficiency 21
information 6, 48, 50, 60–61, 233, 275, 277, 297, 336, 368, 414
steering 134
transformation of 7–8, 10, 21
and tuned optimal design 145 initial fuel delivery system performance 219
injector, fuel 210, 213, 300 direct injection diesel
optimization 249–278
and key variability sources 251 schematic of 255, 256
input M 20, 25, 30, 53, 99, 106 varied to benchmark robustness 23 input–output 84, 100, 107, 141 based on energy thinking 20 comparison of relation for each design 106 and indicative factors 85 integrated circuit see IC integration strategy 58, 62 interval at factor level, influence of 181–184 IOV see Identify-Optimize-Verify IPC/JEDEC J-STD-020B 390 iterative application change of control factors during 181
concept of 179
of standard S/N ratio Taguchi method 178–181 vibration spectrum before and after 179 variation of 180
J.D. Power 165
kinetic energy 65, 84
L18 data sets
computations of S/N and Beta for 43 data from combination of 202 modified 196
orthogonal array 230, 308 sample calculation for combination of 201 L54 orthogonal matrix 337–339
lead-free reflow soldering process experimental 391–396 inputs for evaluation 392 maximum pull strengths 400
noise factors 393
optimal and baseline settings for pull test 396
results 400–401
robust engineering methodology 391–394 robust optimization of visual scoring 394–396 criteria for gull wing joints results 396–400 S/N cross-section photos of best and worst response table 397 wetting of lead-free joints response table 397 leadership commitment 57–58 lesson learned and action plan robust assessment 53–55
robust optimization 50–51
level of factors 82–83 leveraged knowledge (aka cascade learning) 346 linear term $\beta_1$ and quadratic term $\beta_2$, calculation of 143 “Lion” actuator 287, 291, 293–296 load characteristics vs spring deformation, example of 81 load distribution 116–117, 124 way of varying 116
function 13, 264, 269–270, 276
dynamic 273–275
quality as 1–4, 13
see also quality loss function; Taguchi loss function low frequency engine vibration 174, 175, 186
low torque dynamic S/N results 296
magnetic sensing system 238–239 and confirmation experiment comparison of result 245 results 244–246
construction of 238
control factor 243
design technique by Quality Engineering 239–241 effect of incomputable numbers and S/N ratio 244 effect by shortening of development period 246 error factor 243
ideal state 239
improvement of design technique 239–241
optimization 237–247
parameter design diagram 242 principle of 238
signal factor 242
system design technique 241–246 implementation of parameter design 243
parameter design diagram 241–242 results of confirmation experiment 244–246 technique on modeling 240
traditional design technique 239, 240 magnitude of cabin deformation vs. crash velocity, final results of 93 making better decisions faster 341–366 error 136, 175, 177, 186 organizations 1 process 6, 249, 390–391, 401
optimization 387–425
Martin, Billy 14
material thickness 350, 354, 357–358, 365 MATLAB 134–135
math-models generated data 351 sequential application of robust engineering to 341–366 structure of 256
maximization of number of good donuts 34
means plots 414, 414
for S/N ratios 417, 419, 423, 423
means tables 414–415
measurement 5, 21, 30, 32, 36, 52, 122, 200–201, 230, 280–282, 284–285,
287–288, 290, 297, 306, 354, 364, 368, 371, 373, 389–390, 406
data 102, 135–136
and experimental method 99–100 to input–output relation 100 of next-generation steering system 135, 135 and ideal function 189–190 system evaluation 334, 409–410 technology 19–20, 23
mechanical work calculation 209
mega project 18, 20 metallic substrates, reformer washcoat adhesion on 315–339 minimum detectable difference 334 MOSFET gate drive, floating (“bootstrap” circuit) 299, 301 neighboring subsystems 8 next-generation steering system using computer simulation, optimization of 133–145
control factors 137
data reset for analysis using standardized S/N ratio 139 determination of optimal design and confirmation 141–142 factors and levels 136–137
high and low conditions 139
ideal function 136
measurement data 135
indicative factors 137
noise factors 136–137
outer array of experiment 139
pre-analysis for compounding noise factors 137–138 system description 134–135 tuning to targeted value 142–144 Nissan 5, 97, 113, 133, 142 nitric oxides 404
noise compounding strategy and input signals 157–159
noise factors 8–9
ANOVA table for 363
of catalyst slurry coating process optimization 411–412 categories of, with examples 26 countermeasures for 27
of Direct Injection Diesel injector optimization 259–260 of double-lift window regulator system 116–117
of fuel delivery system 213–214
of lead-free reflow soldering process 393
of next-generation steering system 136–137 pre-analysis for compounding 137–138 popular, with examples 28
of pressure switch module 373
Q affect on slurry coating 417 of reformer washcoat adhesion on metallic substrates 320–322 signal factor 320
unwanted outputs 320–322 response table 363
robustness as interaction between control factor and 36 sequential application of robust engineering 349 of steering effort robustness 157–159 used in experiments 116 varied to benchmark robustness 23
noise levels for CFD N1 and N2 364 noise-oriented design, comparison between optimal design of functionality and 109
noise strategy
compound
and additional input signal in outer array 159
for catalyst slurry coating process optimization 412, 412 of FWD transmission for improved efficiency 192 flow chart for developing effective 29 for Direct Injection Diesel injector optimization 258–259 for discrete floating MOS gate driver 305 for improving coupling factor in vehicle theft using DFSS 226 for optimization of front-wheel drive transmission for improved efficiency 191 for pressure switch module 372 see also signal: and noise strategies nondynamic response 23–24, 25, 268, 351, 354 nonlinear spring-mass model 81
North America 224
NTB (nominal-the-best) function 375, 378–379, 414

OEMs (original equipment manufacturers) 1, 60, 343 subsystems level optimization by 95–234 OFF time 300
On-Center Handling behavior 147
ON resistance 300
ON time 300
one-dimensional multiple-degrees-of-freedom model 81 optimal build combination 201, 204, 206 confirmation results on 142 for double-lift window regulator system 113–132 for engine mounting system based on Quality Engineering 173–186 of functionality and noise-oriented design, comparison between 109 selection of 48, 104–107 and targeted values, comparison of 142 tuned, and initial design 145 optimal fuel delivery system performance 220
optimization
8 steps see robust optimization: eight steps to benefits gained 107–108 of catalyst slurry coating process for diesel catalyzed particulate traps 403–425 of component characteristics for improving collision safety by simulation 79–94
of Direct Injection Diesel injector 249–278 of discrete floating MOS gate driver 299–314 of front-wheel drive transmission for improved efficiency and robustness 187–207 control factor selection 192–193 ideal function and measurement 189–190
noise strategy 191
orthogonal array selection 193 signal strategy 190–191
of fuel delivery system 218, 219
of magnetic sensing system 237–247 of manufacturing process 387–425 of next-generation steering system using computer simulation 133–145 process flow chart 252 of small DC motors using functionality for evaluation 97–111 table of round 1 optimization factor levels 74 two-step 48
optimization (Continued)
of vehicle offset crashworthy design using simplified analysis model 65–78 validation of optimized model 74–76 vehicle level of 63–94 optimum conditions 90–94
comparison of 90
as standard, control factors with 81 optimum design see optimal design original equipment manufacturers see OEMs and analysis results 121 exploration of design space by 33–34 L18 and experimentation recipes 37 and mechanics 36–38
popular 38
selection 193–196
for washcoat adhesion study 324–325 and input based on energy thinking 20 oxidation 317, 319, 322–323
P-diagram see parameter design: diagram
parameter design 9–13
actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 287 automotive brake system 25 catalyst slurry coating process optimization 409
Tulsa 417
data set for robust assessment 53
direct injection diesel injector optimization 260 discrete floating MOS gate drive 307
ideal function 212
lead-free reflow soldering process 392
magnetic sensing system 242 power-steering system 168 pressure switch module 371 program 69
reformer washcoat adhesion on metallic substrates 319 DOE, modified L36 inner arrays 169–170 experiment first 406–416 follow-up 416–419
experiment layout 412–414, 417–418, 421–422
implementation of 244
initial design compared to optimized design 265 optimization, two chosen SEFs for 156 particulate traps 404 diesel, catalyst slurry coating process optimization for 403–425 ceramic 404 regeneration 405
particulates 403–404
PASS-Key I 224
PASS-Key II 224
PASS-Key III+ (PKIII+) 223, 225
Passlock system 224
PDCA cycle see Plan-Do-Check-Act (PDCA) cycle performance test input signal and output response 292–293
PKIII+ see PASS-Key III+ Plan-Do-Check-Act (PDCA) cycle 50 and 8 Steps of Optimization 51
planar reformer 316
PMAP (process map) 391–393, 406 Power MOSFET 300–301
power-steering assist 147–149, 153, 168 hydraulic 149–151, 151 rack and pinion steering gear with 150
pre-analysis for compounding noise factors 137–138
predicted performance improvement 416
prediction(s) 49–50, 263, 329, 332, 357–362, 379–384, 415, 423, 312 and confirmation 122, 218, 312 on S/N ratio 131, 141
summary of 50
pressure switch element 369 pressure switch module (PSM) 369
actuation pressure response 380, 382
contamination test pressure cycle 374
control factors and levels 374–375
current production pressure switch module, detailed 368–369 current production (N.C.) switching element, detailed 369
data analysis 375–379
ideal function 371–372, 372
noise factors 373
noise strategy 372
normally open feasibility and supplier competition 367–385 objective 370
prediction and confirmation 379–384 release pressure response 381 response data 377
robust assessment 370
S/N response plot 380–381
scope and P-diagram 370–371, 371
test data 375–376 testing criteria 372–374
verification 383
prevention 9, 11, 60–61 printed circuit boards see PCBs process map see PMAP
process capability 393, 419–420, 423–424 Florange settings 424
index 403
Tulsa settings 420
processes of changing levels of control factors six times 88–89 product development 1–2, 19, 38, 58–62, 98, 209, 237, 239, 345
traditional 32, 32
PSM see pressure switch module
Pugh analysis 62
Pugh chart 67
Pugh matrix 67–68
pull test 396
results 400–401
pulse width 253–254, 256–257, 300 modulation see PWM
“Puma” actuator 287, 293–296
PWM (pulse width modulation) 300 pyrolysis 336
Pythagorean Theorem 39
QFD see quality function deployment QLF see quality loss function quadratic term $\beta_2$ and linear term $\beta_1$, calculation of 143 quality as loss 1–4 quality characteristics 108, 110–111
evaluation of 122–123
quality engineering 94, 237–241 improvement of design technique by 239–241, 246 optimal design of engine mounting system based on 173–186 quality function deployment (QFD) 62, 225 quality loss function (QLF) 165–172 R&D (research and development) 111 rack and pinion steering gear with hydraulic power-steering assist 149–151, 151 with power-steering assist 150 RE see robust engineering (Taguchi) 233 reformer substrates 315–317, 317, 319, 322
reformer washcoat adhesion on metallic substrates 315–340
alloy composition 319–320
cleaning procedures 320
confirmation 329–334
control factor levels 320–321
control factors 319–320
description of experiment 322–323
furnace 322–323
orthogonal array and inner array 323
S/N and Beta array calculations 323 response tables 323
design improvement 329–334 design parameter combination for optimal design 333 evaluation guidelines for analysis 328 experimental setup 317–320
tubular reformer and planar reformer 316
two-step optimization 323–329 various possible geometries for reformer substrates 317 washcoat composition 320 on β₁, β₂ and S/N ratio 143, 144, 159, 161 for β₂ response 160
of S/N ratio 141, 141, 159, 160 analysis of data under unloaded condition 105 and sensitivity analysis of data under loaded condition 105 on steering torque 138
Ricoh 5
RO see robust optimization road feel 166
objective performance, relationship with value to customer 167 robust assessment 18, 29–30, 32, 38–39, 367–368, 370
data set for 41, 54
definition 5
eight steps to 17, 18, 52–55
step 1: define scope 52
step 2: identify ideal function/response 52
step 3: develop signal and noise strategies 52
step 4: select designs for assessment 52
step 5: execute and collect data 52
step 6: conduct data analysis 52
step 7: make judgments 53
step 8: lesson learned and action plan 53–55
general purpose actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 279–297 graph for 54
measurement method 281–285
methodology 391–394
robust optimization (RO) 1–2, 4–5, 7–8, 12, 15, 52–53, 55, 57–62, 312, 401
definition 5–15
eight steps to 17, 18, 19–51
and PDCA cycle 51
select project area 18, 51
step 1: define scope 19–20, 67
step 2: identify ideal function/response 20–23, 68
step 3: develop signal and noise strategies 23–32, 69–70 step 4: select control factors and levels 32–38, 70–72, 100–101
step 5: execute and collect data 38, 73–74
step 6: conduct data analysis 38–49, 101–104 step 7: predict and confirm 49–50
step 8: lesson learned and action plan 50–51
implementation of 57–62
introduction to 1–15
of lead-free reflow soldering process 389–402 and sequential application of robust engineering 347–364 test for 39
data set for assessing 30
definition 4
of direct injection diesel injector simulation model 253–257
of fuel delivery system 209–221 of Future Truck steering effort 147–172 higher 4
input M varied to benchmark 23 as interaction between control factor and noise factor 36 noise factors varied to benchmark 23–32 and optimization of FWD transmission for improved efficiency 187–207 thermal 354–358, 364–365
RoHS Directive 390
RVP values 213
in actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 286
for robust assessment 52
for robust optimization 19–20 scoping optimization/assessment project, considerations for 20 SEFs (steering effort functions) 147, 155, 159, 162, 165–166 comparison of, from several vehicles from different manufacturers 155 for parameter design optimization 156 sensing system optimization 20

(β) analysis 214–217, 216
sequential application of robust engineering
cascade learning (aka leveraged knowledge) 346 closed form solution 343–344 critical design parameters for thermal robustness 345–346 to math-models, CAE simulations, and accelerated testing 341–366
objective 345–346
robust optimization 347–364 ANOVA table for noise factors 363
control factors and levels 350
data analysis 351–353
dT response 352
heat flux signal 353
ideal function 347–349, 348
average thermal resistance 360
heat flux response 349
optimal design 359
plot of raw data 351
reference design 359
tuned design 360
input signal 350
math-model generated data 351
noise factors 349
noise levels for CFD N1 and N2 364
prediction and confirmation 357–362 response plot dynamic Beta 356–357
dynamic S/N 356
dynamic STB S/N 355
nondynamic STB S/N 354
response table – level sums for all noise factors 363
scope and P-diagram 347, 347

setting for reference, optimal and tuned designs 358 signal and noise strategy 349
subsystem thermal resistance (Beta) 356–357 thermal robustness (signal-to-noise) 354–356
verification 362–364
test Taguchi robust engineering methodology 346 thermal equivalent circuit
detailed 343, 344
simplified 343, 344
thermal robustness design template 345 signal factors 242, 320 levels 258

and noise strategies
for actuator robust assessment and benchmark study 290–291
for direct injection diesel injector optimization 258–259
for robust assessment 52
for robust optimization 23–32
for sequential application of robust engineering 349

varying 25 points
chart to support manufacturing tolerance decision-making 275 current total loss for 273 quality 225

and response 136
strategy 190–191
for optimization of front-wheel drive transmission for improved efficiency 190–191 signal-to-noise ratio see S/N ratio simulation models 81–82, 250–251, 258, 264, 277

robustness 252–257
single factor with three levels 305
slurry 316, 319–320, 328–329, 331 catalyst coating process optimization for diesel catalyzed particulate traps 403–425 compounding 407
parameters 320
small DC motors 97
optimization using functionality for evaluation 97–111 Smaller-the-Better see STB
SMT (surface mount) 389–392, 394, 399, 401
S/N ratio(s) 5, 39
and Beta computations of 39–43, 41–43, 326
for A1, A2 and A3 and plots 55
for all 18 sets of data of L18 44
for L18 data sets 43
sample of, with No. 1 data set of L18 45
concept of 43
response table for 43–48, 327 calculations 139–141, 198–200, 323 change of estimated and measured values of 185 conventional
comparison with analysis results based on standardized S/N ratio 127–131 Direct Injection Diesel injector optimization 262
dynamic 295, 356
low torque 296
and effects of ncomputable numbers 244 high and low, raw data plot for 45 prediction and confirmation based on 131, 141
response charts 47, 141, 203, 215, 310, 380–381
and \( \beta_1 \) and \( \beta_2 \) 144
and sensitivity analysis of data under loaded condition 105
response tables for 46, 397
and sensitivity, predicted and confirmed results on 106 standardized analysis results based on 125–128 comparison with analysis based on conventional S/N ratio 127–131 determining of sensitivities 125 determining of standardized S/N ratio 124 application to engine mounting system 175–178 coefficient of first term of sensitivity based on 129 concept of analysis based on 124 and conventional S/N ratio 128 data format for determining 125 data format for determining sensitivity based on 126 data reset for analysis using 139 graphs of factorial effects for six level changes 89
with optimum conditions used as standard 92
with wide level ranges 87 iterative application to engine mounting system 178–181 post-processing 159–165
prediction and confirmation based on 131 with respect to survival space 82–86 response graphs based on 130
thermal robustness 354–356
SOFC (solid oxide fuel cell) system 336 solenoid(s) 280, 300
simple 301
solid oxide fuel cell see SOFC system spin losses 192
distribution in automatic transmission 192 spring deformation vs. load characteristics, example of 81 spring mass model 66–67 nonlinear 81 response validation 72, 75–77 baseline 71
spring mass model (Continued) simplified: creation and validation 70–71 for vehicle offset impact event 71 spring stiffness updating, control factor level application for 73 standardized S/N ratio graphs of factorial effects
for six level changes 89
with optimum conditions used as standard 92
with wide level ranges 87
STB (Smaller-the-Better) 74, 348, 354–356, 361
dynamic 355
nondynamic 354
steering
angle on steering wheel 135 control loop behavior, intended 154
information 134
speed–steering torque characteristic 136 system, next-generation: optimization of using computer simulation 133–145 torque on steering wheel 135 response graph on 138 steering effort function see SEF strategy for varying signal and noise 25 subsystem(s) diagram of (coupling factor in vehicle theft using DFSS) 228 level optimization
by OEMs 95–234
by suppliers 235–389
thermal resistance (Beta) 356–357 supplier competition and pressure switch module normally open feasibility 367–385 suppliers, subsystems level optimization by 235–385 surface mount see SMT switching losses 300
Synform 372
system design technique 241–246
parameter design diagram 241, 242
Taguchi, Dr. Genuchi 1–4, 8, 55, 86, 110–111, 132, 134, 145, 207, 241, 281, 290, 394
Taguchi designs 2
Taguchi loss function 269, 272, 273
for dynamic tolerance design 277 application of standard S/N ratio 175–178
iterative 178–181
recommendations for 277
test Taguchi robust engineering methodology 342, 346 Taguchi two-step optimization 201, 346, 354, 357, 378
tape measure spring windings to torque relationship 283 TCU (transmission control unit) 368 technique on modeling 240
and time increase 35 test data 375–376
equipment 281–284
planning 62
stand layout 190
thermal equivalent circuit 342, 345, 347
detailed 343, 344
simplified 343, 344
thermal loads see TLs thermal resistance 349, 351, 357–358 average 360
subsystem 356–357
thermal robustness 341–342, 351, 357–358, 364–365 critical design parameters 345–346 design template 345
signal-to-noise 354–356
three-point engine mounting system 175, 185 time and temperature increase 35 TLs (thermal loads) 341, 345
tolerance design 13–15
of Direct Injection Diesel injector optimization 268–78 ANOVA for each injection point 269 factors and experimental layout 269 factors and levels 270
loss function 269–270
dynamic 270–271
experimental layout 270
signal point vs. dynamic 269 signal point by signal point 269–270 tolerancing 13
braking 30, 39, 52–53
load fixture 283
required for operation, reduction in 123
steering 135–139, 142–145, 154–156, 163–164, 168, 171 tape measure spring windings to relationship 283 total sum of squares 39, 41, 45, 119, 125, 362 decomposition of 42 traditional product development 32, 237 traditional design technique 239, 240 training, education and 58, 61–62 transformation of energy 6, 8, 10–12, 21, 30, 39, 43, 104, 107, 189, 191, 199, 209 of information 7–8, 10, 21 transmission control unit see TCU tubular reformer 316
Tulsa, Oklahoma 403, 405, 406, 416, 417, 419, 420, 421 tuned optimal design, initial design and 144–145 tuning 2, 93, 134, 136, 147–148, 151, 153, 155, 157, 279, 346, 358, 365, 379 to targeted value 142–144
catalyst slurry coating process optimization 415
Direct Injection Diesel injector 259–263, 263
discrete floating MOS gate driver 311
and energy response 35
reformer washcoat adhesion on metallic substrates 323–329 unloaded (idling) condition, evaluation under 99–100, 103–106, 110 validity of formulations, data set and graphs for checking 31 valve assembly 147–149, 152–154, 168
design 152–153, 157–158, 160–162, 164–166
for Future Truck program 152 exploded view of typical 153
VATS (Vehicle Anti-Theft System) 224
VDI see vehicle anti-theft system VECD see vehicle engine compartment displacement vehicle (crash performance 65
(crash responses 66

Index
vehicle (Continued)

- crush zone classification 70
- dash intrusion (VDI) 69, 70
- engine compartment displacement (VECD) 69, 70
- full validation of round 3 optimized dash intrusion 76
- full validation of round 3 optimized impact performance 76
- full validation of round 3 optimized results 75
- impact design 66
- impact velocity (VV) 70
- level of optimization 63–94
- offset crashworthy design, optimization of using simplified analysis model 65–78
- offset impact, stepwise implementation of DFSS optimization for 67–76
- stiffness demand 65
- theft, improving coupling factor using DFSS 223–234
- verification 218–219
- phase 204
- test conditions 205
- vibration spectrum 173, 177, 179–180, 182

- before and after optimization 177, 179
- variation of 180
- X3, change of 182
- X10, change of 182
- visual scoring 390–391, 394–398, 400
- VoC see Voice of Customer
- Voice of Customer (VoC) demands 65
- VV see vehicle impact velocity

- washcoat 405, 409
- adhesion on metallic substrates 315–340
- composition 320
- wear 8, 11, 287, 290, 296
- WEEE 390
- Whack-a-Mole Development Process 32

- X3
- change of control factors for 183
- change of vibration spectrum 182
- X10
- change of control factors for 184
- change of vibration spectrum 182
- Xerox 5

- Youden Square 188, 193–194, 206

- “Zebra” actuator 287, 292, 294–296
- ZTA (zirconia toughened alumina) 317