Index

Page references followed by fig indicate an illustrated figure; followed by t indicate a table.

A

ABB (Asea Brown Boveri):
- ABACUS (Asea Brown Boveri Accounting and Communication System) of, 163, 165, 196; comparing Haier managers to those in, 196–197; comparing the Haier business model and, 193–197; corporate cultural transformation of, 15, 162–166, 170; described as having internal hybrid governance, 197; radical decentralization design of, 193–194
- Agency theory: comparing traditional and Haier principal-agent relationship, 207*fig*; on firm viewed as nexus of contracts, 205; Haier business model application of, 205–208
- Ahmed, Muntaz, 151–152
- Ambition, 152
- Appelo, Jurgen, 154, 155
- Art of War (Sun Tzu), 4
- Aucma (China), 33–34
- Autonomy capacity, 153

B

B2B (business-to-business) units:
- Haier Group transformation of market ZZJYTs into, 137–140, 202, 203*fig*; key performance indicators (KPIs) for, 140; strong relationship between Haier Group and new, 202
- Barnevik, Parcy, 162, 164, 165, 166
- Bartlett, Chris, 162, 191–193, 197
- Bennis, Warren, 154
- “Beyond the M-Form: Toward a Managerial Theory of the Firm” (Bartlett and Ghoshal), 191–192
- “Big Hairy Audacious Goal,” 12
- Bollier, David, 171–172
- Bosch-Siemens (Germany-U.S.):
  - joint venture with Wuxi Little Swan as BSW, 36–37; local talent development and management by, 31; origins of, 36; success in Chinese market by, 25, 32, 36–37; successful brand positioning strategy by, 28; as top brand in Europe, 27
Brands: Haier named as number one global home appliance, 231; Maytag's failure to establish an international, 34–35; Zhang Ruimin's focus on creating Haier high-quality products, 48–49
BRIC (Brazil, Russia, India, and China): emerging markets of, 3; examining globalization through perspective of, 3–4
British East India Company, 148
Brown, John Seely, 171, 173
BSW (Bosch-Siemens joint venture), 36–37
Built to Last: Successful Habits of Visionary Companies (Collins and Porras), 154
Business model canvas: description of, 44fig–45; Haier corporate culture stage 1 (1984–2005), 55fig; Haier ZZJYT (Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti), 76fig
Business models: ABB's radical decentralization, 15, 162–166, 170, 193–194, 196–197; business model canvas illustration of, 44fig–45, 55fig; creation of a corporate culture to support, 45; Qingdao Refrigerator Factory, 47–49, 53–54; translating the firm's vision for itself function of, 43. See also Haier business model
Business process reengineering (BPR): Haier's market chain (1998–2005) and, 63, 65, 67, 69fig; outside publicity and reception to Haier's, 67; Zenger's argument on decentralization and, 199
Business purpose: discerning “obvious” and “optional,” 7; as strategic choice, 6–7
Business structure: multidivisional template as standard, 7; strategic choice for, 7
C
Capitalism, 150
Catfish mechanism: leader competition facilitated through the, 99–100; three-door module ZZJYT use of the, 114–115, 117
Chakravarthy, Bala, 8, 9
Chandler, Alfred, Jr., 150, 162, 189–190, 193
Change: corporate culture as thriving only when open to, 81; high-performing organizational lesson on, 152; how value is created by embracing, 211–226; as the only constant, 1, 81; speed of, 155–156. See also Transformational change
Changjiang Securities, 62
Changsha (China), 35–36
China: Confucianism influence on, 77, 79; establishing itself as “factor of the world,” 144; Great Leap Forward and Cultural Revolution of, 48, 50, 52, 83; Haier Group as metaphor for path taken by, 144; market faced by state-owned enterprises (1980s) of, 46–47; as source of new managerial insights, 4; WTO membership and opening up of home appliance market in, 25, 38, 62
China Europe International Business School, 66
Chinese consumers: average monthly income of middle-class, 23; demand for home refrigerators (1980s) by, 45–46. See also Customers

Chinese home appliance manufacturers: Aucma, 33–34; Galanz, 26; Gree, 39; Hangzhou Wanbao, 36; Hisense, 26; market share and role by, 38–40; Meiling, 24; Midea, 26, 27; Rengsheng, 24; Rong Shi Da, 35; Snowflake, 27–28; TCL, 39; Wuxi Littleswan, 36–37; Xinfei, 24; Zhongyi, 35–36. See also Haier Group; Home appliance manufacturers; Qingdao Refrigerator Company (China)

Chinese home appliance market: achieving customer-centricity, 30; Bosch-Siemens's success in the, 36–37; brand positioning and brand building in, 27–28; China's local manufacturers share of the, 38–40; comparing U.S., western Europe, and (1998–2011), 21fig; developing local talent and management, 30–32; Electrolux's problems in the, 35–36; examining the history of the, 17–18, 21–26; faced by state-owned enterprises (1980s), 46–47; General Electric's choice to not pursue, 33–34; Japanese and Korean brands competing in the, 22, 37–38; key lessons on western brands competition in the, 26–32; Maytag's failed approach to the, 34–35; value chain and choice of distribution channels, 28–29; Whirlpool's failed approach to the, 32–33; WTO membership requiring opening up the, 25, 38, 62. See also Home appliance industry

Chinese managerial insights: examining the sources of, 4; Haier's story and lessons and, 217–226; recognizing the value of, 4–5

Choices. See Strategic choices

Coase, Ronald J., 15, 176, 186, 187–188, 204, 221

Collective commitment, 156

Collins, Jim, 12, 154

Communication: ABB's ABACUS system of, 163, 165, 196; importance of full and free, 154

Compensation. See Haier employee compensation

Competition: early history of Chinese home appliance, 17–47, 62; Haier employee opportunities to reach goal through, 98; Haier's catfish mechanism to create, 99–100, 114–115, 117; high-performing organizational lesson on speed differentiator of, 152; proprietary knowledge required for effective, 222

Conflict inevitability, 155

Confucianism, 77, 79

Consensus, 154

Corporate culture: created to support the chosen business model, 45; Galbraith's five-factor star model on choices for, 56–57, 58fig; strategic choices that create, 45; as thrives only when open to being recreated, 81; Zhang Ruimin's belief that enterprise growth depends on, 79. See also Haier corporate culture; Organizations

Corporate culture change: ABB experience with, 15, 162–166, 170, 193–197; becoming a normal way of working, 223–224;
Morning Star’s experience with, 15, 159, 161–162, 170, 197; Nash Confectionery (India) experience with, 15, 166–168, 170, 197; Oticon’s experience with, 15, 157–159, 160ff, 167, 170, 197. See also Haier corporate culture change; Transformational change

Creative Destruction: Why Companies That Are Built to Last Underperform the Market—and How to Successfully Transform Them (Foster and Kaplan), 154

Cultural engines: combining Haier’s value engine with, 215ff; Haier business model’s inclusion of, 216ff; illustration of Haier’s, 214–215ff

Cultural Revolution (China), 48, 50, 52, 83

Culture. See Corporate culture

Customer-centricity: Chinese household appliance market focus on, 30; description of, 30; Haier’s corporate culture change toward, 62–70ff. See also Haier service orientation

Customers: Haier’s corporate culture change in serving the, 62–70ff; Haier’s value creation linking employees, organization, and, 84, 105–107ff; Haier’s ZZJYTs to maintain zero distance with the, 12, 14, 71–77, 78ff, 82, 84; service defined by Haier as satisfaction of the, 86. See also Chinese consumers

Decentralization: ABB’s radical, 15, 162–166, 170, 193–194; comparing Haier business model and

Decision making spectrum, 171

Deloitte, 151

Distribution channels: development of China’s, 39–40; downstream environment of China’s, 39; Haier’s choice to include competitor products in their, 39, 40; value chain and the choice of, 28–29

Doz, Yves, 154, 155, 156, 158, 172, 173

Drucker, Peter: on identifying purpose of the business, 7; on inspiring extraordinary things of people, 96; predicting China’s as source of new managerial insights, 4

Economics: capitalism, 150; Coase’s argument why corporations exist in, 221; neoclassical, 177–178; new-economy and old-economy industries, 147–148. See also Market-hierarchy debate; Transaction cost economics (TCE)

Electrolux (Sweden): entrance into Chinese market by, 35–36; European market success of, 27; expansion into U.S. market, 19, 39; failure in Chinese market, 35–36; as leading Swedish brand (late 1970s and early 1980s), 18; too frequent changes in local managers, 31; Zhongyi and Hangzhou Wanbao acquisitions by, 35–36

Emotional expression, 155

Empowerment: Haier’s belief in employee entrepreneurship and,
13–14, 82–85, 93–96; Haier’s move away from decentralization and toward, 202–203; Haier’s story on talent, 218–220
Enterprise growth model: alternatives to the, 8–10; description of the, 8, 9
Enterprise resource planning (ERP) system, 66–67, 70
Entrepreneurship: Haier belief in service goals through their employee, 13–14, 82–85, 93–96; of high-performing organizations, 153
Ernst & Young’s Global Growth Award, 166
Euromonitor, 231
European East Indian Companies, 148
Execution quadrant (strategic income statement): description of the, 120, 123–124; project progress reviews for reporting on, 123–124; reporting sheets used to report on speed of, 123; ZEUS model on relationships with, 122
External hybrid governance: distinguishing attributes of market, hierarchy, and, 181–182; mirror of forms of internal and, 199–200

F
Fang Liu, 110
Fast Strategy (Doz and Kosonen), 154
“First, Let’s Fire All the Managers” (Hamel), 161
First-tier. See Haier ZZJYT first-tier Foster, Richard N., 154
Free communication, 154
Freedom requires control. See Haier’s freedom requires control approach

G
Galbraith, Jay, 56, 159, 167. See also Star model
General Electric (GE) [U.S.]:
choice to not pursue expansion into China by, 33–34; as leading U.S. brand (late 1970s and early 1980s), 18, 27; outsourcing production to Chinese OEM, 33; partnership with Aucma, 33–34; product-growth (1980s and 1990s) by, 20
General Motors (GM) [U.S.], multidivisional structure first established by, 7
Ghoshal, Sumatra, 162, 191–193, 197
Globalization: examined from BRIC perspective, 3–4; Haier named as number one global home appliance brand, 231; the home appliance industry’s increasing, 40; Maytag’s failure to internationalize their brand, 34–35; MIT study on variety of paths to competitive success in, 8
Gome (China), 39
Good to Great (Collins), 12, 154
Governance. See Organizational governance
Granovetter, M., 182–183
Great Leap Forward (China), 48
Gree (China), 39
Guanxi (relationship networks), 4

H
Hagel, John, 171, 173, 221–222
Haier brand: named as number one global home appliance brand, 231;
Qingdao Refrigerator’s focus on quality (1984–2005) to build the, 49–59; Zhang’s emphasis on high-quality products of, 47–49, 50
Haier business model: agency theory applied to the, 205–208; based on establishing well-known brand, 49; comparing ABB’s and, 193–197; comparing traditional principal-agent relationship and that in, 207fig; economic analysis of, 175–179; evolution of the, 201–205; Haier’s change to customer orientation, 62–70fig; Haier’s inverted pyramid and, 90–93, 194–195fig; market-hierarchy debate in context of evolution of, 203fig–204; as a market operating within a hierarchy, 201; moving toward power decentralization and people empowerment, 202–203; the origins of, 45–47; perceived as open platform integrating outside ideas, 96; placement and responsibilities of ZZJYT’s in new, 88t, 90–93; Qingdao Refrigerator Factory’s original, 47–49, 53–54; recent launch (2012) of a networking strategy change in their, 227–231; reinventing (1998–2005), 62–70fig. See also Business models; Haier governance
Haier corporate culture: cultural and value engines for value creation, 214fig–216fig; driving scalable learning, 220–223; heart of the latest incarnation of values of the, 95–96; high-quality products brand of, 48–49; impact of destruction of poor quality refrigerators event on, 48; moving toward customer-centrality, 62–70fig; the origins of, 45–47; reflecting Zhang Ruimin’s belief on enterprise growth tied to, 79; responsiveness facilitated by preset conversations, 83–84, 103–105; reviewing the thirty years of reinventing the, 77, 79; six key themes guiding the, 13–14, 82–108; zero distance with the customer goal of, 12, 14, 71–77, 78fig, 82. See also Corporate culture
Haier corporate culture change stage 1: business model canvas, 55fig; the first reinvention of Qingdao’s business model, 53–54; focus on quality and manufacturing excellence for, 50–53; mapping the cultural changes, 54–59; summary of the, 94t
Haier corporate culture change stage 2: attempt to share star model with others, 59–60; replicating star model in stunned fish, 60–62; summary of the, 94t

Haier corporate culture change stage 3: BPR (business process reengineering) during, 63, 65, 67, 69fig; daily SBU OEC forms to measure job performance, 65–66; decision to create the customer-oriented market chain, 63–64; matrix structure of creating the customer-oriented market chain, 64–65; move toward customer-centrality, 62–70fig; summary of the, 94t

Haier corporate culture change stage 4: business model canvas of ZZJYT during, 76fig; introducing ZZJYTs for zero distance to the customer, 71–77, 78fig; summary of the, 94t; transformation to an inverted triangle organization during, 73fig, 194–195fig

Haier corporate culture change stage 5: for creating an open platform system without organizational boundaries, 228–231; recent announcement of the new, 227–228

Haier corporate culture themes: freedom requires control, 83, 96–103; Haier thinks of itself as a service company, 82, 85–90; Haier’s success on the basis of the six, 108; responsiveness can be facilitated by preset conversations, 83–84, 103–105; running throughout the Haier’s corporate culture reincarnation, 13–14; service is best achieved with zero distance from customers, 82, 90–93; their entrepreneurial workforce used to achieve their service goals, 13–14, 82–85, 93–96; value creation linking customers, organization, and employees, 84, 105–107fig. See also Haier Group lessons

Haier Corporation: decision to include competitor products in their distribution channels, 39, 40; examining the transformational change experienced by, 2–3; globalization strategy developed by, 39; origins of, 2; Qingdao Refrigerator Factory (1991) renamed as, 62; renamed as Haier Group (1992), 62; strategic transformation from manufacturing to service-orientation by, 39–40. See also Haier Group; Qingdao Refrigerator Factory

Haier employee compensation: good performance linked to accelerating salary scheme, 124–125fig; people-goal-wage mechanism for, 100–103; profit-sharing ratio of, 125–126; what happens if the team misses its target, 126; worker 3E cards linking quality to wages, 51; ZEUS model (individual-goal-pay combination) used for, 119–120, 121fig, 122fig; ZZJTY budget for annual salary and bonuses of, 84. See also Performance; Strategic income statement

Haier employees: achieving service goals through entrepreneurial, 13–14, 82–85, 93–96; competition to reach goal by, 98; custom of naming technical innovations after their innovator, 52; empowerment of, 202–203, 218–220; Haier University training of, 63–64; Haier ZZJYT establishment of talent funnel for, 99; Haier’s value creation linking customers, organization, and, 84, 105–107fig; heart of corporate values guiding, 95–96; impact of ZZJYT organizational structure on service orientation by, 93–96; individual performance evaluation of, 126–130; people-goal-wage mechanism to compensate, 100–103; right to choose ZZJYT team leaders and members, 100; SBU (strategic business unit) OEC form filled out by, 65–66, 70fig; 6S footprints self-assessment practice by, 52–53; talent funnel used to select ZZJYT team members, 99, 115–116fig; transparency of career paths for, 220; worker 3E cards linking quality to wages of, 51; ZZJTY budget for annual salary and bonuses of, 84. See also How we work together factor; Talent; Talent and skills factor

Haier governance: comparing ABB (Asea Brown Boveri) and, 193–197; distinguishing attributes of, 200t–201; high intensity of market incentives in, 201, 209–210. See also Haier business model

Haier Group: anticipating what we will learn from success of, 10–12; approach to the market-hierarchy debate by, 178–179; B2B companies relationship to, 137–140, 202, 203fig; college students recruited to intern at, 117; comparison between high-performing organization case studies and, 169–171; establishment of U.S. factor in South Carolina (2002), 25; as example of how change creates value, 211–226; Haier Corporation (1992) renamed as, 62; Haier's value creation by the, 84, 105–107fig, 213–217; inverted triangle pyramid organization of, 73fig, 86, 87fig, 88–93, 194–195fig, 206–207fig; as leading brand in Chinese market, 27; looking forward and looking back at the history of, 144–145; as metaphor for China's path, 144; named as number one global brand in home appliances, 231; newly launched open platform system for, 228–231; radar net metaphor of, 230; revenue and net profit (2008–2012), 217t; reviewing the main attributes of their story, 212–217; six themes guiding, 13–14, 82–108; value engine, cultural engine, and value and cultural engines together, 214fig–216fig. See also Chinese home appliance manufacturers; Haier Corporation; Haier ZZJYT (Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti); Zhang Ruimin

Haier Group lessons: applicability of the, 226; continuous cultural reinvention becoming a normal way of working, 223–224; corporate culture that can drive scalable learning, 220–223; Haier is selling talent and not refrigerators, 218; Haier reliance on trust and merit to empower talent, 218–220; thirty-year history of change as built on lessons learned, 224–225; top-down leadership is essential for successful change, 225. See also Haier corporate culture themes; Leadership

Haier inverted triangle organization: agency theory applied to, 206–208; Haier's business model and, 90–93; moving from “pyramid hierarchy” to, 73fig, 194–195fig; three-tier three-type in Haier’s, 86, 87fig, 88–90
Haier managers: comparing ABB and, 196–197; continuing to apply the Haier Group lessons, 226; line managers in second- and third-tier ZZJYT, 141, 142; staff managers in second- and third-tier ZZJYT, 141, 142; Strategic Income Statement for a Module Manager of the Three-Door ZZJYT, 128fig–129fig

Haier open platform system: challenges and benefits of change to, 230–231; recently launched, 228–229; reducing organizational distance between Haier and customer on the, 229–230; reorganizing the ZZJYT tiers into end user- and resource-type, 229, 230; reorganizing ZZJYT for the, 229–230

Haier product quality: how worker 3E cards used to determine wages improved, 51; lessons on how to achieve, 223–224; OEC (overall, every, control, and clear) practice for, 50–51; Qingdao Refrigerator’s focus (1984–2005) on, 49–59

Haier Ren (corporate newspaper), 53

Haier service orientation: achieving service goals through entrepreneurial energies of workforce, 13–14, 82–85, 93–96; cultural change toward, 82, 85–90; entrepreneurial workforce to achieve, 13–14, 82–85, 93–96; philosophical belief on creation of value through, 213; preset conversations to facilitate, 83–84, 103–105; value creation based on, 84, 105–107fig; ZZJYT for zero distance to the customer component of, 12, 14, 71–77, 78fig, 82, 84. See also Customer-centricity

Haier University, 63–64

Haier ZZJYT first-tier: contracting system used among all types and tiers, 107fig; description and functions of the, 74, 76fig, 89, 90, 92, 109; group revenues as generated by, 105; inverted triangle and interrelations of the, 73fig, 86, 87fig, 88–93, 194–195fig, 206–208; manufacturing type of, 140–141; market type of, 130–140, 202; new open platform system changes to the, 229–230; number of ZZJYT in category (April 2012) of, 89t; placement and responsibilities in Haier business model, 88t; second- and third-tier services, talent, and resources provided to, 105–107fig; three-door refrigerator module type of, 110–130

Haier ZZJYT second-tier: contracting system used among all types and tiers, 107fig; description and functions of the, 74, 76fig, 89, 90, 92–93, 110; evaluating functional staff using strategic income statement, 143; inverted triangle and interrelations of the, 73fig, 86, 87fig, 88–93, 194–195fig, 206–208; line managers in the, 141, 142; new open platform system changes to the, 229–230; number of ZZJYT in category (April 2012) of, 89t; paid for services and resources supplied to the first-level tier, 105–107fig; placement and responsibilities in Haier business model, 88t; staff managers in the, 141, 142

Haier ZZJYT third-tier: contracting system used among all types and tiers, 107fig; description and functions of the, 89–90, 92, 110; evaluating functional staff using strategic income statement, 143; inverted triangle and interrelations of the, 73\textit{fig}, 86, 87\textit{fig}, 88–93, 194–195\textit{fig}, 206–207\textit{fig}; line managers in the, 141, 142; new open platform system changes to the, 229–230; number of ZZJYT in category (April 2012) of, 89; paid for services and resources supplied to the first-level tier, 105–107\textit{fig}; placement and responsibilities in Haier business model, 88\textit{fig}; staff managers in the, 141, 142

Haier ZZJYTs (\textit{Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti}): annual salary budget under, 84; as basic organizational unit in Haier, 93–94; business model canvas on, 76\textit{fig}; catfish mechanism to create competition within, 99–100, 114–115, 117; comparing ABB’s radical decentralization to, 193–197; Confucianism approach to, 77; contracting system among types and tiers of, 106, 107\textit{fig}; description and impact on employees by, 93–96; freedom requires control approach to effective, 83, 97–103; internal changes at Haier due to, 75, 77; interns hired to work at, 117; inverted triangle design of, 86, 87\textit{fig}, 88–90, 195–196\textit{fig}, 206–207\textit{fig}; key issues in the strategic income statement of, 101\textit{fig}–102; manufacturing type of, 140–141; market type of, 130–140, 137–140, 202, 203\textit{fig}; number in each level category (April 2012), 89; open platform system changes to the, 229–230; people-goal-wage mechanism used in, 100–103; placement and responsibilities in Haier’s new business model, 88\textit{r}, 90–93; preliminary conclusions regarding model of, 143–144; right to choose team leaders and members within, 100; as self-managed profit centers, 71, 74; self-organizing and self-governing characteristics of, 112–113; strategic income statement relationships, 104\textit{fig}; talent funnels created within, 99; three-door refrigerator module type of, 110–130; Zhang on value to Haier of the, 71–72, 74. \textit{See also} Haier Group; Organization structure/processes; Zero distance with the customer

Haier’s freedom requires control approach: catfish mechanism of creating competition concept of, 99–100, 114–115, 117; employees compete to reach goal concept of, 98; market determines goals concept of, 98; people-goal-wage mechanism of, 100–103; right to choose team leaders and members concept of, 100; the talent funnel concept of, 99; ZZJYTs managed using, 83, 97–103

Haier’s strategic choices: to include competitor products in distribution channels, 39, 40; to transform from manufacturing to service-orientation, 39–40. \textit{See also} Haier corporate culture change; Strategic choices

\textit{The Halo Effect} (Rosenzweig), 151

Hamel, Gary, 93, 147, 161, 162, 226

Hangzhou Wanbao (China), 36

\textit{Harvard Business Review}, 161, 164

Henderson, Andrew D., 151–152

Hierarchical governance: distinguishing attributes of market, hybrid, and, 181–182; examining interfirm networks in context of, 179–189; Granovetter’s criticism of TCE as represented by, 183; Haier business model of a market operating within a, 201; Haier’s business model and elements of, 203fig–204; mass production and, 178–179; origins and development of, 177–178. See also Market-hierarchy debate

High-performing organizations: ABB, 15, 162–166, 170, 171, 193–197; attributes required for, 154–156; balancing between hierarchical legacies and market advantages, 173; commonalities and lessons of, 152–153; comparison between Haier and, 169–171; five essential elements of, 172; future directions of these, 168–169; lessons learned from examining, 171–173; literature on success of, 154; Morning Star, 15, 159, 161–162, 170, 171, 197; Nash Confectionery (India), 15, 166–168, 170, 171, 197; Oticon, 15, 157–159, 160fig, 170, 171, 197; regularity to spontaneity decision making spectrum of, 171; what is required for creating future, 153–156. See also Organizations

Hobbes, Thomas, 182

Home appliance industry: challenges of globalization of the, 26–38; China’s early history in the, 17–18; comparing market in China, U.S., and western Europe (1998–2011), 21fig; continuing globalization of the, 40; examining the post-World War II history of the, 17; global competition (1980s) in the, 18–20; Haier named as number one global brand in the, 231; the U.S. market (1980s and 1990s), 20–21. See also Chinese home appliance market

Home appliance manufacturers: Bosch-Siemens (Germany-U.S.), 27–28, 31–32, 36–37; Electrolux (Sweden), 18, 19, 27, 31, 35–36; General Electric (GE) [U.S.], 18, 20, 27, 33–34; Japanese and Korean brands competing in China, 37–38; Liebherr (Germany), 23, 47, 49, 54; Maytag (U.S.), 18, 20, 31, 34–35; Mitsubishi (Japan), 18; Panasonic (Japan), 18, 37; Sanyo (Japan), 18; Whirlpool (U.S.), 18, 19, 20, 24, 27–28, 32–33, 35. See also Chinese home appliance manufacturers

How the Mighty Fall (Collins), 154

How we work together factor: Galbraith’s star model on corporate culture choice of, 58fig; market chain era, 65–66, 70fig; replicating start model in stunned fish, 61fig; zero distance with the customer using ZZJYT, 78fig; Zhang Ruimin’s approach to constantly redefining, 81–82. See also Haier employees; OEC (overall, every, control, and clear) practice

Human resource development, 220

Hybrid governance: distinguishing attributes of market, hierarchy, and, 181–182t; external, 198t, 199fig–200; internal, 197–198t, 199fig–200; Williamson on characteristics of, 180–181

Immelt, Jeffery, 34

In Search of Excellence (Peters and Waterman), 151, 154

Individual-goal-pay combination (ZEUS model): description of the,
119–120; illustrated diagram of the, 121fig; relationships of the, 122fig; strategic income statement quadrants used to understand the, 120–126

Individual performance evaluation: illustration of ZEUS sheet used for, 126–127, 128fig–129fig; income statements for sales representatives, 137; KPIs (key performance indicators) considered for, 127; Strategic Income Statement for a Module Manager of the Three-Door ZZJYT, 128fig–129fig; ZZJYT leader appraisal and blind peer evaluation system for, 127, 130

Inevitability of conflict, 155

Influence concept, 154

Innovation. See Corporate culture change; Haier corporate culture change

Interfirm networks: description of, 179–180; Italian and Japanese experience with, 179, 184–185; moving to intrafirm networks from, 189–193; observations on market-hierarchy debate and, 184–189; transaction cost economics (TCE) and, 180–182; trust in context of, 182–184

Internal hybrid governance: distinguishing attributes of, 198; examples of, 197; the mirror of external (market) and, 199fig–200

Inverted triangle organization.
  See Haier inverted triangle organization

Italian interfirm networks, 179, 184–185

J

Japan: contributions to organization operations by, 4; interfirm networks used by firms of, 179, 184–185; keiretsu organizations of, 179; Mitsui and other commercial organizations (17th century) of, 148

Japanese home appliance manufacturers: competition outcomes in the Chinese market, 37–38; early entrance into Chinese market, 22

Jiao Zhou (China): demographics of, 133; market ZZJYTs operating in, 131–134fig

Johnston, Dale, 166–167, 168

K

Kaplan, Sarah, 154

Keiretsu (Japan), 179

Key performance indicators (KPIs):
  used for individual performance evaluation, 127; for market ZZJYTs’ B2B (business-to-business) units, 140

Kodak, 81

Kolind, Lars, 157, 158, 159

Korean home appliance manufacturers: competition outcomes in the Chinese market, 37–38; early entrance into Chinese market by, 22

Kosonen, Mikko, 154, 155, 156, 158, 172, 173

L

Leadership: catfish mechanism for facilitating competition within, 99–100, 114–115, 117; Haier ZZJYTs’ individual performance evaluation of, 127, 130;
Haier ZZJYTs' self-organization of team members and, 100; strong and people-based, 153, 156; successful change as requiring top-down, 225. See also Haier Group lessons; Managerial insights; Managers

LG (South Korea), 37–38
Li Gaojie, 114–115, 117
Liebherr Group (Germany), 23, 47, 49, 54
Lindahl, Gran, 164
Line managers (ZZJYTs), 141, 142
Lorange, Peter, 8, 9

M

M-form organizations: Bartlett and Ghoshal's expansion of the, 191–193, 197; Chandler's description of, 189–191; characterized by limited devolution of power, 200

Management 3:0: Leading Agile Developers, Developing Agile Leaders (Appelo), 154, 155

Managerial insights: examining the sources of Chinese, 4; Haier's story and lessons and, 217–226; recognizing the value of, 4–5. See also Leadership

Managers: applying the Haier Group lessons to their own work, 226; comparing ABB and Haier, 196–197; second- and third-tier ZZJYTs line, 141, 142; second- and third-tier ZZJYTs staff, 141, 142; strategic income statement for three-door module ZZJYT, 128fig–129 fig. See also Leadership

Manufacturing ZZJYTs, 140–141

March, James G., 149

Market: balancing between hierarchical legacies and advantages of, 173; Chinese home appliance, 17–47, 62; five essential elements of well-structure, 172; Haier's belief that goals are determined by the, 98

Market chain theory, 68

Market-hierarchy debate: distinguishing attributes of market, hierarchy, and hybrid in, 181–182t; economic perspective on mass production and balance in, 178–179; Haier's approach to, 178–179; Haier's business model evolution and context of, 203fig–204; how high-performing organizations approach balancing the, 173; hybrid governance structure compromise in, 180–182t; interfirm networks, partnerships, and alliances in the, 179–180; observations regarding interfirm networks and the, 184–189. See also Economics; Hierarchical governance; Organizational governance

Market incentives: comparing the ABB model to the Haier model of, 193–197; Haier governance and role of high intensity of, 201, 209–210; moving away from hierarchy to governance with, 193; transaction cost economics (TCE) and problem of lack of, 192–193

Market ZZJYTs: ABCD grading system used by, 136; description and organization role of, 130–131; income statements for sales representatives, 137; operations in Jiao Zhou market in Qingdao by a, 131–133; performance evaluation in, 134–136; sales hierarchy for Haier in the Qingdao area, 134fig; solving the problem of cutting inventory and sales revenue, 136; transformed into B2B companies, 137–140, 202, 203fig
Mass production hierarchy, 178–179
Mayo, Elton, 149
Maytag (U.S.): failure to enter Chinese market by, 34–35; joint venture with Rong Shi Da, 35; as leading U.S. brand (late 1970s and early 1980s), 18; product-growth (1980s and 1990s) by, 20; as victim of vacillating approaches, 31; Whirlpool’s acquisition (2005) of, 35
McGregor, Douglas, 149, 219–220
McKinsey & Company, 151
McMillan, John, 172–173, 173
Meiling (China), 24
Miao Shuqiang, 131
Micklethwait, John, 149
Midea (China), 26, 27
Mitsubishi (Japan), 18
Mitsui (17th century, Japan), 148
Module ZZJYT: fixed price relationship between manufacturing and, 141; three-door, 110–130
Morning Star Company: corporate culture change experienced by, 15, 159, 161–162, 170; described as internal hybrids, 197; spider web metaphor used at, 230
Multidivisional structure, 7

N
Nanjing Lu (Shanghai shopping street), 46
Nash Confectionery (India): corporate cultural change by, 15, 166–168, 170; described as internal hybrids, 197
“The Nature of the Firm” (Coase), 176
The Nature of the Firm (Coase), 221
Neoclassical economics, 177–178
New-economy industries, 147
Nokia, 81

O
OEC (overall, every, control, and clear) practice: Galbraith’s star model on corporate culture choice of, 57, 58fig; Qingdao Refrigerator adoption of, 50–51, 59. See also How we work together factor
Old-economy industries: contributions of organizational design to, 148; dreams driving, 147–148; as driving our economies and societies, 148
Open platform system: challenges and benefits of Haier’s change to the, 230–231; Haier’s recently launched, 228–229; reducing organizational distance between Haier and customer on the, 229–230; reorganizing ZZJYT for the, 229–230
Organization structure/processes: Galbraith’s star model on corporate culture choice of, 57, 58fig; market chain era, 70fig; multidivisional, 7; replicating the star model in stunned fish, 61fig; transformation to inverted triangle, 73fig; zero distance with the customer using ZZJYT, 78fig. See also Haier ZZJYT (Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti)
Organizational design: ABB’s radical decentralization, 15, 162–166, 170, 193–194; advantages of simplicity in, 175; comparing Taylorists and Weberites study of, 149; generations of study of, 149–150; Haier ZZJYT inverted triangle, 86, 87fig, 88–90, 195–196fig,
206–207fig; Haier's recently launched open platform system, 228–231; historic contributions of, 148; as underlying the development of modern capitalism, 150

Organizational governance: Barlett and Ghoshal’s expansion of the M-form, 191–193, 197; comparing ABB and Haier business models and, 193–197; Haier’s business model and economic activity, 176–179; hierarchical, 173, 177–189, 201, 203fig–204; interfirm networks, 179–189; intrafirm networks, 189–193; M-form, 189–191, 197, 200; matching transaction cost economics (TCE) to, 177–179; model of internal hybrid, 197–201; U-form, 190. See also Market-hierarchy debate

Organizations: balancing between hierarchical legacies and market advantages, 173; belief system of, 57; cultural and social contributions of, 148; physiology of, 6; Western economies driven by the modern, 149. See also Corporate culture; High-performing organizations

Original equipment manufacturers (OEM), 33

Osterwalder, Alexander, 44

Oticon: corporate cultural change by, 15, 157–159, 160fig, 167, 170; described as internal hybrids, 197

P

Palmisano, Sam, 1, 81

Panasonic (Japan): China market share by, 37; as domestic Japanese leader (late 1970s and early 1980s), 18

Pay quadrant (strategic income statement): description of, 124; Haier’s reward strategy for good performance reflected in the, 124–125fig; ZEUS model on relationships with, 122fig

People-based leadership, 153, 156

People-goal-wage mechanism, 100–103

People quadrant (strategic income statement), description of the, 120

Performance: Haier’s principle on linking individual’s compensation to, 124–125fig; Haier’s use of ERP to process data on, 66–67, 70fig; SBU (strategic business unit) OEC form to measure, 65–66, 70fig; what happens if the team misses its target, 126; worker 3E cards linking quality to wages of Haier employees, 51. See also Haier employee compensation; Values, measures, and rewards

Performance evaluation: ABCD grading system used by market ZZJYTs for, 136; individual, 126–130; in market ZZJYTs, 134–136; ZEUS model (individual-goal-pay combination) used for, 119–120, 121fig, 122fig. See also Strategic income statement

Peters, Tom, 93, 154

Philips, 19

Pigneur, Yves, 44

Porras, Jerry, 154

Porter, Michael, 90

Powell, W. 184

Preset conversations, 83–84, 103–105

Product quality. See Haier product quality

Profit or Growth? (Chakravarthy and Lorange), 9
Proprietary knowledge, 222
Pu Xiankai, 114–115, 117, 124, 127, 130
Pull platform, 171–172
Push platform, 172, 221, 222

Q
Qingdao Commercial Bank, 62
Qingdao Refrigerator employees: naming technical innovations after innovators at, 52; 6S footprints self-assessment practice by, 52–53; worker 3E cards linking quality to wages of, 51
Qingdao Refrigerator Factory: brand building through focusing on quality and manufacturing excellence, 49–59; diversification (1991–1998) by, 59–62; manufacturing focus of, 86; mapping the cultural changes made by, 54–59; partnership with Liebherr Group (1980s) by, 13, 23, 47, 49, 54; renamed as Haier Corporation (1991), 62; reviewing the main attributes of Haier’s story beginning with, 212–217; Zhang Ruimin’s business model and vision for, 47–49, 53–54. See also Haier Corporation; Zhang Ruimin
Quality. See Haier product quality

R
Radar net metaphor, 230
Radical decentralization: ABB (Asea Brown Boveri), 15, 162–166, 170, 193–194; comparing Haier business model and ABBs, 193–197
Raynor, Michael E., 151–152
Rengsheng (China), 24
Research in Motion, 81
Resource fluidity, 156
Resource-type ZZJYT, 229
Rewards. See Values, measures, and rewards
Risk taking capacity, 153
Roman Catholic Church, 148
Rong Shi Da (China), 35
Rosenzweig, Phil, 151, 152
Rufer, Chris, 159
Salary. See Haier employee compensation
Samsung (South Korea), 37–38
Sanyo (Japan), 18
SBU (strategic business unit) OEC forms, 65–66, 70fig
Scalable efficiency, 221–222
Scalable learning: Hagel on differences between scalable efficiency and, 221–222; how Haier’s culture drives, 220–221, 222–223
Second-tier. See Haier ZZJYT second-tier
Self-awareness, 153
Service orientation. See Customer-centricity; Haier service orientation
Simon, Herbert A., 149
6S footprints self-assessment practice, 52–53
Slater, Philip, 154
Smith, Adam, 176
Snowflake (China), 27–28
Sony, 81
Speed of change, 155–156
Spider web metaphor, 230
Staff managers (ZZJYT), 141, 142
Star model: Galbraith’s corporate culture choices, 56–57, 58fig, 167; Haier’s attempt to share with others, 59–60; on Haier’s zero distance with the customer, 78fig; for Oticon, 160fig; replicated in Haier’s stunned fish, 60, 61fig, 62. See also Galbraith, Jay

Strategic choices: for achieving customer-centricity, 30; brain positioning, 27–28; business structure as, 7; characteristics of a great, 5–6; choosing how to grow as, 8–10; corporate culture created through, 45; distribution channels, 28–29; Galbraith’s five-factor star model on corporate culture, 56–57; Haier’s story and lessons on, 217–226; physiology as, 6, 7; purpose of the business as, 6–7. See also Haier’s strategic choices

Strategic income statement: accelerating salary scheme, 125fig; execution quadrant of the, 120, 122fig, 123–124; Haier ZZJYT second- and third-tier staff evaluated using the, 143; key issues listed in the, 101fig–102; for a module manager of the three-door ZZJYT, 128fig–129fig; pay quadrant of the, 122fig, 124–126; people quadrant of the, 120, 122fig; relationships listed in the, 104fig; rewards based on profits characterized by four intervals, 125fig–126; strategy quadrant of the, 120, 122fig. See also Haier employee compensation; Performance evaluation; ZEUS model

Strategic sensitivity, 155

Strategy quadrant (strategic income statement): description of the, 120; ZEUS model on relationships with, 122fig

Strong and people-based leadership, 153, 156

Stunned fish model, 60, 61fig, 62

Sull, Donald, 154

Sun Tzu, 4

Suning (China), 39

T

Talent: corporate culture choices on, 57, 58fig; Haier’s reliance on trust and merit to empower, 218–220; Haier’s transparency of career paths for, 220; heart of Haier values guiding, 95–96; high-performing organization’s ability for unleashing, 153; pull versus push platforms for, 171–172, 221, 222; strategic development of local, 30–32; understanding that Haier is selling, 218. See also Haier employees

Talent and skills factor: Galbraith’s star model on corporate culture choice on, 58fig; market chain era, 70fig; replicating the start model in stunned fish, 61fig; zero distance with the customer using ZZJYT, 78fig. See also Haier employees

Talent funnels: Haier’s establishment of ZZJYT, 99; to select three-door module ZZJYT team candidates, 115–116fig

Tan Lixia, 116

Taylor, Frederick, 149

TCL (China), 39

Themes. See Haier corporate culture themes

Theory X, 219

Theory Y, 219–220

Third-tier. See Haier ZZJYT third-tier

Three-door module ZZJYT: building the team of the, 115–118; calculating the ultimate profit of the, 119; “catfish” appointment in the, 114–115, 117; consequences for failing to meet target, 126; eighteen members and their positions in the, 118; individual performance evaluation, 126–130; networks and contracts of the, 118–119; number of three-door refrigerators sold: budgeted and actual (2011 and 2012), 111 fig; origins and creation of the, 112–115; performance evaluation of the, 119–126; strategic income statement for manager, 128 fig–129 fig; talent funnel to select most suitable candidates for, 115–116 fig; targeted profits (2012–2014) by the, 120; the workplace and atmosphere of, 110–112

3E card formula, 51

Top-down leadership for change, 225

Transaction cost economics (TCE): Coase’s argument that corporations exist to reduce, 221; examining organizational benefits over, 15; Granovetter’s criticism of hierarchy representation of, 183; how the Internet has reduced Haier’s, 208–209; interfirm networks and, 180–182; matching governance structures to, 177–179; problem of underused and undercommitted personnel in, 192–193; trust emergence during transactions of, 184; Williamson’s study of, 177. See also Economics

Transformational change: ABB experience with, 15, 162–166, 170, 193–197; examining Haier Group’s experience with, 2–3; examining the process of, 1–2; Morning Star’s experience with, 15, 159, 161–162, 170, 197; Nash Confectionery (India) experience with, 15, 166–168, 170, 197; Oticon’s experience with, 15, 157–159, 160 fig, 167, 170, 197. See also Change; Corporate culture change

Trust: emergence during transaction cost economics, 182–184; Haier’s reliance on employee merit and, 218–220

U

U-form organizations, 190

University of International Business and Economics (Beijing), 66

User-type ZZJYT, 229

V

Value chain: choice of distribution channels and, 28–29; Haier’s zero distance from customer approach to building, 14, 71–72, 74, 78 fig, 82, 90–93

Value creation: Haier’s contracting system among ZZJYT types and tiers for, 106, 107 fig; Haier’s customers, organization, and employees linked for, 84, 105–106; Haier’s philosophical belief on customer service as key to, 213; Haier’s revenue and net profit (2008–2012) through their, 217 t; Haier’s value engine and cultural engine for, 214 fig–216 fig; how embracing change results in, 211–226

Value engine: combining Haier’s cultural engine with, 215 fig; Haier business model’s inclusion
Values, measures, and rewards: accelerating salary scheme, 124–125; Galbraith’s star model on corporate culture choice of, 57, 58; Haier transparency of career paths due to, 220; heart of Haier values guiding employees, 95–96; market chain era, 70; replicating the start model in stunned fish, 61; zero distance with the customer using ZZJYT, 78. See also Performance evaluation

Visible hand concept, 162

Vision factor: business model function of translating firm, 43; Galbraith’s star model on corporate culture choice of, 56–57, 58; market chain era, 70; replicating the start model in stunned fish, 61; zero distance with the customer using ZZJYT, 78. See also Performance evaluation

Wages. See Haier employee compensation

Waterman, Robert, 154
Weber, Max, 149
Welch, Jack, 1, 165
Western economies: the modern organization as driving ascendency of the, 149; old-economy industries driving, 148

What Happens Now? (Hamel), 161

Whirlpool (U.S.): Chinese small living space problem for, 24; failure to enter the Chinese market by, 32–33; joint venture between Snowflake (China) and, 27–28; as leading U.S. brand (late 1970s and early 1980s), 18, 27; Maytag acquisition (2005) by, 35; net margin (1980 to 1985) of, 19; product-growth (1980s and 1990s) by, 20

Whitwam, David, 26–27
Why Good Companies Go Bad, and How Great Managers Remake Them (Sull), 154
Williamson, O. E., 177, 180, 182–183, 200
Wooldridge, Adrian, 149
Workforce. See Haier employees; How we work together factor

World Trade Organization (WTO), 24, 25, 38, 62

“World washer” vision, 27

Wu Jianke, 31

Wuxi Littleswan (China), 36–37

X

Xinfei (China), 24

Y

Yahoo!, 81

Yang Hong Gang, 132–133

Z

Zenger, T., 199

Zero distance with the customer:

Haier’s service goal of, 14; realization that service best achieved with, 82, 90–93; star model on, 78; Zhang’s comments on ZZJYT’s value for achieving, 71–72, 74. See also Haier ZZJYT’s (Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti)

ZEUS model: individual-goal-pay combination or, 119–120, 121; individual performance evaluation using, 126–127, 128fig–129fig; relationships of the, 122fig; strategic income statement quadrants used to understand the, 120–126. See also Strategic income statement

Zhang Ruimin: belief in entrepreneurial promise of Haier’s employees, 93; belief that managing people requires processes, 126; on the corporate culture being the key to enterprise growth, 79; focus on high-quality at Qingdao Refrigerator by, 47–49, 50; helping to turn around other enterprises, 59–60; hopes for the open platform system recently launched, 230–231; on impact of the Internet on Haier’s costs, 208–209; on influence of Confucianism on China, 77, 79; OEC practice instituted at Qingdao Refrigerator by, 50–51, 57, 58fig, 59; on problem of cutting inventory and sales revenue, 136; Qingdao Refrigerator business model envisioned by, 47–49, 53–54; Qingdao’s corporate culture change started by, 2–3; quoting Peter Drucker on purpose of organization, 96; radar net metaphor used for Haier by, 230; redefining how work is performed, 81–82; reinventing Haier’s business model, 62–70fig; six key themes guiding Haier’s corporate culture change under, 13–14, 82–108; 6S footprints self-assessment practice instituted by, 52–53; on speed being more important than quality, 223; trailblazing and dream pursued by, 147, 173, 223; on ZZJYTs (Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti) value to Haier, 71–72, 74. See also Haier Group; Qingdao Refrigerator Factory

ZZJYTs (Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti). See Haier ZZJYTs (Zi Zhu Jing Ying Ti)