Index of Subjects

anti-Judaism and anti-Semitism, 52, 54, 224, 318 apocalyptic
and modernity, 4, 45–51
and the purification of the sacred order, 64 Asiatic registration act of 1906, 152 audacity and doubt/questioning, 8, 17–18
and feminist ethics, 303–5
and Hinduism, 142–3
and Judaism, 205, 211–29
and Martin Luther King, Jr.’s ethic, 258
Christian obedience and, 246 Ghandi, Abraham, and Socrates, 159–60 on behalf of the stranger, 42, 63–7 Augustine, of Hippo and Aquinas, 127–8
and the awakening of doubt, 119–21 and Gilgamesh and Siddhartha, 199 and just war, 289
and Kant, 129–31
and the meaning of conversion, 117, 121–3 and the quest for a global ethic, 126–35 and Socrates, 126–7
and the stages of history, 124–5 and the story of Confessions, 116–26 and wrestling with God, 117–23
Auschwitz, 42–4
Auschwitz and Hiroshima
and the challenges of ethical relativism, 52–4, 65
and Gandhi’s ethic, 162–3, 290–1
and feminist ethics, 306, 315–16
and hospitality to the stranger, 341–3 and human rights, 341–3
and non-violence, 292–4, 332–3
and Pakistan, 294
and post/modernity, 49–50
as formative religious events, 45–51 challenge to both Eastern and Western religious ethics, 77–84 ethical challenge of, 4, 8, 41–2

Bhagavad Gita
and the Buddha, 166–7
and Gandhi, 149–63
“Behold, I am become death”, 44 the story of, 143–8
see also war: and the Bhagavad Gita Bhakti movement in Hinduism and Buddhism, 140–1, 174, 177, 216

Chutzpah, see audacity; ethics colonialism and human dignity, 4

and Western history, 45, 47–8
British colonialism, 149
Gandhi and ethics, 155–63 compassion, see justice; ethics, feminist; ethics, Buddhist; see also ethics, comparative: becoming the other doubling, 41–2
and the ecology of conscience, 333–9 and the myth of life through death, 56–63 Buddha and urbanization, 166–7
Gandhi and the Gita, 159–63
doubt
and audacity, 7–8
and the infinite, 18–19 dignity and human rights ethics, 337–9 ethics and the infinite, 107–9 ecology

and Buddhist ethics, 187
see also ethics, feminist ethics, Buddhist becoming the other, 185–7, 198–9, 229–30, 257–9
Bodhisattva ideal and the limits of compassion, 181–2
emptiness and interdependence, 173–5 Gandhi and Thich Nhat Hahn on loving one’s enemies and non-dualism, 196–9 holy community: no-self, emptiness and equality, 175–6
King, Gandhi, and Thich Nhat Hahn on loving one’s enemies, 257–9
love, compassion, and the Bodhisattva ideal, 178–80
non-dualism and mindfulness, 185–9 a story of two Zen monks, 180 taking sides versus becoming the other, Nhat Hahn’s argument with Heschel, 229–30
Thich Nhat Hahn and Masao Abe, ethics and non-dualism, 185–6
Thich Nhat Hahn’s encounter with Christianity, 183–4

Thich Nhat Hahn’s socially engaged Buddhist ethic, 182–4 Thich Nhat Hahn’s spirituality of mindfulness and interbeing, 187–8 ethics, Christian Abraham’s sacrifice interpreted by Jews, Christians, and Muslims, 273–4
Christian and Buddhist views on kenosis, 244–7
Creation and Fall/original sin as the narrative context of ethics, 243–4
Jewish and Christian views of sin, 243–5
King’s ethic and spirituality, 253–9
King and Gandhi on civil disobedience, 254–6
King and Gandhi on the Sermon on the Mount, 253–5
King and Heschel’s disagreement with Thich Nhat Hahn on omnipartiality, 257–9
King’s “Letter from Birmingham Jail”, 256–7
of hospitality, 245–6
Sermon on the Mount, 238–9, 245–6
Socrates, Moses, and Jesus as ethical models for King, 247
the way of the cross, 248

ethics, comparative Abe’s three typological models for religious ethics, 77–84, 287–8, 343–6 and alienation, 105–9
and audacity, 63–7
and comparative methods, 5–9, 67–72 and the cosmological morality of sacred order, 105
and crisis of mortality, morality, and meaning in urban life, 32–6 and the defiance of ethical relativism, 65 and doubt, 20, 65
and hospitality to the stranger, 20, 24–6, 63–72, 212–13, 226–9, 245–6, 327–43
and morality, 8–20
and the morality of unquestioning obedience, 41–2, 51–63
and mysticism, 16–18
and the prophetic, 16–18
and ritual, 10–11
and a saving remnant, 67 and the search for a common hope, 46 and secular-rational critique, 18 and social sciences, 21 and story, 20–39
and the veil of ignorance, 24–6 anger contrasted with ignorance, 230 apocalyptic and utopian, 63–5 Babel and post/modern narrative ethics, 327–30
becoming the other, 185
covenant, Jewish, Christian and Islamic compared, 273–4 doubling and killing in order to heal, 56–63 failure of karmic and providential ethics, 77–84 Gandhi and King as models for comparative religious ethics, 6–7 law, custom, and ethics, 105–9 morality and ethics, 9–20 openness to the infinite, 18
Ought vs. Is, 17
passing over and coming back, 7–8 philosophy versus narrative, 21 prudential versus moral reasoning, 29, 95, 111, 345 sacred versus holy, 9–20, 65 sin and Judaism, Christianity and Islam, 286–7 Socratic ethics and holiness, 101–9
Socratic ethics as the questioning of sacred customs, 101–9 10 percent can transform the world, 71 see also wrestling with the stranger ethics, feminist Abraham’s near sacrifice of Isaac and the women of Solomon, 310–11
and Gandhi, 310–11
and the myth of the hero, 306–7, 312–13
and non-violence, 323–3 audacity and interdependence, 331–4 audacity in Jewish and feminist ethics, 331–3 autonomy and justice versus relationality and care, 305–11 covenantal contrasted with sacramental, 322–4 ecofeminism, 311, 316, 318–19, 332–3 ecology of conscience as an ethical model, 333–43 greening of the self, 315 Indra’s net, 304, 313
interdependence, relationality, and care, 305–11, 312–16, 327–46 ctx and audacity, 303–5 Macy’s Buddhist ecofeminist ethic of deep ecology, 323, 332–3 origins of male bias, 301–2 reconciling Eastern and Western religious ethics, 330–2 reconciling justice and compassion/care, 330–2 Ruether’s Christian ecofeminism and deep ecology, 318–24 ethics, Hindu
and cosmological stories, 137–43 and Gandhi’s transformation of stories of war into stories of peace, 68, 155 and Hindu caste as sacred order, 142–3 and the legitimation and deligitimation of social order, 174–5 Gandhi’s ethic and the spirituality of brahmacharya, 155–63 Gandhi, non-violence and the Holocaust, 161–3 the sacred and the holy in the Hindu ethics, 142–3 transforming a story of war into a story of peace, 161–2 ethics, Islamic Abraham’s near sacrifice of Isaac interpreted by Jews, Christians, and Muslims, 273–4 creation, submission, and Sharia, 269–75
Malcolm X’s pilgrimage from the sacred to the holy, 277–85 Malcolm and King on violence and justice (just war), 288–94 ethics, Jewish Abraham’s near sacrifice of Isaac, 211–13
Abraham’s sacrifice interpreted by Jews, Christians, and Muslims, 273–4 and King’s ethic and spirituality, 253–7 and King’s spirituality and the myth of history, 253–4 audacity and hospitality, 212–13 covenant as two-way street, 205, 208–11 ethics and holiness, 208–11 ethics and morality (the holy and the sacred) in the Bible, 219 Heschel’s argument with Thich Nhat Hahn’s omnipartiality/becoming the other, 229–30 Heschel on holiness and audacity, 223–4, 226–9 ethics, Jewish (Continued)
Jewish and Christian views of sin, 244–5
Job and audacity, 218–23
King and Heschel’s disagreement with Thich Nhat Hahn on omnipartiality, 257–9 Prophets, Pharisees, and Hasidism on ethics, holiness, and audacity, 213–18 wrestling with God and the stranger, 211–13

Hiroshima, 44–5
see also Auschwitz and Hiroshima

Holocaust
and ethics, 52–6
see also Auschwitz; Auschwitz and Hiroshima; Shoah holy and interdependence, 228–9 and the sacred in Islamic ethics, 287–94 and the stranger, 19–20 Buddhist holy community, no-self, and equality, 174–5 demonic inversion of, 43–7

Islam, Malcolm-X, and the sacred, 277
Jewish covenant and holy community, 208–9 Jewish ethics and holiness, 208–11 sacred and the Buddha, 173 sacred and the Gita, 155 sacred and holy in Christianity, 246–7 sacred and non-violence, 293–4 sacred, the secular and the holy, 20 segregation as a sacred morality and King’s ethical protest, 247–8, 257 “X” as an expression of the holy, 280–1 hospitality to the stranger, 20, 25–6, 63–4, 212–13, 226–9, 245–6, 327–46
see also wrestling with the stranger

human dignity
and holiness, 18
openness to the infinite, 18
rights and liberation, 4, 8, 42, 63–72 interdependence, 7

and Babel, 327–30
and Buddhist ethics, 171–2, 175–6, 179–80, 185–202
and feminism, 300–24
and the way of all the earth, 327–46

justice
Abe’s Buddhist challenge to an ethic of justice, 77–84 and holiness in Judaism, Christianity and Buddhism, 257–9 and mercy in Islam, 263–75 autonomy and justice versus relationality and care in feminist ethics, 305–11 hospitality to the stranger as the test of, 24–6 in Christianity, 238–41, 243–7, 253–9
in Judaism, 205–18
Job and, 218–23
Socrates and, 100–9
tension between justice and compassion, 327–43 see also war: just war

Kent State, 306
killing in order to heal (and spiritualities, and narratives, of life through death), 41–2 Abraham’s sacrifice, 211–12, 273–4
and feminist ethics, 300, 303–5, 310–11
and Gandhi’s transformative interpretation of the Gita, 66–7 and Islamic submission, 287–8 and Japanese Buddhism, 62–3, and the logic of mass death, 56–63 and narratives of war, 63–4 and original sin and the need for kenosis, 244–5 and Trinity, 59–62
doubling and the ecology of conscience, 333–43 equity and the spiritual death of the self, 77–84
Gandhi and the Gita, 159–63
Hindu, Buddhist, Jewish, and Christian views on spirituality and ethics, 257–9 self-annihilation and audacity in Judaism, 230–1 Thich Nhat Hahn and non-dualism, 196–9

MAD (mutually assured destruction), 46 Babel and MADness, 327–30
divine madness transforms stories of war, 64 nuclear MADness, 63–4, 290–1 mass death, 41–2
myth
and ritual, 10–11
and urbanization, 32–6
four types of, 31–6
of harmony, 34
of history, 25, 35–6
of liberation, 25–6, 35
of nature, 30–2
see also story

narrative, see story Nation of Islam, 275
nationalism, 4–5, 47
non-violence, see war: just war
and Gandhi, 151–63
and Martin Luther King, Jr., 249–59
and Thich Nhat Hahn, 185–99

no-self as opposed to Brahman, 173–80
see also ethics, Buddhist: emptiness and interdependence

obedience
and audacity in Judaism, 212–23
and feminist ethics, 303–5
and Hinduism, 142–3
unquestioning obedience, 41–2 unquestioning obedience and Christianity, 243–7 passing over, see ethics, comparative peace, 5–6

post/modern, 8, 42–3
and Gandhi’s ethic, 155–63
and the children of Gandhi, 50–1 and the story of Babel, 327–30 Auschwitz and Hiroshima as dividing line between modern and, 48, 83–4 quest

as a narrative theme, 7–8
Gilgamesh, 85–99
Siddhartha, the Buddha, 167–73

racism, 4, 247–59, 275–94 religion
and language, 36–9
definition of, 8, 9–11
mysticism and language of negation, 38–9
Roe vs. Wade, 306
Rowlatt Act of 1919, 154
Sabasmi Ashram, 153
sacred, see holy secular, 12–13, 18
Sermon on the Mount
and Gandhi, 157
and German Christians, 162 and Jesus, 235–8
and Tolstoy, 66–7
Gandhi and King, 234–5, 255

sexism, 5, 6, 25, 108, 328, 337 Shoah
as a name for Holocaust, 46 Socrates, 100–35
and Aristotelian virtue, 112 and Augustine in the quest for a global ethic, 126–35 and Cicero’s Hortensius, 119 and medieval Christendom, 115–16 and Platonic virtue, 111–12 and Stoic virtue, 113
and the classical era, 109–16 and the League of Nations, 101, 131–5 and the quest for Cosmopolis, 113–14 and the story of the trial, 101–5 and the way of doubt, 105–9

spirituality
Abraham Joshua Heschel and the way of audacity, 226–9 ecofeminist spirituality of Joanna Macy, 312–16 ecofeminist spirituality of Rosemary Ruether, 319–24 Gandhi and the way of Brahmacharya, 155–9
Malcolm X and the Way of Pilgrimage, 281–5
Martin Luther King, Jr. and the way of the cross, 253–7 Socrates and the way of doubt, 105–9 stories, spiritual insight, and spiritual growth, 20–9 Thich Nhat Hahn and the way of mindfulness, 185–9 way of all the earth, the, 343–6 see also wrestling with the stranger; hospitality to the stranger; way of all the earth story, the
and ethics, 5–7
apocalyptic and utopian narratives contrasted, 64
as primary metaphor for religious experience in Judaism, 35–6 cosmic stories in Genesis, Gospel of John, and I Colossians, 242–4
divine madness transforms stories of war, 64 feminist ethics and narrative, 309–11, 315–16, 320–4, 331–2, 345–6
Hindu cosmic story, 138–43
King and the myth of history, 253–5 narrative diversity and ecology, 67–72 of creation: Hindu, 138–9; Buddhist, 173–7; Jewish, 206–8;
Christian, 206–8; Islamic, 269–72
of David and Nathan, 20–6 of killing in order to heal, 56–63 of two Zen monks, 180 parable of the doe, the hunter and the great stag, 26–7
parable of the veil of ignorance, 24–5 political power of, 148–9 providential and karmic narratives and the problem of justice, 80–4 roles, doubling and the ecology of conscience, 333–9
stories of creation, Buddhist response to Hindu view, 173–7, 179–80
stories of creation, feminist critiques, 312–16, 319–24
story of creation and fall in Christianity contrasted with Judaism, 242–7 story of creation as story of Babel, 327–30 story of creation in Hinduism, 138–9 story of creation in Islam contrasted with Judaism and Christianity, 269–75 story of creation in Judaism, 206–7 story of Jesus ties life story to history, 235–6 story of the trial of Socrates, 101–5 transforming stories of war into stories of peace, 67, 155–6, 159–63
war narratives invert ethical norms, 63–5, 160–1, 292–4
wrestling with the stranger, see wrestling with the stranger
stranger
and holiness, 18–19

ethic of hospitality to, 18–19, 25–6, 63–72, 212–13, 226–9, 245–6, 327–30

techno-bureaucracy
and conscience, 55
and the demonic, 42–3
and mass death, 42–72
and sacred order, 41–2
and tribalism, 41–2
Auschwitz and Hiroshima, 51–63
technological civilization
and mass death, 4–5, 7, 41–72
globalization of the demonic, 48
Theosophists, 150–1, 157
Tolstoy Farm, 153

urbanization
Buddha and Gilgamesh, 166–7 and doubling, 91–3
and the emergence of world religions, 32–6

utopian
contrasted with apocalyptic, 64 promise of Babel, 329

war
and the Bhagavad Gita, 143–8 feminist ethics and violence, 308–11
Gandhi transforms stories of war into stories of peace, 67, 292–4
inverts ethical norms, 63–5 just war, 161–3, 267–8, 289–94
Malcolm X on violence, 281–94 sacred duty, 11–13

way of all the earth, the,
and the ethics of audacity, 63–72
as a post/modern form of spirituality, 327–46

wrestling with the stranger
and the Buddha, 165–73
and Gilgamesh, 85–91
and the Gita, 143–8
and Islamic jihad, 287–94
and Malcolm X, 281
and mass death, 56–63
and a new covenant of human dignity and human rights, 337–9
in Judaism, 58–9, 205, 211–14
wrestling as a narrative theme, 6–7, 329 see also hospitality to the stranger