BRIEF CONTENTS

About the adapting authors  viii

1. Examining literacy in the twenty-first century  1
2. Talking to learn in and out of the classroom  31
3. Getting to know students: developing culturally relevant practices for reading and writing  68
4. Theories of literacy development  95
5. Literacy programs and approaches  124
6. Entering into the literacy landscape: emergent readers and writers  162
7. Beginning readers and writers  203
8. Intermediate and accomplished readers and writers  250
9. Effective assessment practices for reading and writing  293
10. Literature in the classroom  329
11. ICTs and reading to learn in the content areas  365
12. Working with struggling readers and writers  411

Index  443
CONTENTS

About the adapting authors viii

CHAPTER 1

Examining literacy in the twenty-first century 1

1.1 Mind the gap: literacy practices in school and outside of school 5

1.2 Perspectives on what it means to be literate 7

1.3 Models of schooling that affect literacy development 8

| Learning as skill building: industrial model | 9 |
| Investigating a question: inquiry model | 12 |
| Problematising the status quo: critical model | 14 |

1.4 Six guiding principles for teaching reading and writing in the twenty-first century 16

| Principle 1: literacy practices are socially and culturally constructed | 16 |
| Principle 2: literacy practices are purposeful | 17 |
| Principle 3: literacy practices contain ideologies and values | 18 |
| Principle 4: literacy practices are learned through inquiry | 19 |
| Principle 5: literacy practices invite readers and writers to use their background knowledge and cultural understandings to make sense of texts | 20 |
| Principle 6: literacy practices expand to include everyday texts and multimodal texts | 22 |

1.5 The Australian Curriculum 24

1.6 Creating a vision for effective literacy instruction 25

CHAPTER 2

Talking to learn in and out of the classroom 31

2.1 Spoken language development 33

| Learning to talk | 33 |
| Pointing, imitating and pretending: the origins of literacy | 34 |
| Meaning, language and learning | 35 |
| From home to school | 36 |
| From everyday knowledge to educational knowledge | 36 |
| Learning language, learning through language, learning about language | 37 |
| Conditions for language learning | 37 |

2.2 Spoken language use and language variation 38

| Language variation in response to cultural and social contexts | 40 |
| Variations in spoken language | 40 |
| English language variation and language standard | 41 |
| Language variation as a resource for learning | 47 |

2.3 Language and literacy in the curriculum: implications for teaching literacy 50

2.4 Learning language 52

| Learning through language | 55 |

2.5 Learning about language 56

| A language for talking about language: metalanguage | 57 |
| Knowledge about sounds and graphic symbols | 58 |
| Knowledge about grammar, words and punctuation | 61 |
| Meaning | 62 |

CHAPTER 3

Getting to know students: developing culturally relevant practices for reading and writing 68

3.1 Examining cultural diversity in classroom settings 70

| Recognising differences in literacy learning within the classroom | 71 |
| Learning about home and community practices | 72 |

3.2 Teaching from a culturally relevant perspective 75

3.3 Supporting linguistically diverse learners in reading and writing 76

| Connecting students’ background knowledge and personal experiences to literacy events | 77 |
| Creating opportunities for students to meaningfully and authentically apply oral language skills | 78 |
| Encouraging students’ primary language and/or code switching during literacy events | 79 |
| Contextualising instruction of language through authentic literature | 79 |
| Documenting students’ home and community literacy practices | 80 |
| Establishing culturally relevant interaction patterns in literacy events | 82 |
3.4 Using early assessment to know your students 85
3.5 Kid-watching 86
3.6 Attitudes and interest in reading and writing 89
   Attitude questionnaires and surveys 89
   Interviews 90

CHAPTER 4
Theories of literacy development 95
4.1 What does theory have to do with curriculum building? 98
   Uncovering your beliefs about teaching and instruction 99
4.2 Four classroom portraits and four theories of literacy development 99
   Ms Robyn Teal's classroom: learning to read means focusing on skills 100
   Bottom-up theory of literacy development 102
   Ms Cheryl Battle's classroom: learning to read means understanding the meaning of words 104
   Mr Thomas Ruby's classroom: learning to read means learning how to respond to a text 109
   Ms Pauline Fuller's classroom: learning to read means critically examining the text 114
4.3 Reading models for the twenty-first century classroom 119

CHAPTER 5
Literacy programs and approaches 124
5.1 Approaches to literacy education 126
   Basic skills: grammar conventions, decoding and drills 127
   Whole language: authentic texts and meaning making 129
   Focus on social practice: situated literacies 130
   Text-based literacy and multiliteracy approaches 130
   The current situation in Australia 131
5.2 Classroom approaches to literacy programs 133
   Developing or adapting a program 133
   Theme and concept-based units 134
   Literature-based units 135
5.3 Resourcing your classroom literacy program 137
5.4 Scaffolding for literacy 139
   The gradual release of responsibility model 140
   The teaching learning cycle 140
   Reading to learn 141
5.5 Reading and writing procedures within a scaffolding cycle 141
   Establishing a shared context 141
   Scaffolding for reading and viewing 142
   Modelling language and strategies for reading 143
   Scaffolding for composition 147
5.6 Structure of literacy instruction 152
   Commercial literacy programs 153
5.7 Creating a literacy-rich environment 154
   Spaces and places in the classroom to support literacy development 154

CHAPTER 6
Entering into the literacy landscape: emergent readers and writers 162
6.1 Historical beginnings of emergent literacy 164
   Reading readiness 165
   Emergent literacy 167
6.2 Oral language learning: what it means for emergent reading and writing practices 170
   Conditions for developing oral language skills 171
   Conditions to support young English language learners (ELLs) in preschool settings 172
   Dimensions of emergent literacy 173
   Concepts of texts 175
   Concepts of words 177
   Concepts of letters and sounds 178
   Assessing the dimensions of emergent literacy 180
6.3 Emergent writing 181
   Inventing and refining written language forms 182
   Emergent spelling 183
   Emergent writing and meaning making 187
6.4 Literacy and technology in early literacy settings 188
   Concepts of screen 188
   Reading on devices 188
6.5 Literacy events and practices: promoting emergent reading and writing 190
   Make use of environmental print 190
   Writing centres 191
   Reading aloud 192
   Reading aloud as a cultural practice 193
   Sociodramatic play settings 194
CHAPTER 7
Beginning readers and writers 203
7.1 Guiding principles to promote beginning reading and writing 205
7.2 Exploring beginning reading through the four-resource model 210
Code breaking to exemplify how words work 211
Becoming a text participant 221
Understanding how texts are used 225
Text analyst — thinking critically about texts 226
7.3 Literacy blocks for beginning readers 227
Creating a routine for primary level literacy blocks 228
Teacher-led inquiries 229
Reading and responding 230
7.4 Connections to national achievement standards 243

CHAPTER 8
Intermediate and accomplished readers and writers 250
8.1 Needs and characteristics of students in middle to upper primary 252
8.2 Guiding principles for intermediate and accomplished readers and writers 253
8.3 What do we teach intermediate and accomplished readers and writers? 256
8.4 Key understandings about multimodal and digital texts 259
8.5 How do we teach intermediate and accomplished readers and writers? 261
Selecting texts for intermediate and accomplished readers and writers 262
Reading and writing conferences 263
8.6 The four-resource model for intermediate and accomplished readers and writers 264
Code breaking for intermediate and accomplished readers 265
Text participant practices with intermediate and accomplished readers 272
Text use with intermediate and accomplished readers and writers 282

CHAPTER 9
Effective assessment practices for reading and writing 293
9.1 Formative and summative assessments 295
9.2 Tests and assessments in schools 296
National Assessment Program — Literacy and Numeracy (NAPLAN) 296
Purposes for assessments 299
Literacy assessments reveal ideologies about learning and literacy 301
9.3 The cycle of reflection–assessment–instruction 302
9.4 Traditional and authentic assessment practices 304
Who is interested in assessment? High stakes for parents, teachers and schools 304
Authentic assessment practices 305
Types of authentic assessment practices 306
9.5 Gathering information to use in assessing readers’ and writers’ growth in literacy development 316
Portfolio systems 317
9.6 Assessment practices align with code breaking, text meaning, text use and critical practices 318
Code-breaking assessment 319
Text participant assessments 322
Text use assessments 325
Critical practices assessments 325

CHAPTER 10
Literature in the classroom 329
10.1 What is literature? 331
The picturebook 332
Graphic novels and manga 334
E-literature 336
Film and television 337
10.2 Literature and context 338
Historical, cultural and social contexts 338
10.3 Responding to literature 340
Reader-response theory 341
Take a stance: a reader’s purpose and attitude 342
10.4 Goals for literature discussions 345
Response and interpretive authority 346
Teacher-led discussions 347
Teacher-led, student-centred discussions 347
Student-led discussions 348
10.5 Examining literature for its features and language 350
Key features of literary texts 351
The language of literary texts 352
10.6 Creating literary texts 355
Author craft 356
Poetry 357
Innovation on a text 357
Digital storytelling 358

CHAPTER 11
ICTs and reading to learn in the content areas 365
11.1 Reading to learn: the literacy demands in content areas 367
Literacy demands in humanities and social sciences 371
Literacy demands in science 372
Literacy demands in mathematics 373
11.2 Technology and literacy 374
11.3 Integrating ICTs and literacy in the content areas 377
ICT capability across the content areas 380
11.4 Using inquiry-based learning 382
Key principles of inquiry-based learning 383
The teacher’s role in inquiry-based learning 384
Selecting an inquiry topic 385
Planning for inquiry in the classroom 386
11.5 Using texts to develop knowledge and literacy in the content areas 389
Reading and writing to learn in the content areas 389
Using resources to develop knowledge and understanding in the content areas 390
11.6 Teaching strategies for reading and writing in the content areas 396
Read informative texts aloud 397
Provide time to read in content areas 398
Scaffolding creating and communicating with ICTs 398
11.7 Developing literate practices in the content areas: the four-resource model 399
Code-breaking practices 399
Text participant practices 402

CHAPTER 12
Working with struggling readers and writers 411
12.1 Factors that contribute to struggling reading and writing 413
Cognitive processing 414
Motivation and engagement 414
Teachers’ and parents’ beliefs and attitudes 419
12.2 Identifying struggling readers and writers during literacy events 420
12.3 Instructional practices for struggling readers and writers 421
Echo reading 422
Shared reading 423
Neurological impress method (NIM) 423
Interest and background 423
Read-alouds to extend comprehension and pave the way forward for readers’ choices 424
Voluntary free reading time 425
Buddy reading 426
Reading all day across all curriculum areas 427
Scaffolding 428
Comprehension monitoring strategies 429
12.4 Supporting struggling readers through parent education 431
Creating partnerships with parents and carers 433
12.5 Teaching all children to lead literate lives in the twenty-first century 435

Index 443