Contents

Note on the Author

Introduction

Franco: Biography and Political Practice
Francoism: A Form of Dictatorship
Victors and Vanquished: The Disasters of the Civil War and Repression
Exile and the Start of the Postwar Period in Spain
Bibliography
Notes

1. The Temptation of Fascism and the Will to Survive (1939–51)

   A Failed Attempt to Make Spain Fascist
   The Temptation to Intervene and Internal Conflict (1940–2)
   Stumbling Progress towards Neutrality (1942–5)
   Cosmetic Change: Regime Politics between 1945 and 1951
   Opposition from Survivors: The Spanish Left from 1939 to 1951
   The Monarchist Alternative
   Franco in Isolation
   The “Dark Night”: Autarchy and Rationing in the 1940s
   Culture: Penance and Survival
   Bibliography
   Notes

2. The Years of Consensus: The High Point of the Regime (1951–65)

   The End of International Isolation: The Concordat and Pacts with the United States
Spain and Europe: Colonization of Morocco Ends 114
The Regime and the Opposition up to 1956 119
A New Political Opposition 128
For or against Falange: Political Life under the Regime between 1956 and 1965 136
The Easing of Autarchy and the Change in Economic Policy 147
From Political Opposition to Social Opposition 159
Culture in the Francoist Middle Period: The End of the Penitential Years 166
Daily Life and Leisure Activities 177
Bibliography 182
Notes 186

3  Economic Development, Apertura, and the Late Franco Years (1966–75) 187

Economic Development in the 1960s and 1970s 189
The Modernization of Spanish Society 197
The Change in Spanish Catholicism 202
Apertura (1965–9) 211
The Succession. Matesa and Internal Splits in the Regime 217
Worker Protest. Terrorism 221
Late Francoism: Carrero Blanco as President 228
Late Francoism: Arias Navarro’s Government 233
Opposition Activity: The Road to Unity 237
Spain and the Western World 247
Late Decolonization: Guinea and the Sahara 252
A Politically Committed Culture? 256
Spain at the Time of Franco’s Death 262
Bibliography 267

4  The Transition to Democracy (1975–82) 270

The Monarchy: King Juan Carlos I 273
The Death-throes of the Past 275
Adolfo Suárez: The Road from Liberalization to Democracy 281
Facing Difficulties: Terrorism and the Military Coup 285
Parties and Elections 289
The Long Road towards a Constitution 293
An Unresolved Issue: Nationalism and Terrorism 299
The Triumph and Fall of Adolfo Suárez 303
The Army and the Transition: February 23 306
Calvo Sotelo’s Government and the Crisis in Center Politics 311
Foreign Policy 314

Felipe González and the Two Souls of Spanish Socialism 330
The Socialists’ First Term in Office. Reform of the Armed Services, an Economic Update and Foreign Policy 336
A Means of Consolidating Democracy. The GAL 344
Elections and Public Opinion in the Second Half of the 1980s 349
Policy on the Autonomous Communities: A New Vertebrate Structure for the Spanish State 359
The Loss of an Absolute Majority 366
A Tense Term of Office (1993–6) 373
The 1996 General Election. Drawing up the Balance on the Socialists’ Time in Government 380
Culture in the Post-Franco Period 385
From a Time of Rediscovery to a State Culture 390
Fields of Creativity 400
Bibliography 407

6 The Turn of the Right (1996–2004)

The Popular Party in Power: José María Aznar 410
Success in Economic and Social Policies 412
The Dark Side of the Right 414
A Pluralistic Spain: Nationalities and Terrorism 418
Government and Opposition. The Elections in March 2000 423
The Style of Government with an Absolute Majority 429
The Limits of PSOE Renewal 431
Dramatic Basque Elections 433
The Policy of Making Pacts and Breaking with Consensus 436
The PP: Idyllic Peace and Neo-conservatism 439
From More to Less: Government Policy in the Second Four-year Term 443
The Final Straight 448
Bibliography 454
Notes 455

Index 456