CONTENTS

1. Introduction: The Importance of Codes of Conduct for Academia 1
   John M. Braxton, Nathaniel J. Bray
   This chapter emphasizes the importance of codes of conduct to guide the professional role performance of presidents, academic deans, admissions officers, fund-raising professionals, and faculty who teach undergraduate and graduate students.

2. Toward a Code of Conduct for the Presidency 5
   J. Christopher Fleming
   College and university presidents serve clients who are internal and external to their institution. This chapter describes eight tenets toward a code of conduct for college and university presidents that safeguards the welfare of the clients served.

3. Follow the Code: Rules or Guidelines for Academic Deans’ Behavior? 19
   Nathaniel J. Bray
   This chapter delineates six tenets for a code of conduct to guide the behavior of academic deans.

4. A Normative Code of Conduct for Admissions Officers 29
   Robert L. Hodum
   The work of admissions officers serves clients who include prospective students and their families and the college or university they represent. This chapter presents tenets toward a code of conduct for admissions work that safeguards the welfare of such clients.

5. College and University Codes of Conduct for Fund-Raising Professionals 41
    Timothy C. Caboni
   Prospective donors and the institutions represented constitute the clients served by college and university fund-raising professionals. This chapter describes nine tenets for a code of conduct for fund-raising professionals that protects the welfare of these clients.

6. Toward a Code of Conduct for Graduate Education 49
    Eve Proper
   This chapter offers a set of six tenets toward a code of conduct to guide the teaching and mentoring of graduate students.
7. The Existence of Codes of Conduct for Undergraduate Teaching in Teaching-Oriented Four-Year Colleges and Universities

Dawn Lyken-Segosebe, Yunkyung Min, John M. Braxton

This chapter reports the findings of a study conducted to determine the existence of codes of conduct for undergraduate college teaching in public and private colleges and universities that espouse a teaching-oriented mission.

8. Organizational Constraints and Possibilities Regarding Codes of Conduct

Nathaniel J. Bray, Danielle K. Molina, Bart A. Swecker

This chapter addresses such topics as organizational principles underlying the development and functioning of codes, organizational constraints to the promulgation of codes, and organizational possibilities for the development of codes of conduct in higher education.

9. Reflections on Codes of Conduct: Asymmetries, Vulnerabilities, and Institutional Controls

Nathaniel J. Bray, John M. Braxton

This chapter discusses asymmetries that exist in both positional and professional authority, the relations between main campus stakeholders, and the vulnerabilities that are presented by such power differentials. The chapter concludes with a discussion of the deterrence, detection, and sanctioning of violations of tenets of codes of conduct.

INDEX