Contents

Foreword by Sheena Blair vii
Foreword by Paul Hoggett ix
Acknowledgements xi

1 Introduction 1

Section 1 Psychoanalytic Theory Interwoven with Occupational Therapy 13

2 The ‘Therapeutic Use of Self’ in Occupational Therapy 15
3 An Occupational Therapy Perspective on Freud, Klein and Bion 32
4 The Function of ‘Doing’ in the Intermediate Space: Donald Winnicott and Occupational Therapy 57
5 Beyond Bowlby: Exploring the Dynamics of Attachment 68
6 Re-awakening Psychoanalytic Thinking in Occupational Therapy: From Gail Fidler to Here 87

Section 2 Psychoanalytic Occupational Therapy: A Relational Practice Model and Illuminating Theory in Clinical Practice 103

7 MOVI: A Relational Model in Occupational Therapy 105
8 Let the Children Speak 128
9 Working with Difference 145

Section 3 Further Psychoanalytic Thinking: Research and Training 163

10 Psychoanalytic Thinking in Research 165
11 Understanding the Use of Emotional Content in Therapy Using Occupational Therapists’ Narratives 186
12 Training Experiences to Develop Psychoanalytic Thinking 202
13 The Relational Space of Supervision 222

Index 239