Index

Action hypothesis, 140
American Youth Commission, 121

Baizerman, M., 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 13, 25, 59, 71, 77, 97, 121, 133, 146
Baumgardner, B., 5, 27, 57
Blended youth advisory structure model: description of, 87–88; youth voice in a, 88

CANVAS study: on CYLC (youth leadership council) support of program structure, 90–94; participatory action research methodology used in, 84
Ceteris paribus (“all things being equal”), 139
Change leaders: dealing with political aspects of change, 62–63; examining the process of using research & evaluation for change by, 137–140; organizational change as beginning with, 128–129; organizational support of, 53–54, 129; roles taken by, 141. See also Leadership; Youth agency change; Youth workers
Coleman, C. B., 10
Community: encourage youth workers to learn from the local, 127; training youth workers to interact with and organize, 34–36, 43–45
Community Education program, 107
Community organizing: organizing and social action phase of learning, 43–45; training youth workers in skills for, 34–36
Confidence continuum, 126
Connoisseur role, 141
Createch mobile computer labs, 104, 111
Curator role, 141
CYLC (youth leadership council), 90–94

David P. Weikart Center, 81
Dewey, J., 130
Discursive spaces, 142

East Side Learning Collaborative (ESLC), 36
Empathic gaze, 142
Explicator role, 141

Facilitators: to address concerns about youth agency change, 129–130; building partnership between upper-level staff and, 130; reflective practitioner training to become, 33–34
Faculty (Youth Studies Program): P&R transformation research role of, 70–71; public agency research & evaluation role of, 70; technical and practical assistance provided to students by, 71. See also Students (Youth Studies Program)
Foundations: examining how Youthprise supports agency change, 115–119; lessons learned about agency change support by, 119–120, 134–136

Germanic, O., 5, 27, 57
Graff, R., 5, 27, 57
Grantees. See Foundations
Group reflection constructs, 141–144

Hahm, M., 12

Imaginary landscapes, 142
Incompletability/incomplete construct, 142
Instigator role, 141
Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS), 103–104

Johnson, S., 2, 6, 59, 77
Knowledge development: confidence continuum on forms of practice knowing and, 126; examining the process of practice in use and, 137–140; extracting potentially useful research & evaluation for, 136–137; ideal-type degree of evidence continuum of, 124; types of useful, 125–126. See also Lessons learned Korum, K., 2, 3, 5, 7, 8, 13, 26, 27, 57, 101, 114, 121, 146
Leadership: building partnership between facilitators and, 130; how partnerships help build relationships between staff and, 134. See also Change leaders Lessons learned: on agency change through research & evaluation, 68–71, 130–131; from examining Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R) partnerships, 110–112, 133–134; moving toward emerging practices from, 121–125; on youth agency change research, 68–71, 130–131; on youth agency structures for listening to youth, 95–97, 131–133; from youth worker development experience, 51–55, 127–130; about Youthprise’s grant making and change work, 119–120, 134–136. See also Knowledge development; Practice in use
Lessons learned examples: ask to be taught, 127; including part-time workers, 126; learn local mundane ways, 127; recruit and organize based on vocational call, 126–127
Library After Dark program, 104, 105, 111
Listening to youth: creating youth advisory structure for, 79–98; lessons learned on, 95–97, 131–133
Mattessich, P. W., 105
Minnesota youth advisory groups (YAGs): aims and goals of the, 85; assessment of structures used by the, 86; lessons learned for creating and sustaining, 95–97; ongoing study on youth advisory structure of, 83–84, 89–95; recruitment and membership of these, 85–86
Minnesota youth advisory groups (YAGs) study: description of ongoing, 83–84; process and practice of the, 89–90
Mission: typical organization assessment questions on, 16; youth organization scenario on defining, 15–18
Models of organization, 142
Monsey, B. R., 105
Mueller, M., 2, 5, 6, 27, 57, 79, 100
Multicultural construct, 142
Murray-Close, M., 105
Mystery construct, 142
Negotiation: construct of, 142–143; partnerships as spaces of, 110–111, 133
“Opportunity” youth, 116
Organization set, 143
Organizational change. See Youth agency change Organizations. See Youth agencies
Part-time youth workers, 126
Partnerships: culture developed during course of, 110, 133; examining Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R), 101–110; lessons learned from, 110–122, 133–134; life cycle of, 134; as spaces of negotiation, 110–111, 133
Peterson, K. K., 5, 27, 57
Polylingual construct, 143
Pope, M., 3, 7, 115, 120
Portraiture construct, 143
Practice in use: action hypothesis for bridging research and, 140; confidence continuum on forms of knowing and, 126; examining the process of developing, 137–140; extracting potentially useful research & evaluation for, 136–137; ideal-type degree of evidence continuum for, 124; types of useful knowledge development for, 125–126. See also Lessons learned; Reflective practitioners Practitioner authority test, 128
Professional development. See Youth worker development

Race/ethnic differences, 128
Rana, S., 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 26, 27, 57, 121, 146
Randall, S., 5, 27, 57
Read Brave initiative, 111

Reflective practitioners: action hypothesis used by, 140; change agent roles taken by, 141; constructs and concepts useful for the, 141–144; creating a space for learning and change, 31–33; training to facilitate becoming a, 33–34. See also Practice in use
Rence, E., 2, 6, 59, 71–73, 77

Research & evaluation: action hypothesis for bridging practice in use and, 140; conclusions and recommendations on, 73–74; examining the process of using for change, 137–140; first-person perspective by Emily Rence on, 71–73; lessons learned on agency change, 68–71, 130–131; limited funds of public agencies for, 60–61; process and phases of, 61–68; sample of student studies on, 74–77; suggestions for extracting potentially useful, 136–137; Youth Studies program required course on, 60

Saint Paul (Minnesota), 9
Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R): CYLC (youth leadership council) implemented at, 90–94; development of new partnership models by, 102–113; examining the youth programs of the, 1, 2, 5–6, 7–8; improving youth outcomes commitment by, 10; need and efforts to transform services of, 9–10, 11–12; origins and description of, 9, 11; “secret shopper” visits and field studies on, 101–102; study on youth advisory structure used by, 89–95; Youth Studies’ research and evaluation on transforming, 60–77, 130–131;

Youthprise’s evaluation of Youth in Transition program of, 115–116, 117–119
Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R) partnerships: examining process of developing new, 102; factors contributing to limited or sporadic success of, 107–110; lessons learned from examining, 110–112, 133–134; overview of existing successful, 103–106; of Saint Paul Police Department (SPPD) for youth violence reduction, 108–109, 110, 111; success factors of existing, 107; Youth Studies Program’s longtime relationship with P&R, 105–106
Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R) staff training: accomplishments and outcomes of, 45–51; examining Youth Studies’ role in, 10, 27–28; lessons learned from experience of, 51–55, 127–130; phases of the professional development groups during the, 38–45; professional development contexts of, 28–30; training philosophy and ethos of the, 30–37
Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R) training philosophy: being a reflective practitioner, 33–34; building and sustaining meaningful relationships with youth, 30–31; cocreating a space for learning and change, 31–33; community organizing, 34–36; training philosophy and ethos of P&R’s, 30–37
Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R) transformation: Youth Studies’ collaboration on P&R staff training for, 10, 27–56; Youth Studies’ research & evaluation studies on, 60–77
Saint Paul Parks and Recreation youth advisory structure: process of studies conducted on the, 91–94; short case study of, 89–91; study on evaluation done with young people, 94–95
Saint Paul Police Department (SPPD), 108–109, 110
Saint Paul Public Library (SPPL): improving youth outcomes commitment by, 10; Library After Dark program supported by, 104, 105, 111; partnership between P&R and, 103, 104, 105

Saint Paul Public School District (SPPS), 107, 111

Science Museum of Minnesota, 104

Self-reflection constructs, 141–144

Simmons, T., 5, 27, 57

Staff members. See Youth workers

Stokes, G., 5, 27, 57

Street savvy construct, 143

Students (Youth Studies Program): P&R transformation research findings on, 69; research & evaluation course required for Youth Studies program, 60; sample research & evaluation studies by, 74–77; “secret shopper” visits and field studies on P&R by, 101–102. See also Faculty (Youth Studies Program)

Substantive youth advisory structure model, 87–88

Sufficient time construct, 143–144

Symbolic youth advisory structure model: description of, 86–87; youth voice in a, 88

“Take Home Chef” program, 41–42

Translator role, 141

UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC), 81, 82

University of Minnesota: examining P&R’s collaboration with, 10; faculty of, 70–71; research & evaluation on youth organization change conducted at, 60–77, 130–131. See also Youth Studies, School of Social Work (University of Minnesota)

VeLure Roholt, R., 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 13, 25, 79, 97, 100, 121, 133, 146

Vocational calls, 126–127

Weah, W., 3, 7, 115, 120

Words as construct, 144

Xiong, W., 5, 27, 57

Youth: building and sustaining meaningful relationships with, 30–31; encouraging youth workers to learn local mundane ways of, 127; P&R partnership with SPPD for reducing violence among, 108–109; youth advisory structure for listening to, 79–98, 131–133; Youthprise’s emphasis on “opportunity,” 116

Youth advisory groups: brief description of, 84–86; ongoing review of structures of, 80–98; services of, 79–80

Youth advisory structure (YAS): CYLC (youth leadership council) used to promote and plan the, 90–94; description of review process of, 80–81; examined as a response and contributor, 81–83; models of, 86–88; modes of expression used in, 89; moral test for, 132; moving toward the use of expressed ideas in, 88; studies conducted on, 83–84, 89–95; youth preparation and training services included in, 88–89; youth voice as sine qua non of a, 88

Youth advisory structure (YAS) models: blended, 87–88; substantive model of, 87–88; symbolic, 86–87, 88

Youth advisory structure (YAS) studies: for CANVAS program, 84, 90–94; lessons learning for creating and sustaining YAGs, 95–97; ongoing on Minnesota youth advisory groups (YAGs), 83–84, 85–86; for Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R), 89–95; for Youthprise Foundation, 3, 83

Youth agencies: cage function of, 14; community organizing work by, 34–36, 43–45; current philosophy on best practices for, 59; examining the development and transformation of, 1–3; four scenarios on, 15–24; host function of, 13–14; limited public funds for research by public agency, 60–61; race/ethnic differences of staff of, 128; traditionally ignored in scholarship, 14; training staff to create space for learning and change, 31–33; youth worker training impact on development of, 47–49

Youth agency change: as beginning at the top, 128–129; creating a space for learning and, 31–33; using effective facilitators to address concerns about, 129–130; empirical research & evaluation to help with, 60–77, 130–131; examining P&R's staff training for, 10, 27–56; examining the process of using research & evaluation for, 137–140; lessons learned on how local foundations can support, 119–120, 134–136; organizational support of change leaders for, 53–54, 129; phases of the professional development groups for, 38–45; training philosophy and ethos for driving, 30–37; Youth Studies' research studies on P&R's, 60–77; youth worker development to promote, 51–55, 127–130; Youthprise's support of, 115–120, 134–136. See also Change leaders

Youth agency change research: data analysis during the, 64–65; final thoughts on the process of, 66–68; first-person perspective by Emily Rence on, 71–73; lessons learned from the, 68–71, 130–131; political aspects of the, 62–63; preparing for the study, 63–64; prestudy phase of, 61–62; sample of student studies on, 74–77; writing up findings, 65–66

Youth agency consulting scenario, 20–22

Youth development literature: benefits of asking questions on organizations in, 14–15; scenario approach to, 15–24; traditional focus of, 13

Youth development scholarship: organizations as traditionally taken for granted in, 14; questions on organization as primary actor explored in, 14–15; research agenda and questions used for, 23–24; research agenda for scenario, 23–24; scenarios used for, 15–23; strong focus on theory development by, 13

Youth Job Corps (YJC), 104

Youth Program Quality Assessment tool, 81

Youth services scenario, 22–23

Youth Studies Program (University of Minnesota): improving youth outcomes commitment by, 10; longtime partnership between P&R and, 105–106; P&R “secret shopper” visits and field studies on P&R by students of the, 101–102; P&R youth worker development collaboration by, 10, 27–56; partnership between Youth in Transition program (P&R) and, 119; research on transforming Saint Paul Parks and Recreation (P&R) by, 60–77

Youth Studies, School of Social Work (University of Minnesota): weekly training on youth projects by, 1. See also University of Minnesota Youth Studies/P&R staff training collaboration: examining the process and outcomes of, 10, 27–28; lessons learned from the, 51–55, 127–130; outcomes of the, 45–51; phases of the professional development groups, 38–45; philosophy and ethos of the, 30–37; professional development context of the, 28–30

Youth in Transition program (P&R): description of, 115–116; identifying the strengths of the, 118–119; “opportunity” youth focus of the, 116; partnership between Youth Studies and, 119; Youthprise’s participatory approach to evaluating, 117–118

Youth voice, 88

Youth worker development: accomplishments and outcomes of, 45–49; challenges and barriers to, 49–51; examining Youth Studies’ role in P&R’s, 10, 27–28; lessons learned from experience of, 51–55, 127–130; phases of the professional development groups during the, 38–45; professional development contexts of, 28–30;
training philosophy and ethos of P&R’s, 30–37. See also Youth workers
Youth worker development phases:
diagnostic, 38–40; enhancing youth program skills, 41–43; organizing and social action, 43–45
Youth worker training philosophy/ethos: being a reflective practitioner, 33–34; building and sustaining meaningful relationships with youth, 30–31; cocreating a space for learning and change,
31–33; community organizing,
34–36; professional development structure design, 36–37
Youth workers: group development phases of, 38–45; how partnerships help build relationships of, 134;
learning from local community members, 127; learning lessons from part-time, 126; learning local mundane ways, 127; P&R transformation research findings on, 69; philosophy and ethos of training, 30–34; race/ethnic differences of, 128; recruiting and organizing based on vocational calls of, 126–127; value of “old-timers” or seasoned, 135. See also Change leaders; Youth worker development
Youthprise (foundation): emphasis on reaching “opportunity youth,” 116;
examining the work being done at, 3; exploratory study of youth advisory structure of, 83; funding approach taken by, 115; funding and evaluating P&R’s Youth in Transition program, 115–116, 117–119; lessons learned about grant making/systems change work by, 119–120, 134–136; origins and focus of, 116