Contents

Notes on Contributors vii
Acknowledgements xiii

1 Personal Development and Clinical Psychology
   Jan Hughes and Sheila Youngson 1

2 Personal Development in Clinical Psychology: The Context
   Sheila Youngson 8

3 What is Personal Development and Why is it Important?
   Jan Hughes 24

4 A Model of Personal Development Processes
   Sheila Youngson and Jan Hughes 46

5 ‘If They Don’t Know Themselves, They Can’t Help You
   Find Yourself, Can They Really?’ Service User Perspectives
   on Personal Development of Clinical Psychologists Sheila Youngson, Rebecca Hames and Tracey Holley in collaboration with Charmaine Riley, Geoff, Judy and Margaret 62

6 Power and Identity: Considerations for Personal and Professional Development
   Sarah Davidson and Nimisha Patel 75

7 Supervision and Personal Development
   Joyce Scaife 89

8 Therapy and Personal Development
   Caroline Rake 108
9 Personal Development in a Group Setting
   Fiona Smith, Sheila Youngson and Garry Brownbridge  124

10 Evaluating Personal Development in Clinical Psychology Training
   Sheila Youngson with David Green  147

11 Personal Development in Clinical Psychology Training – ‘The Story So Far . . .’
   Clea Horner, Sheila Youngson and Jan Hughes  168

12 Processes in Personal Development in Training: The Trainee’s Experience
   Jan Hughes and Sheila Youngson (with contributions from Kevin Baker, Steven Coles, Kathryn Dykes, Simon Platts, Nick Shelley, Stephanie Sneider, Vicky Tozer)  188

13 The Present and the Future
   Sheila Youngson with Jan Hughes  202

Index  214