Subject Index

A
Activism, as civic engagement, 9
Accreditation, and disciplinary capstones, 119
Acting Locally: Civic Learning and Civic Leadership in Southwestern Ohio (think tank): centered on integral relationship between learning and leadership, 165; challenge to faculty in, 166–167; community immersion experience in, 167; integration of academic learning with community learning in, 168; interdisciplinary and community–based curriculum in, 166; and local impacts of globalization, 164; “public culture” concept in, 165
American Association of Community Colleges, service–learning projects of, 17–18
American College & University Presidents Climate Commitment pledge, 230
American culture: contemporary turn toward the larger public good in, 156; Reagan’s consumerization of, 156–157
American Democracy Project initiatives, 17
AmeriCorps, 12–13
Antioch College, first–year seminars on civic engagement and experiential education in, 75
Applied learning, as essential learning outcome, 51
Associated New American Colleges, mission of, 20
Association of American Colleges and Universities (AAC&U): call for liberal education focused on civic learning, 100; educational philosophy of, 16; on essential learning outcomes, 16, 50–51; student’s narcissistic perspectives on their education, 49–50

B
Beginning College Survey of Student Engagement (BCSSE), 72
Beloit College Mindset List, 79
Berea College’s Center for Excellence in Learning through Service, course–based community–based research model in, 204–205
Bonner Scholars Program, 20
“Bowling Alone: America’s Declining Social Capital,” 14
Bringing Theory to Practice Project (BTtoP), AAC&U partnership with, 16–17, 230
Brown University’s independent study capstones: interview and fellowship experience in, 125; Society of Royce Fellows as example of, 125–126

C
Campus Compact: formation of, 12; mission and civil engagement work of, 15; network of state compacts, 15–16; strategy tying civic engagement to increasing nontraditional students’ college access, 237; surveys of students’ civic engagement, 22, 32
Campus Compact’s Raise Your Voice campaign, positive results of, 243
Campus Compact’s Wingspread summit initiatives to enhance civic engagement and social change efficacy, 175–176
Campus Outreach Opportunity League (COOL), 244
Campus–community partnerships: as opportunities for student civic engagement, 13–14; and teaching involving active learning pedagogies and service, 230
Capstone experiences and programs, 117–137; assessment of, 133–135; best practices for enhancing civic engagement through, 128–133; central purposes of, 121; connecting models to civic engagement, 120–121; data suggesting challenges for, 134; end–of–term quantitative course evaluation in, 134; examples of, 121–128; exponential growth of, 117; facilitating understanding of community and culture in, 130–131; faculty development for, 135–136; integrated into curricula, 117; and interdisciplinary culminating experiences, 117; primary national models of, 118–120; qualitative evaluation of learning achievements and course improvement in, 134; role and purposes of capstone courses in, 120–121; specific civic skill development integrated into curricula of, 135–136; student reports on, 134; vignettes of exemplary programs of, 121–135. See also Exemplar capstone programs; specific type
Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, 21; Community Engagement Classification of, 118; elective classification for community engagement of, 228–229
Center for Information & Research on Civic Learning & Engagement (CIRCLE): civic engagement measures of, 9; common threads in focus group findings, 40; research on youth civic and political engagement, 22, 36–40
Chandler–Gilbert Community College, “See Your World” theme for civic engagement in, 77–78
Civic education: and student relationships consistent with democratic principles, 90; traditional classroom and, 89–90; theory of, 86–89
Civic engagement: of African–Americans and Native American graduates, 42; after–college declines in, 33; author’s working definition of, 9; campus–based approaches to developing and sustaining, 228–235; categories of research questions about, 233–235; and Carnegie Foundation’s elective classification for community engagement, 228–229; challenges of integrating other approaches with, 189–192; and changes in campus culture and environment, 229; comparative degree of participation in, 36–40; as component of new student orientation, 73–74; and comprehensive civic engagement initiatives/centers, 56–57; concept, rise in prominence of, 14; desire for more access points and opportunities for, 43, 44; differences by gender, 41, 42; engaging students of color and of working class in, 231; faculty involvement as critical factor in sustainability of, 229; and federal government partnerships with higher education, 11; gap between four-year and two-year students in, 43; historical overview of, 10–14; impact of college experience on, 36–37; initiatives, student motivations to participate in, 231; and institution mission, 10; and institution type, 40–41, 42; institutional, 228–231; leadership beyond the campus for, 236–245; linked to institutional priorities, 230; living-learning communities focused on, 181–183; long-term effectiveness of, 233–235; major twenty-first century initiatives in, 15–21; measures of, 9; misconceptions of, 6–7; multiculturalism and, 8; new publications for assessing, 65; and postgraduation changes in values, 42; providing spaces for participation in, 44; of recent graduates, 40–42; research on, 22–23; and self-reported voting differences, 41–42; resistance to emerging paradigm of, 190; strategies for securing future of, 227, 237; and students’ negative views on politics and elections, 36; terms and definitions of, 7–10; types of, 8–9; in undergraduate education, 1–2; of young people without college experience, 39

Civic Engagement across the Curriculum, 177

Civic engagement in first year: designing opportunities for, 72; efforts to involve all first-year students in, 82–83; and experiential learning outside classrooms, 76–78; first-year seminars as platform for, 74; forms of, 72; and high school civic experience, 70–71; impact of significant local and world events on, 78–79; institutional examples of good practice in, 72–78; intentional and deliber- ate focus on, 71; media content evaluation on political and social influences in, 75–76; rationale for, 70; and social justice issues, 76; and student retention, 72; theoretical frameworks supporting, 71–72. See also First-year experience

Civic Engagement Working Group, 59

Civic learning: description of, 129; proposed pedagogy for, 177; schema for describing, 57; six essential elements of, 130–133

Civic learning spiral, 59–65; applications of, 59; assumptions undergirding, 61; capstones for increasing civic learning in, 128–129; curriculum pathway for development of civic imagination in, 61–62; as education for civic engagement approach, 177; educational settings for, 60; elements (braids) of, 59–60; and key civic learning goals, 64; learning outcomes for six braids in, 62–63; notion of relationships and interdependencies of everyday life in, 61; principles of interactivity and integration in, 59; public action braid in, 65; using and assessing outcomes of, 64–65

Civic and political engagement research: comparative activities and degree of college experience in, 37–38; tab.2.2; and engagement across educational spectrum, 22; and impacts of college experience, 36–37; measures of, 9

Civic renewal movement, purpose and approaches in, 25

Classroom engagement: and classroom’s function as social and political system, 90; “democratic classroom” technique in, 91; as foundation for comprehensive approach to civic education, 86; techniques to encouraging participation in course governance, 90
Coalition for Civic Engagement and Leadership at University of Maryland, definition of civic engagement by, 9
Cognitive apprenticeship, defined, 197
College admissions, relative importance of volunteer experience in, 32–33
College experience, civic engagement effect of, 32
College of New Jersey’s Trenton Youth Community–Based Research Corps, preparatory component of, 205–206
College student community service, history of, 11–12
College and university outreach, concept of, 13
Colorado College’s Mathis Hall, as living–learning community for addressing local social justice issues, 181–182
Columbia College’s Social Justice Learning Community, overview of, 182
Commission on National and Community Service, establishment of, 12
Community College National Center for Community Engagement, resources and services of, 18
Community colleges, supporting associations’ civic engagement projects for, 17–18
Community Colleges Broadening Horizons through Service Learning project, 17
Community service: defined as civic engagement, 7; dramatic growth of 1980’s and 1990’s in, 12; as most advocated type of civic engagement, 8–9
Community–based civic projects, development of intercultural competence through, 140–152
Community–based undergraduate research (CBR): achievement and characteristics of productive partnerships in, 199–200; community agents in, 199–200; and constructivist learning theory, 197; course–based model of, 204–205; creation of project goals through collaborative process in, 207–208; defining characteristics of, 198–201; description and purpose of, 196; discussions of project results of, 201; educator as facilitator of learning in, 197–198; emphasis on co–learning in, 200; faculty motivation to engage in, 200; guidance for effective partnerships in, 206–209; initiatives of, 203–206; insights from learning theory on, 197–198; links between research and democracy in, 199; and misfires in forming partnerships, 201–202; obstacles to engaging faculty in, 202; origins of partnership in, 206–207; partnership challenges and conflicts in, 201–203; pedagogical models of, 203–206; project management plan development in, 208; socialization of new students in, 208–209; student success in partnerships with, 203; traditional positivist paradigm of research and, 200
Community–Campus Partnerships for Health, 18
Concordia College, Hands for Change service event of, 74
Corporation for National and Community Service: creation of, 12; surveys of students’ civic engagement by, 22
Council of Europe’s European Year of Citizenship through Education, 24
Council of Independent Colleges’ Engaging Communities and Campuses program, Effective Practices Exchange of, 19
D

Democracy Project’s Toolkit for Teaching in a Democratic Academy, 91
Democratic Academy: assessment of, 95–97; basis of intellectual framework for, 88; challenge of transforming students into social entrepreneurs in, 85, 86–87; and civic disengagement, 87–88; design and premise of, 85–87, 94; overview of, 86; pedagogical techniques emphasized in, 86; pedagogy aligned with civic purpose in, 92; pedagogy of service–learning in, 94–95; and Rousseau’s hypothesis on democratic decision making and character development, 88–89; stages and types of engagement in, 94; and student learning outcomes relevant to promotion of human/social capital, 86; and sustained academic leadership, 96
Democratic citizenship, integrative knowledge as preparation for, 103
Democratic classrooms: construction and principles of, 91–92; as form of experiential learning, 92; as guide for creating general education curriculum, 95; and human capital development for community and political engagement, 93; and service–learning courses, 94; student responsibility for learning in, 91–92
Departmental capstones: advantages and challenges of, 122; assessment of, 119; accreditation and, 119; capstone course in, 118–119; demonstration of disciplinary expertise in, 119; example of, 121–122; overview of, 118–119; and synthesis and application of learning objectives within a major, 122
Disciplinary associations, sector–based, 18
Disciplinary capstones: accreditation and, 119; example of, 121–122; as graduation requirement, 119; overview of, 118–119
Diverse communities, resources for enhancing students’ appreciation of, 131
Diversity, U.S.: and higher education’s move from exclusiveness to inclusiveness, 52–53; as source of educational insights and excellence, 53–54; and student’s demographic profile, 53
DukeEngage, program for tackling societal issues, 24

E

Educating Citizens: Preparing America’s Undergraduates for Lives of Moral and Civic Responsibility, 21
Educational reform movements: America’s diversity and, 52–54; of civil engagement, 55–57; common aspirations across, 58; convergence and activities of, 52–57; efforts to capitalize on congruencies in, 57–59; maximizing educational capital of, 57–59; and personal and social responsibility connecting individual movements, 56
Engaged scholarship, development of criteria for evaluating, 229
Environmental sustainability, as critical campus issue, 230–231
Exemplar capstone programs: acquisition and demonstration of civic engagement skills in, 131–132; for broadening students’ knowledge understanding, 131; interviewing multiple community partners for, 131; and student understandings of community and cultures, 130–131; support for public actions in, 132–133; values clarification in, 133
Experiential learning, service–learning approaches to, 103
Subject Index

F
Faculty: and campus–community partnerships, 230; and civic involvement tied to academic core, 29; and disciplinary support for civic engagement, 240–241; and exemplary practices in discipline–based civic education, 241; participation in civic engagement activities, 56

Failing Our Students, Failing America: Holding Colleges Accountable for Teaching America’s History and Institutions (report), 22

First college year: choice of doing well and doing good in, 71; data collection for understanding students in, 78; defining experience and success in, 69–70; measures of precollege academic and cocurricular experiences in, 72

First-year experience reform strategies: communicating with campus community on new proposals as, 81–82; faculty/staff opportunities for development as, 80; integrative learning as, 79; and outcomes and assessment for student achievement, 80; and partnerships between academic affairs and student affairs, 81; reform connected to institutional mission as, 79–80; for understanding students, 78–79

First–year initiatives, movement to institutionalize, 80

Foundations: civic engagement interests of, 20–21; and dialogues on civic mission for higher education, 20; and education for students’ civic engagement, 21; and work to strengthen democracy, 20

Founding Fathers, higher education reforms of, 10

G
General education (curriculum): and learning environment created to promote engaged citizenship and social intelligence, 86; theoretical framework for transformation to civic arts curriculum, 87

George Washington University in Washington, DC, first–year theme houses focused political and social issues, 77

Georgetown University’s Center for Social Justice Research, Teaching, and Service: options for conducting projects in, 180; values and types of projects in, 180

Global citizenship, opportunities to learn and practice civic engagement in, 230

Global civic engagement: academic requirements as restriction on, 223; challenges and barriers to, 223–224; and conventional study abroad, 224–225; exposure to new ideas through, 215; guiding principles for, 214–216; institutional examples of, 218–223; institutionally sponsored programs for, 217–218; and mismatches between academic calendars and partner organizations’ needs, 224; opportunities for personal and objective reflection in, 216; options for, 216–218; and programs offered by third–party providers, 216–217; reciprocal relationship in, 214; standards of academic rigor for, 215; and student enrollment in programs of other colleges, 217; and student preparedness, 216

Global learning: and benefits/challenges of global interdependence, 55; civic dimensions of, 55; and necessity of global knowledge, 54–55; schema used to describe, 57

Graduate students, as important constituency for civic engagement, 243–245

Greater Expectations: A New Vision for Learning as a Nation Goes to College (report): agenda for revitalized liberal education and civic engagement in, 100–101; and integrative and interdisciplinary learning, 101; recommendations for increased civic engagement in, 197

H
Haverford College’s summer internship program, 219
Higher education: civic engagement as entrepreneurial and public relations dimension of, 56; democracy education as historic role of, 50; and employers’ needs for global knowledge and teamwork in diverse groups, 51–52; importance of international experiences and interactions in, 54
Higher education classification system, elective classification for community engagement in, 21
Higher Education Network for Community Engagement, 19
Higher Education Research Institute’s surveys of students’ civic engagement, 22
Highlander Folk School: Citizenship Schools in, 160–161; empowerment of civil rights movement leaders in, 159; focus on leadership capacity of ordinary people in, 159–160; public ideal of leadership education in, 159, 160
Honors thesis capstones: challenges of, 128; description of, 120; examples of, 127; opportunities to integrate and present specific learning in, 127–128

I
Imagining America consortium, 18
IMPACT: the National Student Conference on Service, Advocacy, and Social Action, 244
Independent study capstones: description of, 120; design and advantages of, 126
Indiana University—Purdue University Indianapolis, Discover Indianapolis seminar of, 74–75
Intellectual development, in epistemological reflection model, 198
Intellectual and practical skills, as essential learning outcomes, 51
Intercollegiate Studies Institute, and college students’ lack of civic knowledge, 22–23
Intercultural competence enhancement through community engagement: addressing systemic and social factors in, 145–146; challenges and recommendations for educators in, 140–152; examples of, 149–152; and initial research and introduction to community, 141–142; and intragroup diversity, 140; and prior community engagement of students and partners, 146–148; project facilitators’ reflections on, 148; students’ discomfort level as obstacle to, 143; and student misperceptions and stereotypes, 143–144; and trust–building, 140, 148–152; types of activities in, 144
Interdisciplinary capstones: description of, 119–120; for teaching collaborative work in multidisciplinary environments, 124
Interdisciplinary and integrative learning: “bridging the explanation–action gap” strategy in, 103; civic engagement influenced by, 99–115; definitions and distinctions between, 102; and disagreement with tenets of liberal education, 104; as essential learning outcome, 51; and new ways of thinking about learning, 104; outcome of deep interdisciplinary understanding in, 102; program models emphasizing civic engagement in, 105–113; support for, 105
International initiatives, examples of, 24–25
International Partnership for Service–Learning and Leadership, undergraduate programs of, 216–217

J
James Madison University’s orange bank program, key goals of, 188
Jantraka, Sompop, 187
Jefferson, Thomas, on citizen education’s link with democracy, 49
Jonathan M. Tisch College of Citizenship and Public Service, initiatives to advance undergraduate civic engagement, 23
Journal for Civic Commitment, 18
Justice–learning: model based on feminist poststructuralism, 178; recent publications on education for, 178

K
Kalamazoo College’s liberal learning curriculum (K–Plan), 220–221
Kellogg Foundation, 20
Kennesaw State University’s Maya Heritage Community Project: lessons learned in, 106; reciprocal approach and mutual benefits in, 105–106; service–learning and civic engagement in, 105
Kettering Foundation, publications of, 20
Knowledge of human cultures and physical/natural world, as essential learning outcome, 51

L
Leadership education for the public good, 154–171; alternative concepts of, 158–161; aspects of thinking comprehensively about, 169–171; and citizen–centered approach to public life, 157–158; and collaborative problem solving on public issues, 155; emerging countertrends to dominant model of, 157; engaged and relational models of, 158; and leadership defined by charismatic individuals, 158; leadership model of community–based struggles for democracy, 158–161; qualities needed in, 155; social change model of, 158; Wilks Institute as model for reframing, 169
Learn and Serve America, 12–13
Learning outcomes, essential: and business leaders’ emphasis on intercultural competencies, 51; consensus on, 50–51; and expanding vision and expectations of higher education, 51; as source of innovation and creativity, 51
Liberal education, broad definition of, 101–102

M
Mars Hill College’s cocurricular civic engagement certificate, 106–108; challenging community–based and capstone experiences in, 107; strengths and challenges associated with, 107
Measure of Epistemological Reflection (MER), 179
Miami University’s Harry T. Wilks Leadership Institute: changing conception of knowledge production and dissemination in, 169; curricular and cocurricular leadership programs of, 161; examples for thinking differently about leadership education for democracy in, 156; innovative civic engagement programs in, 161; and interdisciplinary think tanks to embed public engagement, 163–164; living–learning community focused on leadership and civic engagement in, 162–163; and youth views on leadership, 162. See also Acting Locally
Middlesex County College’s Democracy house, community–based research project in, 204
Millennial generation of college students: promising practices for civic engagement of, 232; volunteering and social changes interests of, 231–232
Millersville University in Pennsylvania, and service learning in first–year seminar, 74
Mills College Institute for Civic Leadership, programs to advance civic leadership capacities of women in, 189
Minority students, comparative college enrollment of, 53. See also Students of color
Mt. Michael’s College, Ilula Orphan Program of, 218–219

N
National Campus Voter Registration Project, 19
National Community Service Act, passage of, 12
National Defense Education Act of 1958, 11
National Forum on Higher Education and the Public Good report, 20
National Society for Experiential Education, formation of, 12
Net generation, social change interests of, 231–232
New Century College’s integrative studies degree program: challenges and successes in, 113; experiential learning requirement in, 111–112; goal of site–specific field research, 112; leadership courses and service/volunteer activities in, 112–113
North Central Association’s Higher Learning Commission, accreditation criterion for engagement and service in, 22

O
Oakton Community College, Students for Social Justice club in, 188–189

P
Parks, Rosa, community leadership of, 159
Pasco–Hernando Community College, Peace and Social Justice Institute at, 189
Peace Corps, and national prominence of students’ community service, 11
Pedagogies of engagement, significant impacts of, 96–97
Personal and social responsibility, as essential learning outcome, 51
Political Engagement Project, 21
Political participation: civic engagement through, 9; educational institutions’ impact on, 89
Portland State University: assessment strategies to evaluate capstone courses, 133–134; Connecting Educational Communities course at, 219–220; innovative faculty learning community models employed in, 135; interdisciplinary grant writing capstone in, 123–124; popular capstone course in, 124
Practical Guide for Integrating Civic Responsibility into the Curriculum, A, 17–18
Presidential leadership: and civic engagement beyond their campus, 238–239; and institutions’ civic and economic impact on communities of, 237–238; international promotion of civic education by, 239
Princeton’s Community–Based Learning Initiative, community–based research projects for undergraduate senior theses in, 205
Professional staff: advocacy and contribution for advancement of civic engagement, 242–243
Project Pericles, for promotion of student civic engagement, 19
Provosts and academic officers: and creation of climate to encourage faculty civic engagement, 242; and implementation of the American Democracy Project, 241; support for national initiatives to recognize civic engagement work, 241

R
Reinventing Undergraduate Education, recommendations for increased civic engagement in, 197
Research University Civic Engagement Network, 20
Review of Service Learning Research, definitions of civic engagement in, 7

S
Scholarship of engagement: challenges of achieving recognition for, 14; defined, 14
Science Education for New Civic Engagements and Responsibilities (SENCER), 18–19
Service–learning: adaptation of models for institutionalizing, 228; challenges of integrating other approaches with, 189–192; critics of, 175; defined, 174; emphasis of new models of, 175–179; factors limiting institutionalization of, 190–191; integrated with civic engagement or social justice, 179; legitimate criticism of, 192; measures of impact on students’ cognitive development, 179; 1980’s and 1990’s growth in, 12; as pedagogy to increase civic knowledge and skills, 177; perceived as distinct from activism, 174–175; pioneering pedagogy of, 11–12; to prepare students for democratic participation, 177–178; and program profiles, 179–190; proposed solution to political dimension of, 191–192; Raise Your Voice campaign to promote policy and political change, 175–179; rise to prominence of, 13; service combined with academic content and reflection in, 13; as tool for promoting engaged citizenship, 93–94; traditional mainstream approaches to, 175, 176; as universalistic practice appropriate for all political perspectives, 191
Service–politics, concept and characteristics of, 176–177
Social justice: concept, and partisan liberal activism, 190; examples of living–learning communities focused on, 181–183; measurement of impact on students’ cognitive development, 179; in relation to civic engagement, 7. See also Justice–learning
Social justice programs at community colleges, examples of, 188–189
St. Mary’s College of California, Walk the Talk initiatives of, 185–186
Stanford University: honors thesis capstones in, 126–128; Overseas Studies Academic Quarter Program in Cape Town, 221–222
Student success: emerging consensus on sociality’s centrality to, 86–87; first–year, definitions of, 70; key factors contributing to, 71–72
Students of color: effective and appropriate civil engagement initiatives for, 231; engagement of, 231; and postgraduate values, 42
Students’ racial identity development, and community work, 142–143
Success in College: Creating Conditions That Matter, recommendations for increased civic engagement in, 197
Suffolk University in Boston, Media Literacy freshman seminar of, 75–76

T
Texas A&M University’s Leadership Living Learning Community, 182
Toolkit for Teaching in a Democratic Academy, 17
Trustees, civic education support of, 239–240
Tufts University: overview of media and publics service program in, 186–187; Talloires Network of, 24

U
UCLA in LA initiative, undergraduate curricular arms of, 23
University of Alaska’s Center for Community Engagement and Learning, applied research projects on environmental sustainability in, 205
University of Georgia’s Classic City retreat experience, overview of, 73
University of Maryland’s College Park Scholars’ living–learning community, Service Day participation of, 74
University of Massachusetts Amherst’s Citizen Scholars Program, service–learning courses and projects in, 183–184
University of Michigan in Anne Arbor, First–Year Interest Groups (FIGs) at, 76–77
University of Michigan’s Community Scholars Program: integrative learning and civic engagement in, 110–111; as thematic living–learning program, 110–111
University of Minnesota, Morris, civic learning in statistics courses of, 182–183
University of Utah: criteria for officially designating courses, 191; service–politics and civic engagement in, 184–185
University of Washington’s Bringing It Home course, 222–223
University of Wisconsin—Madison’s Chadbourne Residential College, active involvement focused on social change in, 181
University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee’s Cultures and Communities Certificate Program: assessment of learning outcomes in, 109; and fulfillment of general education requirements, 108; and learning goals in civic engagement area, 108–109; lessons learned from, 110; philosophical underpinning of, 109; support for, 109–110
University of Wisconsin—Stevens Point’s Thailand Project, as social justice incorporating the arts, 187
U.S. Secretary of Education’s Commission on the Future of Higher Education (report), 236–237
USA Freedom Corps, 12–13

V
Volunteer experience, and chances of attending college, 32–33
Volunteers in Service to America, 11

W
Wagner College: departmental capstones in learning communities of, 121; senior capstone and reflective tutorial in business department of, 121–122
Working–class students, effective and appropriate civil engagement initiatives for, 231

Y
Youth college enrollment statistics, 31
Youth voting, in recent elections and 2008 presidential primaries, 34–36