List of Symbols ix

Preface xi

1 Introduction 1
   1.1 Objectives of this book 2
   1.2 Structure of this book 3
   1.3 Research methodology 4

2 Definitions and Characteristics of Rumors 5
   2.1 Definitions 5
      2.1.1 Structure of the categories, news, information and rumor 7
      2.1.2 Rumors versus gossip 10
      2.1.3 Summary of rumor characteristics 10
   2.2 Historical background to studies on rumors 10

3 Rumors and the Theory of Finance 15
   3.1 Rumors and Behavioral Finance 15
      3.1.1 Theoretical excursion: A formal definition of the value of information 15
      3.1.2 The relationship between the value of information and efficient markets 16
      3.1.3 The criticisms of Behavioral Finance 17
      3.1.4 The link between rumors and Behavioral Finance 18
      3.1.5 Financial markets as a fruitful ground for rumors 19
      3.1.6 Six types of rumors 20
      3.1.7 Classification of rumors in financial markets 21
   3.2 Rumors and rational behavior 21
      3.2.1 Rationality in the classical Theory of Finance 22
      3.2.2 Bounded rationality 24
      3.2.3 Procedural rationality 25
      3.2.4 An action is always rational 26
      3.2.5 Rationality in financial markets 27
3.3 Empirical studies of rumors in the stock market

3.4 Review of models on rumors

3.5 Ethnographical studies

4 Legal Aspects of Rumors in Financial Markets

4.1 Rumors in financial markets and insider trading
   4.1.1 Introduction
   4.1.2 Review of scientific literature on insider trading

4.2 Review of models on insider trading
   4.2.1 Models of insider trading regulation
   4.2.2 Models of trading by registered insiders

4.3 Rumors in financial markets and price manipulation

4.4 Review of models on market manipulation

5 Survey of Rumors in Financial Markets

5.1 The survey and its intention

5.2 Participant profile
   5.2.1 Survey parameters
   5.2.2 Survey participants

5.3 Development of rumors
   5.3.1 How rumors start and why
   5.3.2 Correlation between market volatility and frequency of rumors
   5.3.3 What is the source?
   5.3.4 First actions on a rumor
   5.3.5 Action on specific versus general rumors

5.4 Spreading of rumors
   5.4.1 To spread or not to spread?
   5.4.2 First or last in the row?
   5.4.3 Spreading time: How long it takes

5.5 Belief in rumors
   5.5.1 Why rumors are believed
   5.5.2 Does it matter what you believe?

5.6 Network formation

5.7 Trading on rumors
   5.7.1 Systematic price patterns?
   5.7.2 Rumor sources and profits
   5.7.3 Thoughts triggered by the price movement
   5.7.4 Actions triggered by the price movement

5.8 Rumors versus information
   5.8.1 Trading on rumors versus trading on information
   5.8.2 The difference between a rumor and information

5.9 Conclusions from the survey
   5.9.1 Rumors follow logical rules
   5.9.2 Prices reflect beliefs
   5.9.3 Investment strategies on rumors
   5.9.4 Relating the results to other studies
6 Rumor Experiments

6.1 Why use experiments as a research methodology? 79
6.2 Methodological pre-considerations 81
   6.2.1 Internal versus external validity 81
   6.2.2 Selection of participants 82
   6.2.3 Payment of participants 82
6.3 Review of previous rumor experiments 82
   6.3.1 The psychological experiments of DiFonzo and Bordia 82
   6.3.2 An economic approach towards rumor experiments and their structuring in this book 84
6.4 First stage experiments: Ambiguity aversion in a financial market 85
   6.4.1 A brief overview of ambiguity aversion 86
   6.4.2 Experimental design 96
   6.4.3 Results of the first stage experiments 98
   6.4.4 Discussion 101
   6.4.5 Conclusion 105
6.5 Second stage experiments: Varying rumor messages 106
   6.5.1 A brief discussion of the existing literature 106
   6.5.2 Experimental design 108
   6.5.3 Results of the second stage experiments 109
   6.5.4 Conclusion 113
6.6 Third stage experiments: Testing herd behavior 113
   6.6.1 A brief overview of herd behavior in financial markets 114
   6.6.2 Experimental design 121
   6.6.3 Results of the third stage experiments 122
   6.6.4 Discussion and conclusion 127
6.7 Fourth stage experiments: Communication 128
   6.7.1 A brief overview 128
   6.7.2 Experimental design 129
   6.7.3 Results of the fourth stage experiments 130
   6.7.4 Discussion and conclusion 137

7 Conclusions and Outlook 141

Appendices 147

Appendix I 147
   Appendix I.1: Formal presentation of preference relations and choice rules 147
   Appendix I.2: Formal presentation of preference relations with utility functions 147

Appendix II 149
   Appendix II.1: Experimental instructions for the rumor setting with an auctioneer (experiments 1 and 2) 149
   Appendix II.2: Experimental instructions for the rumor setting with a batch auction (experiments 3 and 4) 153
   Appendix II.3: Experimental instructions for the rumor setting in a continuous double auction (experiments 5 to 12) 157