Contents

List of contributors, ix
Foreword, xi
Preface, xv
Acknowledgment, xvii

1 Introduction to oncology and medical errors, 1
   Antonella Surbone and Michael Rowe

Part I Medical errors and oncology: background and context

2 Recognizing and facing medical errors: the perspective of a physician who is also the patient, 17
   Itzhak Brook

3 Psychological and existential consequences of medical error for oncology professionals, 29
   Mary J. Chalino, Evelyn Y.T. Wong, Bradley L. Collins, and Richard T. Penson

4 To sue or not to sue: restoring trust in patient–doctor–family relationships, 51
   Michael Rowe and Antonella Surbone

Part II Improving patient safety in clinical oncology practice

5 Prevention of errors and patient safety: oncology nurses’ perspectives, 67
   Martha Polovich

6 Prevention of errors and patient safety from the oncologist’s perspective, 87
   Meghan E.C. Shea, Nie Bohlen, and Inga T. Lennes

7 Disclosing harmful medical errors, 101
   Walter F. Baile and Daniel Epner

8 Do cross-cultural differences influence the occurrence and disclosure of medical errors in oncology? 111
   Lidia Schapira, Joseph R. Betancourt, and Alexander R. Green
Part III Cancer patients, oncology professionals, and institutions against medical errors

9 Prevention of errors and patient safety: institutional perspectives, 127
   Eric Manheimer

10 Professional and ethical responsibilities in adverse events and medical errors: discussions when things go wrong, 145
   Patrick Forde and Albert W. Wu

11 Medical error and patient advocacy, 158
   Juanne N. Clarke, PhD

12 Conclusion: the “given” and “therefores” of clinical oncology and medical errors, 172
   Antonella Surbone and Michael Rowe

Index, 181