Contents

Preface xi

1 Why Communicating about Health Matters 1
   It Answers the Question, “Who Am I?” 3
   It Answers the Question, “Who’s Responsible?” 6
   It Opens the Gate for “Resources” 9
   It Promotes (Mis)Understanding 13
   It Guides Effort, Emotion, and Excuses 17
   Summing It Up . . . 18

2 How “Normal” Am I? 20
   Compared to the Numbers 21
   Compared to the Stories 25
   When It Comes to Poor Health 32
   When Choosing Alternative Treatments 34
   When We Don’t Want to Know 36
   Summing It Up . . . 37

3 What Are My “Risk” Factors? 40
   Our Response to Reward Cues 42
   Our Response to Punishment Cues 45
   How We View Novelty 50
   When We Procrastinate 54
   What God Has to Do with It 56
   Summing It Up . . . 58
4 Why Don’t We Get “Care”? 60
   Our Doctors Didn’t Recommend It 62
   Family or Friends Don’t Support It 66
   We Use Support Networks 67
   We’re Managing Impressions 70
   We’re too Optimistic or Fatalistic 76
   Summing It Up . . . 78

5 Is the “Public Good” Good for Me? 80
   When We Have to “Tell” 82
   When Our Freedoms Are Limited 86
   When Safety Clashes with (E)Quality 89
   What Nonprofits Have to Do with It 95
   Why Public Health Matters 96
   Summing It Up . . . 99

6 Who Profits from My Health? 101
   Pharma-, Cosme-, and Nutri-ceuticals 102
   The News, It Is an Industry 107
   The Entertainment Industry 110
   Band-Aids, Crutches and More – Oh My! 113
   Who Benefits from Our Health Illiteracy? 116
   Summing It Up . . . 119

7 What’s Politics Got to Do with It? 121
   Medical Research and Disparities 122
   Political Agenda-setting and Priorities 127
   Religious Agendas and Priorities 131
   Medical Associations and Lobbyists 133
   Patient Advocacy 135
   Summing It Up . . . 139

8 An Agenda for the Twenty-first Century:
   Increase Informed Choice and Consent, or
   “If I Ran the Circus . . .” 141
   Make “Personalized Medicine” Personal 142
   Be Timely in the Telling 149
   Fill in the Blanks 154
   Track Your Health Report (... and Your Credit Report, Too) 157
Contents

Stay Out of “The Big Muddy” 160
Summing It Up . . . 162
A Final Thought 163

References 164
Index 186