INDEX

A
Action items, 171–187; Begin Here, 171–172; content, 183–184; Content Maps, 172–175; continuous improvement, 185–186; Learning Guide, 175–179; prioritizing, 180–182
Added value, 6
Advance planning, and lesson assessment, 83
Airasian, P. W., 71
Alignment, 69–70, 167; of a course, 69–70
Ambrose, S., xviii
American Association of Higher Education Assessment Forum, 56, 79
Anderson, L. W., 71
Anderson, T., 122
Anderson, V., 56
Archer, W., 122
Authentic assessments, 24, 79, 83–84, 167
Availability, consistency in, 147–148
Awalt, C., 8

B
Balanced life, achieving, 25–27
Begin Here, 1–27, 167, 171, 185; action items, 171–172; added value, 6; faculty experiences of, 27; good teaching, 3–6; learner-centered environment, 8–10; learning online, 7–10; learning vs. teaching, 7–11
Blog/journal of experiences, 155–156
Boettcher, J., 18
Brain processing, using knowledge of, 119–120
Bridges: blueprint, 131–134; introduction to next chunk, 131; summary statement, 131; transition statement, 131
Bridges, M., xviii

C
Chandler, P., 118
Chapter Conversion (form), 32
Chickering, A., 2, 4, 5, 77, 78–79, 121, 127
Chunk-ability, 115, 116, 167; defined, 17
Chunking, 78, 107, 109, 112, 115, 117, 122–134, 167; benefits of, 125–126; blueprint, 126–131; demonstration, 123–125; effectiveness of, 126; faculty experiences with, 134; process, 127–129; for text-based content, 129–131
Chunks and Bridges (form), 130
Clark, R. C., 107, 112, 114, 116, 118
Cognitive load theory, 114
Comeaux, P., 56
Comfort/discomfort in environment, 14–15
Communications Log, 135, 136, 137, 151–154, 161, 167, 186
Conceição, S.C.O., 18
Conrad, R., 18, 160
Content, 107–134; action items, 183–184; learning styles, 108–112
Content Maps, 23, 27, 29–54, 68–69, 89–90, 126–127, 135, 144–145, 167, 172–173, 176–177, 183–184; action items, 172–175; chapter conversion/course outline, 31–35; context and location cues, 36–37; creating, 38, 40; customizing, 37–38; defined, 31; development blueprint, 40–48; development process, example of, 42–45; examples of, 40–42; faculty uses of, 53; graphic presentation, benefits of, 37; information retrieval, 35–36; initial map, example of, 43–45; initial outline, example of, 43; novices vs. experts, 35; overview, 31–35; placing, 38–39; reasons to use, 35–37; topic selection, 45–48; topics, 48–54; uses of, 35–39; waving throughout the course, 39
Continuous improvement, 135–161; action items, 185–186; blogging/journaling experiences, 155–156; Communications Log, 151–153; effective practices, 140–150; FAQs, 154; items to document, 156–157; link rot, 157–158; list of issues/revisions, 154; online course, facilitating, 159–160; peer review, 137–140; reflection, 139–140; suggestions, 155
Convenient schedule, prioritizing, 140–141
Cook, M. P., 114, 117, 118, 120
Course content characteristics, 17
Course delivery, 1, 5, 18, 159, 167
Course design, 1, 18–19, 67, 89, 138, 143, 146, 157, 168
Course development, 1, 19, 29, 48, 55, 61, 63–64, 74, 90–93, 96, 98, 146, 168; layering, 92; prioritizing, 90–92
Course documentation, 21–22
Course Outline (form), 34
Course Schedule: developing, 142–143; form, 143
Course structure, 48–54; file systems, 49; folder and file structures, 50; managing, 50–54; naming schemes, 49; topics, 48
Cruikshank, K. A., 71

D
Dempsey, J. V., 116
DiPietro, M., xviii
Discipline, selection of, 3
Distractions in learner’s environment, 13–14
Donaldson, J., 18, 160
Draves, W. A., 97
Dual-mode effect, 117–118
Due dates, setting for the same day each week, 141
Dweck, C., 17

E
Effective practices, 140–150; appropriate pace for working, communicating, 141–143; availability, 147–148; convenient schedule, prioritizing, 140–141; due dates, setting for the same day each week, 141; learner messages, 148–150; navigating to lesson components, 146; navigation, consistency about, 143–145; schedule of due dates, 140; turning in assignments, 146–147
Effort, balancing points and, 25
Ehrmann, S., 5
Enduring elements: defined, 58; nonenduring content vs., 58–60
Environment, online learning, 13–14
External reviews, incorporating suggestions from, 13
Extraneous load, 114

F
Face-to-face learning: online learning vs., 16–20
Faculty: anxiety, reducing in, 96–97; role of, 17–18
FAQs, 154
Feedback, 25, 121
Felder, R., 2, 110, 111
Felder, R. M., 108, 110, 183
File systems for the course, 49
Finkelstein, J., 56
“First Principles of Instruction” (Merrill), 5
First-time online instructors, questions from, 23–28
Folder and file structures, 50

G
Gamson, Z., 2, 4, 5, 77, 78–79, 121, 127
Garrison, D., 122
Germane load, 114
Ginsberg, M. B., 119
H
Hicks, J., 78
Horton, W., 93

I
“Implementing the Seven Principles: Technology as Lever” (Chickering/Ehrmann), 5
“Index of Learning Styles” website/questionnaire, 108, 110
Information processing: and the brain, 112–117; cognitive load theory, 114; prior learning, organization of, 112–114
Instructional design, 5, 117–121; brain processing, using knowledge of, 119–120; dual-mode effect, 117–118; feedback, 121; modality principle, 118; presentation length, 118–119; presentation of information, 119; split-attention effect, 118
Instructional guidance, 120–121
Interruptions/distractions in learner’s environment, 13–14
Intrinsic load, 114
Introductory statement for next chunk, 131
Issues, list of, 154

J
Journal of experiences, 155–156

K
Kalyuga, S., 118
Krathwohl, D. R., 71
Kruse, K., 78

L
Landau, J., 78
Layering, faculty experiences with, 102
Learner anxiety, reducing, 92–93
Learner-centered environment, 8–10; self-selected, 8–9
Learner-Centered Teaching (Weimer), 10, 15
Learner messages, 148–150; discussion area/bulletin board, 148–149; email, 148–150; telephone calls, 149, 150; text messages, 149
Learner needs, 93–95
Learners: balancing effort/points, 25; feedback and response opportunities, 25; project-based assignments for, 24; submission of intermediate steps to assignments, 23; testing concepts/ideas, 24
Learning activities, 75–81; active learning opportunities, 78–79; discussion assignments, 79–89
Learning Guides, 12, 17, 19, 39, 47, 49, 51, 55–87, 90–91, 98, 102, 140, 168, 174–179; action items, 175–179; alignment, 69–70; and architectural structure, 62–63; audiences/functions, 61–65; as checklist for learning, 64; and communication of requirements to learners, 63; components, 65–66; consolidation of lesson scope in one document, 65; Content Map, 68–69; as course development map, 63–64; course title/lesson topic, 68; dates, 67–68; development blueprint, 66–87; enduring vs. nonenduring content, 58–60; faculty use of, 61–65, 87; identification, 68–69; and learners’ learning experience, 64; learning activities, 75–81; and learning expectations, 64–65; learning objectives/outcomes, 69–70; learning resources, 72–75; logistical information about the lesson, anchoring of, 63; and planning of course, 61–62; points earned, 85–86; preparation time, rewards of, 66–67; and prioritization of course development, 64; and progression pathway through the course, 65; quality objectives, components of, 71–72
Learning management system (LMS), 11, 51, 53, 63–64, 146, 159, 168
Learning online, See Online learning
Learning phases, 5
Learning resources: connections, making, 74–75; gathering, 74; lesson assessment, 82–85; self-assessments, 81–82
Learning styles, 108–112
Lehman, R. M., 18
Lesson assessment, 82–85; advance planning, 83; authentic assessments, 83–84; quizzes, 84–85
Lesson introduction, 168
Lesson (module), 47, 104, 125, 168
Link rot, 157–158, 168; defined, 157; form, 158
Liu, Y., 118, 125
Lovett, M., xviii

M
Marsh, R., 78
Mayer, R. E., xviii, 41, 71
Merrill, M., 2, 5, 79
Miller, G., 122, 125
Modality principle, 118
Module, See Lesson (module)
Moreno, R., 81
Multimedia Learning (Mayer), 41–42
My Favorite Teacher (form), 4

N
Naming schemes, 49
Navigating to lesson components, 146
Navigation, consistency about, 143–145
New tools, timing the introduction of, 11
Nguyen, F., 107, 112, 114, 116, 118
Nilson, L. B., 30
“No books” policy, 24
Nonenduring elements, defined, 58
Norman, M., xviii

O
Online content: chunk-ability, 115; pause-ability, 116; qualities of, 115–117; repeat-ability, 115–116; understand-ability, 116
Online course: advantages of, 12–13; facilitating, 159–160
Online learning, 7–10: advantages of, 12–13; course content characteristics, 17; course design/development vs. course delivery/facilitation, 18–19; course documentation, 21–22; course selection, 20–22; environment, 13–14; face-to-face learning vs., 16–20; faculty member’s role, 17–18; first-time online instructors, 23–28; future updates, current preparation for, 19–20; learner’s role, 16–17; pace, 10; place, 9; time, 9; two-minute test, 14; visual cues, lack of, 16

P
Palloff, R., 18, 160
Pause-ability, 115, 116, 118–119, 168; defined, 17
Peer review, 137–140
Pintrich, P. R., 71
Points: balancing effort and, 25; earned, 85–86
Pomales-Garcia, C., 118, 125
Pratt, K., 18, 125, 160
Presentation length, 118–119
Presentation of information, 119
Prior learning, organization of, 112–114
Prioritizing, 89–105; action items, 180–182; course development, 90–92; faculty anxiety, reducing, 96–97; faculty experiences with, 102; learner anxiety, reducing, 92–93; learner needs, 93–95; priorities blueprint, selecting, 98–102; teaching for the long term, 102–105

Q
Quizzes, 84–85

R
Rather, J., 71
Reflection, 139–140
Reiser, R. A., 116
Repeat-ability, 115–116, 118–119, 168; defined, 17
Respondus StudyMate, 107
Revisions, list of, 154
Rubrics, 121

S
Schedule of due dates, 140
Sebrechts, M., 78
Self-assessments, 81–82; format, 81; retesting/practice, 81
Shah, P., 118
SMART acronym, 71
Smith, R., 2, 30, 56, 89, 90, 108, 136
SoftChalk Lesson Builder, 107, 136
Soloman, B. A., 108, 110, 183
Split-attention effect, 118
Steen, R., 36, 37, 45
Summary statement, 131
Sweller, J., 107, 112, 114, 116, 118
Systematic change, defined, 10

T
Teaching: for the long term, 102–105; online, 25–27; style, 111–112
Technology, selecting based on pedagogy, 11
Text-based content: chunking for, 129–131
Tobias, S., 111
Topic names, translating chapter numbers into, 31–34
Transition statement, 131
Turning in assignments: consistency in, 146–147
Two-minute test, 14

U
Undergraduate teaching, principles of, 4–5
Understand-ability, 116; defined, 17

V
Visual cues, lack of, 16

W
Walvoord, B., 56
Weimer, M., 10, 15, 160
Wittrock, M. C., 71
Wlodkowski, R. J., 119
Wu, H. K., 118