Contents

Preface and Acknowledgments ix

Part I: Introduction 1

Chapter 1 Strangers More than Ever: Modern Drama and Alternative Modernities 3

Part II: United Kingdom and Ireland 47

Chapter 2 Jewish Oedipus, Jewish Ethics: Harold Pinter and Postmodern Philosophy 49
Chapter 3 Tom Stoppard and the Limits of Empiricism 92
Chapter 4 Caryl Churchill, Monetarism, and the Feminist Dilemma 119
Chapter 5 “Can’t Buy Me Love”: Socialism, Working Class Sensibilities, and Modern British Drama 139
Chapter 6 Between Past and Present: Brian Friel’s “Symbolic Middle Ground” 186

Part III: United States 205

Chapter 7 “Participate, I suppose”: Edward Albee and the Specter of Death 207
Chapter 8 “Ask a Criminal”: White Postmodern Manhood in David Mamet and Sam Shepard 225
Chapter 9 Modern Drama, Modern Feminism, and Postmodern Motherhood 254
Contents

Chapter 10 History, Reinvention, and Dialectics: African American Drama and August Wilson 279
Chapter 11 Tony Kushner’s Angels in America: Postmodern Ethics in the Age of Reagan 301

Part IV: Western and Eastern Europe 319
Chapter 12 Post-War, Cold War, and Post-Cold War: Marxism, Post-Totalitarianism, and European Drama in the Postmodern Era 321
Chapter 13 Eastern Europe, Totalitarianism, and the Wooden Words 353

Part V: Postcolonial Drama 387
Chapter 14 The Fragmentation of the Self in Postcolonial Drama 389
Chapter 15 Africa: Wole Soyinka, Athol Fugard, and Christina Ama Ata Aidoo 401
Chapter 16 Central and South America: Carlos Fuentes and Derek Walcott 417
Chapter 17 Asia and the Middle East: Yukio Mishima, Gao Xingjian, Girish Karnad, Hanoch Levin, and SaaDallah Wannous 429
Chapter 18 Canada: Ann-Marie MacDonald and Judith Thompson 449

Part VI: Nihilism at the Door 459
Chapter 19 Crisis of Values and Loss of Center in the Plays of Martin McDonagh and Sarah Kane 461
Chapter 20 Blasted, The Lieutenant of Inishmore, and Phaedra’s Love 477
Chapter 21 Pushing More Boundaries: Children and Desire 493

Notes 500
Index 567