Contents

Preface xv

1  A personal reflection on suicide-related behaviour 1
   Experiencing suicide – a shattered innocence 2
   Summary 9

2  Contemporary issues in suicide-related behaviour 11
   Suicide-related behaviour – the ultimate contradiction 11
   Ethical issues in suicide-related behaviour 15
   Rational suicide 19
   Euthanasia 21
   Legal and religious issues 24
   Attitudes to suicide-related behaviour 25
   Attitudes of ‘others’ to suicidal behaviour 28
   Competency in interpersonal skills 29
   Summary 31

3  Clarifying the terminology 33
   The problem with too many different terms 33
   Suicide intent 42
   Lethality of method 44
   Ambivalence 46
   Risk-taking behaviour 47
   The concept of suicide-related behaviour 49
   Death-orientated suicide-related behaviour 51
   Life-orientated suicide-related behaviour 51
   Summary 52

4  The concept of suicide-related behaviour 53
   What is suicide-related behaviour? 53
   Understanding suicide-related ideation 57
   Understanding attempted suicide 62
   Understanding suicide 65
   Understanding self-harm 68
   Repetitive self-harm 74
   Summary 76
The descent into crisis 79
Why suicide-related behaviour? 79
What are stressors? 82
Theoretical perspectives on stressors 84
(a) The biological perspective 84
(b) The psychological perspective 86
(c) The psychoanalytical perspective 87
(d) The psychodynamic developmental perspective 89
(e) The cognitive perspective 91
(f) The situational or stressful life events perspective 92
(g) The social integration perspective 101
(h) The mental ill-health perspective 103
Crisis 107
Summary of stressors leading to suicide-related behaviour 109

Responding to crisis 111
A person’s response to crisis 111
The biological response to stressors 112
Coping abilities as buffers against stressors 113
Cognitive and emotional responses as buffers against stressors 114
Social support as a buffer against stressors 115
Positive attitude as a buffer against stressors 116
Individual differences as buffers against stressors 117
The person’s behavioural response to crisis 118
Help seeking behaviour – contact with the caring services 121
Stressor resolved 124
Stressor unresolved – crisis 124
Summary 126

Caring responses to suicide-related behaviour 127
The case for a caring response 128
Personal qualities of the practitioner 130
(a) Self-awareness 131
(b) Confidentiality 132
(c) Unconditional positive regard 133
(d) Congruence 134
(e) Empathy 134
Contents

The skills required in the therapeutic relationship 135

(a) Non-verbal cues as a means of communicating 136
(b) Verbal responses in the therapeutic relationship 138
(c) Paraphrasing in the therapeutic relationship 138
(d) Reflection in the therapeutic relationship 141
(e) Questions in the therapeutic relationship 142
(f) Silence in the therapeutic relationship 143

An example of a caring response 144
Summary 153

8 Therapeutic responses to suicide-related behaviour 155

A medical response – medications 156
A therapeutic response – additional notes 159
A therapeutic response – the assessment 159

(a) Set induction 161
(b) Assess events leading up to admission 162
(c) Assess personal history 163
(d) The care plan 164

A therapeutic response – problem management 165
A therapeutic response – challenging negative cognitions 168

(a) The initial assessment 171
(b) Making the A – C link 171
(c) Making the B – C link 172

A caring and therapeutic response to self-harm 174
Summary 177

References 179
Index 205