Index

Note: Page numbers in italics refer to Figures; those in bold to Tables

Angelus MTA (AMTA)
antibacterial activity, 293
biocompatibility properties cell culture studies, 293–4
intraosseous implantation, 294
subcutaneous implantation, 294
chemical composition, 291
clinical applications, 295
in vivo investigations, 294
physical properties, 292–3
apexification
calcium hydroxide, 130, 157
definition, 119
MTA obturation
cementogenesis and odontogenesis, 223 compaction, 224
length determination, 223
RMGI cement, 224
root-end closure, 222
tissues, 223
necrotic pulps and open apices
calcium hydroxide, 119–21
pulpal necrosis, 118
therapy, calcium hydroxide apical barrier formation, 120, 120
apical closure, 120
drawback, 121
hard tissue bridge formation, 119
periapical lesions, 121 apical foramen pathway dentin and cementum apposition, 2–3, 3 newly erupted teeth, large root canals, 2, 2 periapical tissue destruction, 3, 3 single-rooted and multi-rooted teeth, 3 apical root perforations causes and indicators, 196, 196
cleaning and shaping, 8, 196, 196–7
prognosis, 197
treatment, 197
Auger technique, 232, 233
Aureoseal MTA, 320
autotransplantation, 144–5
Bioaggregate (BA)
antibacterial activity, 296–7
chemical composition, 295
physical properties, 296

Edited by Mahmoud Torabinejad.
© 2014 John Wiley & Sons, Inc. Published 2014 by John Wiley & Sons, Inc.
Biodentine (BD)
  biocompatibility and clinical applications, 297–8
  chemical composition, 297
  physical properties, 297
Biopure® MTAD® antibacterial root cleanser, 57 calcium enriched mixture (CEM)

  antibacterial activities, 301
  biocompatibility
    cell culture studies, 301–2
    intraosseous implantation, 302
    skin test and subcutaneous implantation, 302
  chemical composition, 299–300
  clinical investigations, 303–4
  in vivo investigations, 302
  physical properties, 300
  sealing ability, 301

calcium hydroxide (CH)
  apexification therapy, outcomes
    apical barrier formation, 120, 120
    apical closure, 120
    drawback, 121
    hard tissue bridge formation, 119
    MTA apical plug, 130
    periradicular inflammation, 121 pulp revitalization procedures, 157
  apical closure procedure, 114–15
  direct pulp capping
    definition, 94
    drawbacks, 76
    hard tissue formation, 75
    mandibular second molar, 76, 77
    pH value, 75–6
    tissue response, 76, 76
    and MTA, comparison
    direct pulp capping, 85
    histological results, 84, 85

calcium silicate (CS)
  based cements
    Angelus MTA, 291–5
    Bioaggregate (BA), 295–7
    Biodentine (BD), 297–8
    Calcium Enriched Mixture, 299–304
    Capasio, 316–17
    Ceramicrete-D, 317–18
    chemical composition and physical properties, 319
    Cimento Endodontico Rapido (CER), 308–9
    Endocem, 320
    Endo-CPM, 306–8
    Endosequence, 309–11
    fluoride-doped MTA Cement, 315–16
    Generex A, 317
    iRoot, 298–9
    light-cured MTA, 318–19
    MTA Bio, 313–15
    MTA Fillapex, 304–6
    MTA Plus, 312
    MTA Sealer (MTAS), 315
    nano-modified MTA (NMTA), 318
    Ortho MTA, 313
    Portland cement (PC), 285–90
    Proroot Endo Sealer, 311–12
    based sealers, 237–8 hydrate, apatite-like precipitates, 31, 31
    Capasio, 316–17
    CEM see calcium enriched mixture (CEM)
    CER see cimento endodontico rapido (CER)
    Ceramicrete-D, 317–18
    CH see calcium hydroxide (CH) chemical properties
    composition
      bismuth oxide and gypsum, 20–21
      Portland cement, 19–20
      powder morphology, 21, 22 trace elements and compounds, 23
    description, 17–18
    gray and tooth-colored ProRoot MTA, 18, 18, 19 reaction zones
apatite-like precipitates, calcium silicate hydrate, 31, 31 bioactive nature, 28–29 MTA-dentin interface, 29, 29 storage, phosphate buffered saline solution, 30, 30 setting reactions see setting reactions
cimento endodontico rapido (CER)
biocompatibility, 308–9
chemical composition, 308
physical properties, 308
coronal root perforations causes, indicators and prevention, 191–2, 192
cleaning and shaping, 9, 9, 191–2, 192
prognosis, 192
treatment, 192, 192
CS see calcium silicate (CS)
dental caries
bacteria, 5, 6
inflammatory response, carious exposure, 6, 6 microorganisms, role bacterial infection, 6 pulpal and periapical lesions, 7, 7 dental operating microscope (DOM), 178, 219
dentinal tubules
diameters, 4
odontoblastic processes, 5, 5
DOM see dental operating microscope (DOM)

Endocem
biocompatibility, 320
chemical composition and physical properties, 320

Endo-CPM
antibacterial activity, 307
biocompatibility
cell culture studies, 307
subcutaneous implantation, 307

chemical composition, 307
in vivo investigations, 308
physical properties, 307
sealing ability, 307

Endosequence
antibacterial activities, 310
BC Sealer
biocompatibility, 311
chemical composition, 311
physical properties, 311
biocompatibility, 310
chemical composition, 309
physical properties, 309
sealing ability, 310

fluoride-doped MTA (FMTA)
chemical composition, 315–16
physical properties, 316

Generex A
biocompatibility, 317
chemical composition and physical properties, 317

hardness, MTA, 59–60
HERS see Hertwig’s epithelial root sheath (HERS) Hertwig’s epithelial root sheath (HERS), 116, 117

immature permanent teeth pulpotomy AAPD guidelines, 89
crown fractures/cariously exposed teeth, 88
hemostasis, 90
MTA full pulpotomy, 90, 91
partial, 89, 89, 90
round diamond bur, 90

immature teeth
diagnosis
blood flow measurement, 113, 113 buccal-lingual dimension, root canal, 113–14 immature teeth (cont’d)
  permanent teeth, incomplete root development, 112, 112
  pulp testing, children, 112 pulp vitality disruption, 111 reversible pulpitis, 113
infection control
  antibiotics, 118
  debridement, 116
  HERS, 116, 117
  long-term CH therapy, 117–18
  open apex and thin dentin walls, 116, 116
  root length determination, 116, 117
  treatment
    apex formation categories, 115 apical diameter, canal, 114
    CH, 114–15
internal repair, techniques follow-up evaluation, 201–2, 202 follow-up therapy, 200–201 MTA delivery, 200, 200
  prognosis, 202
  site preparation, 199–200, 200
iRoot
  biocompatibility, 299
  chemical composition, 298
  physical properties, 298–9 lateral/accessory canal, 4, 4 lateral root perforations causes and indicators, 194, 194
  cleaning and shaping, 9, 9, 194–5
  mid-root perforation, treatment, 194–5
  prognosis, 195
Lawaty technique
  apex locator, 230
  canals preparation, 229
  coronal portion, 231
  K-files, 229–230
  mixed MTA, 229
  MTA canal filled orifices, 230, 231, 231
  particle size, WMTA, 229
Lee MTA pellet forming block apicoectomy procedure, 268, 270, 271, 272 delivery devices, 268, 269 intentional replantation, 268, 270
  mixing procedure, 267, 268
light-cured MTA
  biocompatibility, 319
  chemical composition and physical properties, 318–19
microhardness, 59–61
mineral trioxide aggregate (MTA) see also non-vital pulp therapy
  vs. calcium hydroxide
    direct pulp capping, 85
    histological results, 84, 85
  cytotoxicity, 13
  drawbacks, 14
  properties
    chemical see chemical properties physical see physical properties physiochemical see physiochemical
    properties
  pulp capping and pulpotomy gene products, 83
      in vitro, 80
      in vivo, 82, 82
    interleukin-1 beta, 83
    MDPC-23-cells, 80
    progenitor cells, 80
    tenascin and fibronectin, 83 up-regulated cytokines, 83 setting time, 13–14
  versions, 38
MTA see mineral trioxide aggregate
  (MTA)
MTA Bio
  biocompatibility
    cell culture studies, 314
    subcutaneous implantation, 315
  chemical composition, 313–14
  physical properties, 314
MTA Fillapex
antibacterial activities, 305
biocompatibility
  cell culture studies, 306
  subcutaneous implantation, 306
chemical composition, 304
physical properties, 304–5
MTA plus
chemical composition, 312
physical properties, 312
MTA Sealer (MTAS), 315
nano-modified MTA (NMTA), 318
necrotic pulps and open apices
  apexification
    calcium hydroxide, 119–21
    pulpal necrosis, 118
immature teeth
  diagnosis, 111–14
  infection control, 116–18
  treatment, 114–15
non-vital pulp therapy see non-vital pulp therapy nonvital-infected teeth, revitalization animals
  apical periodontitis, 145, 150 biomechanical instrumentation, 146, 147 cementoblasts, 148
  cementum-and bone-like tissue, 148 debridement and disinfection effect, 145
dentin-like tissue, root canal end, 145, 146 dog teeth, 148–50, 149
ingrowth of bone, 151, 151 in-growth, tissue, 148
periapical inflammation, 146 radiographic and histological evaluation, 148
reparative dentin, 147
root development and periapical healing, 149
humans
  apical abscess, 152, 156 avulsed central incisor, 157–8 broken dental tubercles, 153 calcium hydroxide apexification, 157 continued hard tissue deposition, 158
  continued maturation, immature mandibular premolar, 152 infected pulps and periapical radiolucencies, premolars, 157 irreversible pulpitis and apical periodontitis, 152, 153
  mandibular premolar, chronic apical abscess, 156
  necrotic immature lower premolar, 153, 155 necrotic permanent maxillary incisor, sinus tract, 154 necrotic pulps and apical
    periodontitis, 154–5
  nonvital pulp and chronic periodontitis, 156
  periapical periodontitis, 154 pulp tissue regeneration, PRP, 158, 159 root development and dentinal wall thickening, 155
  traumatized immature central incisors, 158
non-vital pulp therapy
MTA apical plug
  and CH apexification, 130 components, 122
  follow-up, 127–8
  hard tissue formation, 123
  non-vital permanent maxillary
    incisors, 126
  outcome studies, 129
  periradicular healing, 123 periradicular radiolucencies, 126
  pulpal necrosis, 128, 128
technical placement, 124, 125 non-vital pulp therapy (cont’d) root-end closure, apical barriers calcified tissue matrix formation, 122 dentin apical plugs, 122 repeated visits, 121–2
obturation, dental anomalies, 225, 226, 227

PDL see periodontal ligament (PDL) regeneration
periodontal ligament (PDL) regeneration, 261, 261 periradicular lesions, inflammatory process, 11–12, 12
physical properties
color and aesthetics, 61–2 microhardness, 59–61
pH
alkalinity, calcium hydroxide, 40 cement-based materials, 40, 40 changes, Brazilian MTA product, 39, 39
GMTA and WMTA, 38, 38
immediate pH, WMTA, 39, 39
physicochemical properties, 62–6
radiopacity, 46–9
setting expansion
GMTA and WMTA, 45, 45
water-to-powder ratios, 45, 45 solubility see solubility strength types
compressive, 49–54
flexural, 54–5
push-out, 56
shear, 55–6
shear bond, 56–7
physicochemical properties
heat transfer, rot surface, 64
MTA-dentin cross-section, tooth furcation, 62, 63
push-out bond strength, 64, 65 self-sealing property, MTA, 63 semi-quantitative elemental
composition, 62, 62
temperature and humidity, condensation obturation technique, 66
physiochemical properties advantages, direct pulp capping, 78 apatite formation, 79
bioactivity, 77
biocompatibility, 80
composition, 77
gray (GMTA) and white (WMTA), 78
interstitial layer formation, 80 pulp exposure, 78, 79 tertiary dentin formation, 78, 79
platelet-rich plasma (PRP)
description, 164
osteogenesis in bone grafts, 165 polymerization, 167
preparation, 164
pulp regeneration, 165
soft tissue healing, 165 treated mucosal wounds, 165
Portland cement (PC)
antibacterial activity, 287–8
biocompatibility
  cell culture studies, 288
  subcutaneous implantation, 288–9
chemical composition, 285–6
clinical applications, 289
component, MTA, 20
in vivo investigations, 289
limitations, 289–90
manufacture, 20
origin, 19
physical properties, 286–7
radiopacity, 46, 47
sealing ability, 288
solubility values, 43, 44 strength, 51, 52, 53, 56, 57
post space perforation
elapsed time, 199
prognosis, 199
root perforations, 10, 10
treatment, 197
primary teeth pulpotomy hemorrhage control, 85–6
hemostasis, 86
MTA, 86–8
pharmacotherapeutic agents, 86
ProRoot Endo Sealer
chemical composition, 311–12
physical properties, 312
PRP see platelet-rich plasma (PRP) pulp and periradicular pathways apical foramen, 2–3
dentinal tubules, 4–5, 5
inflammatory process, lesions, 11–12 lateral canals, 4, 4 pathological and iatrogenic pathways
dental caries, 5–7
root perforations, 7–11
sealing materials, root canal system and periodontium, 13–15 pulp capping
direct, calcium hydroxide
definition, 94
drawbacks, 76
hard tissue formation, 75
mandibular second molar, 76, 77
pH value, 75, 76
tissue response, 76, 76
reversible pulpitis
cold testing response, 94, 95 MTA, treatment recommendations, 94–6 one-visit capping procedure, 95, 96
pulp chamber perforations etiologies, 189, 189
furcation repairs, 181, 190, 191 lateral surface repairs, 190 prevention, 189
recognition and treatment, 189, 189–90 pulpotomy
definition, 85
MTA
immature permanent teeth, 88–90
primary teeth, 86–8
symptomatic permanent teeth, 90–94
primary teeth
hemorrhage control, 85–6
hemostasis, 86
MTA, 86–8
pharmacotherapeutic agents, 86
radiopacity
AH Plus and MTA Fillapex, 46, 46
dental sealants, 46, 46
Portland cement, 46, 47
powder/liquid ratio, 48, 49 WMTA and GMTA, 46
resin modified glass ionomer (RMGI) cements, 97–8
revitalization
after replantation and autotransplantation, 143–5 apexitation procedures, 142 clinical and radiographic follow-up, 170 first appointment, 168
nonvital-infected teeth
animals, 145–52
humans, 152–60
pulpal necrosis, 142
second appointment, 168–70
stem cells, canal tissue generation collagen scaffolds and growth factors, 164–8
BMMSCs, 160
DPSCs and SCAP, 160–163
traumatic luxation/avulsion injuries, 142 root canal obturation, MTA apexitation see apexitation characteristics/properties action mechanisms, 210, 210 fracture resistance, 212–13 hydration products and pH, 211–12
interstitial layer formation, 212
particle size, 211
sealing ability and setting expansion, 213 root canal obturation, MTA (cont’d)

conventional obturation
- apical root resorption, 215, 216 dog models, 215, 215
- inter-radicular biofilms, 215
- periradicular pathosis, 214, 214
- uncontrolled hemorrhage, 215 dental anomalies, 225, 226, 227
drawbacks, 234, 234–5
gutta-percha (GP), 208–9

perforation repair
- description, 219
- DOM, 219
- entire canal obturation, 220–221, 223
Portland cement, 209
prior to surgery, 219, 220–222 restorative considerations, 233–4 retreatment
- bacteria, refractory/contaminated cases, 216
- CH intracanal medication, 216
- healing, 218, 218
- long-standing colonization, 217
sealers see sealers, MTA root canal obturation techniques

- Auger technique, 232, 233
- Lawaty technique, 229–31
- standard compaction technique, 226–9 root canal system and periodontium sealing materials, 13–15

root-end filling materials, MTA advantages, 258–9, 259
amalgam, 254, 255
antibacterial effect, 265
bioactivity
- cell proliferation, 264
- hard tissue formation, 263
clinical outcomes, 268, 273, 274 cytotoxicity and biocompatibility
- in vitro cell culture studies, 260
- PDL regeneration, 261, 261
- regenerated cementum, 262, 263

Super EBA and amalgam groups, 261, 262
disadvantages, 259, 259
gray vs. white MTA, 257
MTA-like cements, types, 257
purpose, 252–3, 253
requirements, 258, 258
resin-based materials
- disadvantages, 256
- Retroplast and Geristore, 256
and retroreparation
- carrier-and syringe-type devices, 266 cavity preparation, 265–6
Lee MTA pellet forming block, 266–8
mixing procedure, 266
MTA, placement, 266
sealability
- hydroxyapatite layer, formation, 265
- SuperEBA, 264–5
ZOE-based materials
- IRM, 255
physical properties, 254–5
- SuperEBA, 255–6, 256
root perforation repair
access preparation
- depth, bur penetration, 8, 8
- lateral surface/furcation perforations, 7–8, 8
amalgam, 179, 179, 180
biologic repair, 180
cementum formation, 180–181, 181
cleaning and shaping
- apical perforations, 8, 196, 196–7 coronal root perforations, 9, 9, 191–2, 192
lateral perforations, 9, 9, 194–5 defects, types
- access preparation, 182, 183, 184
- resorption (internal/external), 184–6, 186 strip perforations, 184, 184, 185 furcation perforations, 180–181, 181 hydroxyapatite crystals, 179–80, 182
internal repair, techniques, 199–202, 200 multi-rooted teeth, location, 187, 188
post space perforation, 10, 10, 197–9
pulp chamber perforations, 189, 189–90 single-rooted teeth, location, 187, 188 size, 187
vertical fracture etiologic factor, 10
frank root fracture, 10, 11

sealers, MTA root canal obturation calcium hydroxides, 236 calcium silicate-based sealers, 237–8 divisions, 236
epoxy resin-based, 236
glass ionomers, 236
ideal sealer requirements, 235 monoblock sealer systems, 237 silicone-based sealers, 237 zinc oxide–eugenols, 236

setting reactions
additives and accelerants, 26–7 cubic and needle-like particles, 25, 25 environmental interaction, 27–8 ettringite, 24
hydration reactions, 23–4 maturation, 26
time, 26
tricalcium silicate and diicalcium silicate, 23 water/moisture, effect of, 27

solubility
0.2% and 2.0% sodium zeolite

MTA, 45
calcium ions release, MTA, 40–41, 45
description, 40
partial solubility, 40
water-to-powder ratio, 40, 42 weight loss, root sealant materials, 42, 43 white Portland cement, 43, 44
WMTA

composition of modifications, 43, 44 daily and cumulative percent
solubility, 42, 43
percent solubility and porosity, 42, 42

standard compaction technique, MTA root canal obturation endodontic pluggers, 228 excess moisture/blood, 229 hand pluggers, 228
master apical file (MAF), 227–8 smear layer, 226, 227

stem cells, canal tissue generation
collagen scaffolds and growth factors bilateral/equilateral junctions, 167 blood, 164
growth factors, 164
periodontal-like and bone tissues, 165, 166
PRF, 165, 167
PRP, 164–5
slow polymerization, PRF, 167

DPSCs and SCAP
healthy pulp, apical region, 162 hypothetical pulp regeneration, 162, 163 in-growth, periodontal tissue, 162, 163 markers, 162
self-renewal, 161

strength types
BioAggregate cements, 58
Biopure® MTAD® antibacterial root cleanser, 57

compressive
additives to WMTA, 50, 51
calculation, 49
commercial and experimental products, 49, 50
experimental Portland cement and
MTA, 51, 52
GMTA and WMTA, 50, 51, 52
mixing and placement techniques, 53, 53 strength types (cont’d)
modified MTA formulations, 53, 53 ProRoot MTA and MTA Angelus, 54, 54 sodium fluorosilicate on Portland cement, 52, 53
flexural
porosity of materials, 55, 55
three-point, 54–5, 55
ProRoot WMTA, 58
push-out
bond strength measurement, ProRoot MTA, 57 function of pH, 58, 59
Glyde File Prep values, 56
MTA and BioAggregate products, 59 values, SuperEBA, 56
WMTA, 58, 59
shear, 55–6
shear bond
bonding agents and resin-based composite, 56, 56 unmodified Portland cement, 56–7 symptomatic permanent teeth pulpotomy hemostasis, profuse hemorrhaging, 92
MTA
full pulpotomy, 93, 93
partial pulpotomy, 91, 92 partial MTA pulpotomy, 91, 92
sodium hypochlorite (SH), 91
temporary seal, 93
vital pulp therapy
advantages, 74
asymptomatic human tooth, carious lesion, 72, 72 bacterial contamination, exposed pulp tissue, 73 dentin bridging, 73
description, 72
disadvantages, 98–9
MTA
vs. calcium hydroxide, 83–5 mode of action, 80–83
physiochemical properties, 77–80
odontoblasts, 73
pulp capping see pulp capping pulpotomy see pulpotomy responses, capping materials, 74–5 symptomatic human tooth, penetration of bacteria, 72, 72
treatment
caries removal, 96–7
hemorrhaging control, 97
MTA placement, 97
RMGI cements, 97–8
sodium hypochlorite (SH)
disinfection, 97