About the Book 1

Reasons to Read the Book 1
Unique Approaches of the Book 4
  Paying balanced attention to all learners 4
  Emphasizing language and literacy supporting strategies 4
  Encouraging thinking, questions, and explorations 4
  Situating language and literacy development in students’ cognitive and social development 5
Teaching across ages 6
Treating language and literacy as an interrelated process 6
Focusing on academic language and academic literacy 7
Linking language and literacy development to identity and motivation 8
Valuing different language acquisition experiences 8
Providing various linguistic experiences 9
Note on developmental stages 9

Part I  Introduction 13

1 Working with Diverse Students: Some Important Issues 15
  Prereading Questions and Activities 15
  Topics to Be Addressed in This Chapter 15
  Learning Objectives 16
  Importance of Teacher Knowledge on Language and Literacy 16
    Interpreting assessment results from specialist reports 17
Detailed Contents

Identifying students’ linguistic needs 17
Meeting teacher education professional standards 18
Critical Discourse Analysis Conceptual Framework 19
Transformative Pedagogy 20
Evolving Definition of Literacy 24
Reconceptualization of the Labels for Diverse Students 26
Second language learners vs new language learners 27
Bilingual vs multilingual 28
Disorder vs difficulty; symptoms vs characteristics 28
Delay vs deviant 29
People-first language 29

2 Complex Factors That Influence Language Acquisition and
Literacy Development 33
Prereading Questions and Activities 33
Topics to Be Addressed in This Chapter 34
Learning Objectives 35
Language As a Genetically Predispositioned Human Universal 36
Pidgin 37
Creole 38
Deaf children of hearing parents 38
Nicaraguan Sign Language 38
Language acquisition trajectories of children with disabilities 39
Biological Factors 39
Human brain: the neural underpinnings of language acquisition 39
Sensitive period of language acquisition 41
Hereditity and individual differences 43
Gender differences 44
Ecological Factors That Influence Language and Literacy Development 46
Parental cultural childrearing beliefs and practices 46
Parental socioeconomic status and education levels 47
Parental input frequency 48
Extended family and sibling support 48
Language use in sociocultural context 49
Language Divergence Factors 50
Language particulars 50
Orthographic differences 50
Modality Factors 52
Spoken language vs signed language 52
Spoken language vs reading and writing 53
Conventional print vs digital print 53
Motivation and Identity Factors 54

Topics to Be Addressed in This Chapter
Learning Objectives
Cognitive Attributes of Acquiring More Than One L1
Complex Issues about Acquiring More Than One L1
  The cutoff age of multilingual L1 acquisition and Ln learning
  Input quantity and quality
  Multilingual acquisition settings differences
  Different multilingual effects on language acquisition
  Misconceptions about multilingualism
  Potential differences between different types of multilingual L1 acquisition
  One system or separate systems
  Cross-linguistic interaction
  Rate of acquisition
  Language and thought
  Language-specific issues
Developing Essential Multilingual Linguistic Abilities
  Multilingual phonological development
  Multilingual lexical-semantic development
  Multilingual morphosyntactic development
  Multilingual pragmatic development
  Metalinguistic development
Developing Emergent Multilingual Literacies
  Emergent knowledge of print conventions in different languages
  Emergent knowledge of multilingual writing
  Cross-language interaction on emergent literacy knowledge
  Emergent multilingual digital literacy
  Emergent critical literacy
Supporting Emergent Multilingual and Multiliteracy Development in Early Childhood
  Book reading
